Viking saga proposed for rocky shores . . .

Selectmen Rocco F. Laugelle pushed for the fee although he stressed that he didn't want to discourage companies to film in town.

"I'm so proud to have people come to town. As long as they don't bother the residents too much," he said. "As far as money is concerned, I'm so proud to have them come into this town that I'm not too concerned about money."

The budget for the film is $300,000, Donadio said.

He explained that Lara Classics, Inc. is a non-profit educational corporation. The planned film — about an Irish slave named Kilian, who escapes from a Viking ship and befriends Native American traders — is for general release and is not an educational film for showing in schools.

Donadio explained the filming would require 15 crew members, three actors, and three production vehicles at the site. He asked for permission for the crew members to park their cars at the Sandy Beach parking lot. Lara Classics would like to film between July 26 and Sept. 10 and anticipates the Cohasset filming would take one day.

Lara Classics has produced "Sorceress" and "The Imported Bridegroom" which both received excellent reviews, Donadio said.

The script for the upcoming film is based on Icelandic sagas, "Erik Red's Saga" and "The Greenland Saga," and historical documentation of the Viking voyages to North America and their encounters with Native Americans, he said.

The story surrounds Kilian, a 10th century Irish slave who is on a Viking ship which is lost in a storm and ends up on the New England coast. Kilian escapes from his Viking captors and is befriended by the Indians.

"It's his trials and tribulations about the situation he's in and even includes a love story," Donadio said.

Lara Classics is shooting at other locations across the state, he said.

Sandy Beach wedding in the works

The Sandy Beach will be the site of a wedding July 24.

The wedding ceremony is planned for 7 p.m. and will take about 30 minutes, the bride Denise Chicoine of Hyde Park said.

The small wedding would involve the couple, two witnesses, justice of the peace and a photographer, she said.

In keeping with a new procedure for Sandy Beach requests, selectmen, the Sandy Beach Association, and Sandy Beach abutter Mary Hagerty all approved the request.

Chicoine said she and her fiancé were impressed with the beauty of the beach and wanted their ceremony to be held there.

Legal bill approved

Selectmen approved payment of $2,062.50 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services provided to the town for the month of May.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

LITTLE THINGS COUNT

QUESTION: My home is up for sale. Should I be concerned with this problem or is it just the big things that count in making the sale.

ANSWER: The house speaks for itself. Many noticeable, unrepaired damages speak loud and clear that the homeowner has not been taking proper care of his home. The potential buyer will begin to worry about other, bigger items (not seen by the eye) that could have been deteriorating also. Don't kid yourself. A potential buyer will NOT overlook little flaws that you may have learned to live with. It will penalize the value of the home. If you can't find the time — hire someone to do it.

Retiring court officer looks forward to years ahead

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Hingham District Court lost its most ardent optimist this year.

"I think society's improved," James J. Kilcoyne of Scituate said. "It's society's ebb and flow. With each stage there's been growth to a better place."

Kilcoyne, 63, retired recently after serving 19 years as first assistant clerk magistrate at the Hingham court.

A testimonial dinner in Kilcoyne's honor is planned for July 16 at Christo's III in Brockton.

Kilcoyne, who also served on the Scituate Police Department for 21 years, said what he will miss most about his job is helping others.

"I thoroughly enjoyed helping people. The more complex or serious the problem, the more I loved it," he said.

Roberta Balbuzzi, who is head procedures clerk, is couldn't agree more.

"His forte is in helping people. He wouldn't isolate people in terms of who he would help and who he wouldn't help. He would always take time to help anyone," she said.

Kilcoyne's willingness to lend a hand spilled over into his personal life. Balbuzzi said he would frequently host study sessions at his home for area police officers taking promotional exams, or for those who wanted to learn the law.

Kilcoyne's wife Dorothy said her husband conducted numerous classes over the years in the den.

"I'd keep the children quiet and serve the coffee and doughnuts," she said.

As much as he enjoys work at the courthouse, Kilcoyne said it's time to retire.

"When you get to a certain age you reflect on what is important," he said. "All that is really important is God, a good wife and children, food on the table, shelter and health."

Kilcoyne has already been busy spending time with his five grandchildren.

"If you work right up until the closing door, you won't have the opportunity to visit your grandchildren."

Kilcoyne, nicknamed the "Cardinal" during his police days because he never revealed what was confessed to him, plans to keep busy in retirement.

"I want to learn more Spanish," Kilcoyne said. "And research our name," he said while holding a huge volume entitled The Great Families of Ireland.

"I'll renovate the house and do the things I've never had the opportunity to finish," he said.

During his tenure with the Scituate Police, there were several years were he worked 60 hour weeks regularly, he said.

"I'd work the midnight to eight shift, and then go to court as court prosecutor for the day," he said.

Despite the long hours, Kilcoyne enjoyed the work.

"I liked all phases of police work. It was a challenging time in my life," he said.

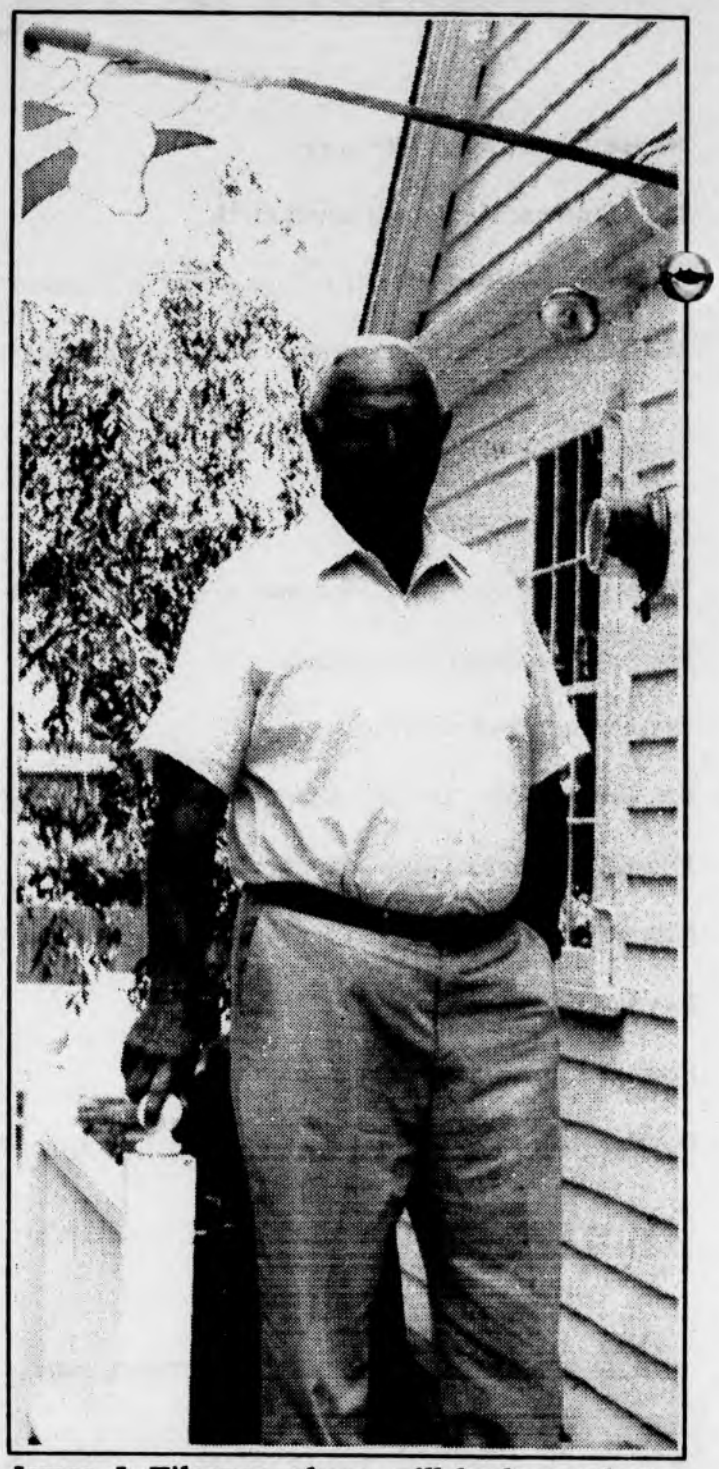
He added that he saw more lawlessness in the sixties, than he sees now.

"I lived through the sixties. It was probably the most difficult time in my professional life," he said. "The pubic lost respect for police officers. It was a very difficult situation, where society expected us to perform a service but resented that we performed it."

He said lessons have been learned from the era.

"There was a learning process on both sides of the aisle and it has made us a better country."

For information about the testimonial dinner for Kilcoyne, please call Joseph A. Ligotti, clerk-magistrate at the Hingham Court, 749-7000.



James J. Kilcoyne, above, will be honored at a testimonial dinner July 16 at Christo's II in Brockton for his 19 years as first assistant clerk magistrate at Hingham District Court and 21 years as a sergeant with the Scituate Police Dept. For information, please call the court at 749-7000.

Acting fire chief named . . .

town hiring its own chief.

Cohasset is also taking part in a five-town fire service regionalization study.

Scituate's town administrator Richard Agnew initially approached the town about 18 months ago during the town's search to replace chief Daniel Brock, whose contract was not renewed, about sharing a fire chief. At that time the board felt the fire department faced serious issues and needed to have its own chief. Agnew, who is the appointing authority in Scituate for the fire chief's position, said recently the door is still open to explore the possibility of sharing a fire chief with Cohasset.

When Nadeau leaves his department of 14 career and 14 call firefighters, he'll be moving to a bigger department and a better paying post.

He begins his job as chief of the 65-member Salem, NH fire department July 12. All the firefighters are full-time. Salem has a population of 26,000.

His salary will start at $51,525, said Salem's executive secretary Barry Brenner.

But under a deferred compensation plan available to managment, an additional 14.5 percent of his salary will be deferred. This year, said Brenner, the town will contribute 6.3 percent or $3,246 to the New Hampshire retirement system for Nadeau; the state will contribute $4,044.

Walkway is latest village renaissance . . .

of the Village Renaissance Committee which spearheaded the effort.

The walkway — named for the brook that runs underground below it — was dedicated to residents Phyllis and Donald Leslie. Mrs. Leslie's generous donation gave the project the financial boost it needed, Dormitzer said.

Jim Sandell, an architect, donated his expertise to the project.

Dormitzer also thanked the selectmen, tree & park, highway, and wire departments, and Wayne Simpson, the county engineer, for their help.

Dave Hassan carved and donated the walkway sign, Georgine Butman and her Girl Scout troop planted flowers, and Mark and Zeena Forent contributed half the cost of the "spectacular" cast-iron lamps, Dormitzer said.

The Village Renaissance Committee, a volunteer group, are also the force behind the installation of the town pump and cobblestone plaza by Cohasset Hardware.

NEW PROJECT ON TAP

The next project for the group is possibly removing some maple saplings from town property along Elm Street across from Cohasset Savings Bank.

Dormitzer said exposing the ledge which is hidden by the trees would enhance the area.

At the request of the Village Renaissance Committee, John F. Hartshorne appeared before selectmen Monday to seek approval for removing some of the saplings.

"The purpose is to reveal to public view a rampart of granite ledges that occupy the northern half of this 13,500 square-foot plot," he wrote in a letter to the board.

Hartshorne explained that "granite outcroppings are a unique and distinguishing feature of Cohasset, worthy of enhancement whenever possible."

He said the trees to be removed are "spindly saplings for the most part" and added that not all the trees would be removed "a few of the sturdier specimens would be left standing to add texture to the scene."

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she was willing to look into the project to get an idea of its magnitude including helping with the tagging of trees and getting abutters' input.

The board decided to table the matter until Goedecke returns with her report.

Selectmen table acceptance of bid

Citing irregularities, selectmen tabled action on accepting a bid for storm damage repairs for Jerusalem Rd. and Forest Ave.

The low bidder Tro-Con Corp. of Woburn submitted only two out of the three references requested and did not sign the anti-collusion certificate, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Although Doyon said town counsel said the irregularities were "inconsequential", selectmen tabled acceptance of a bid until they look into the matter.

"When we let out contracts that are not done properly we get in trouble," Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has approved $37,000 in repairs for the site, Doyon said. He said the town could apply to FEMA for additional monies to make up the difference.

Other bids were Iaria Bros. of Hingham, $54,400; Emanuello Excavating Co. of Hingham, $52,080; AGM Contractors, Inc. of Mashpee, $57,570; RDA Construction of Milton, $77,000; and Ernest Minelli, Inc. of Hull, $49,500.

Waste bans in effect, recycling mandatory

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

April 1 two more so-called "waste bans" went into effect. The substances which will no longer be accepted at SEMASS, the town's disposal facility, are glass and yard waste. At the present time there continues to be small quantities of glass and yard waste mixed with the rubbish.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

❑ Zig Pozatek, who is an Assistant Clinical Professor of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at Harvard University, was recently honored at a 25 year recognition ceremony, hosted by President Neil Rudenstine. All faculty members with 25 years of distinguished service who have made significant contributions to the Faculty of Medicine at Harvard Medical School and Harvard Dental School were honored at the ceremony.

❑ Lily Sestito makes the news this week! Lily is known by all for her wonderful singing, and last week she sang the National Anthem for the Pawtucket Red Sox at McCoy Stadium. I know you will believe it when I tell you that the whole stadium ended up singing along with her, that's how enthusiastic she is, and how awesome.

It was reported that all had "goosebumps", and all were so awestruck that they invited Lilly back to sing again in a few weeks. Anyone involved in Little League knows how beautifully she sings, she sang there!! She also sponsors a team (J.J.'S). Pawtucket Red Sox are proud of Lilly, and so are we!!

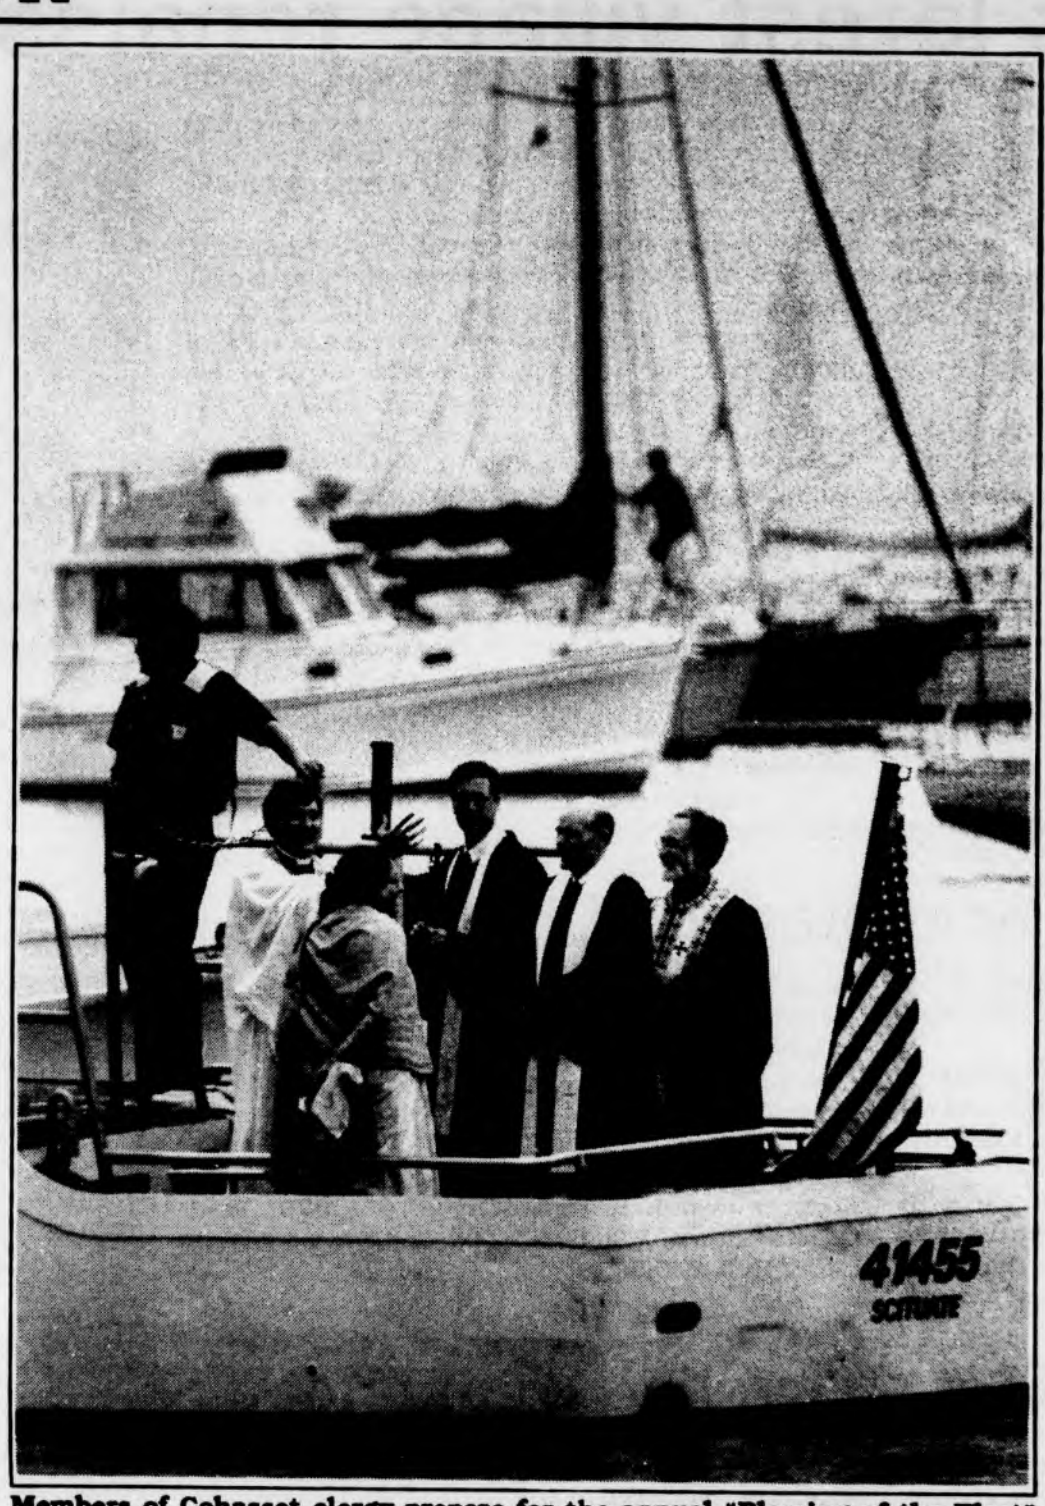
❑ Good luck to Becky Golden, part of the AFS program, who is spending time in Iceland this summer. Send news and pictures, Becky!

❑ We must begin with a special salute to Tara Hettstrom, who won a grand award at Deer Hill graduation last week! Tara received the Academic Athletic Citizenship Award, a real tribute to the kind of gal that she is. Not only did she do well academically and athletically, she is well-loved by her fellow peers and teachers.

Tara is kind, caring,and good and we are all proud of her! Tell her when you see her, okay?

❑ Speaking of applause, Joe and Carl Sestito and Bob Ripley get their share this week. Their recent plantings at South Main Street have gotten rave reviews, what a way to glorify a glorious town!

By the way, Carl is certainly one special man...did you know that he will be 84 this Fall? Incredible, he has more stamina and good humor and talent than most half his age, and, he is surrounded by love and friendship and admiration! Truly a role model, and here's to another 84 years (at least).



Members of Cohasset clergy prepare for the annual "Blessing of the Fleet" Sunday June 20 during the South Shore Art Festival/Harborfest. The three-day festival attracted upwards of 15,000 people. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

❑ Felicia Bartow makes the news this week, does she ever! Felicia was honored at Macalester College Honors Convocation recently and she received awards galore! She got the book awards for outstanding accomplishment in the study of Spanish language or Literature. She was inducted into Sigma Delta P[illegible] (National Hispanic honor society), open to students who have completed at least six courses above the intermediate level with a grade point average of at least 3.0, and who show strong interest in the Hispanic language and culture. Also, Felicia was elected to Phi Beta Kappa which recognizes outstanding scholarship in the liberal arts and sciences. Wow, do we think you are super Felicia.

Felicia is the daughter of Karin and Stephen Bartow.

❑ Celia Mullen, the daughter of Olive and James Mullen, was also honored at Macalester College. She received the Tobin Smith Endowed Prize, established by Chester M. Tobin and Edward M. Smith. Cash awards to students accomplished in the Scottish art of piping and drumming. Another select student and another graduate of CHS!

Be proud ladies and gents we have a fine school system!

❑ Oh my, are those blue eyes flashing! Benjamin Philip Curley has arrived, named after both of his grandfathers. All know Ben Curley, and everyone remembers the great Phil, this young man will be special indeed. Benjamin Philip was born June 21 and weighed in at a hefty 9 lbs. 1 oz. and was 20 1/2 inches long! Of course mom, Lillian, and Dad, James F., are thrilled, to say nothing of Mary Jeannette Murray and Ben and Anne Curley (what is better than being a grandparent) So is Jennifer Elizabeth, Benjamin Philip's older and wiser sister; we know she'll help take special care of her baby brother! Love will certainly surround this special baby! We are happy for all of you, keep us updated.

Joseph Hochkeppel

Joseph E. Hochkeppel, 50, of Cohasset, a self-employed salesman, died June 26 in South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after suffering a heart attack.

Mr. Hochkeppel was a member of the Curtain Call Theater in Braintree and Quincy Center Dinner Theater.

He was born in Paterson, N.J., and attended Fair [illegible]wn schools. He was a graduate of Seton Hall University in New Jersey. He had lived in Cohasset for 13 years.

Mr. Hochkeppel leaves his wife, Mary M. (Hicks) Hochkeppel, Cohasset town reporter for The Patriot Ledger; four sons, Kurt Hochkeppel of Milton, Glen Hochkeppel of Pittsburgh, Pa., Zachary Hochkeppel of Virginia; and a sister, Veronica Leishman of New Jersey.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 30 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 33 Fourth Ave., Needham 02194.

Katherine E. Ford

Katherine E. (Newell) Ford, 94, of Cohasset, a homemaker and a member of the Milton Women's Club, died Saturday at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

Mrs. Ford was born in Boston and lived in Milton before moving to Cohasset.

Wife of the late Dr. Wendell P. Ford, she is survived by a son, Kenneth R. Ford of Dedham; a daughter, Joan M. Delaney of Braintree; 10 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Dr. Wendell N. Ford.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the St. Agathas Church, Milton. Burial will be in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Visiting will be from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Tuesday at the Dolan Funeral Home, 460 Granite Ave., Milton.

❑ Sarah Wood Thompson, daughter of Adrienne and John Thompson, makes the news this week, and with good reason! Sarah was graduated from Tabor Academy May 29, and the University of Vermont is going to be happy to get her as a student in the Fall. Sarah participated in the Mixed Chorus, was a Dormitory Proctor, and played varsity soccer and varsity tennis. Sarah is an 1993 AISCA Tennis double tournament champion (first team to win AISCA doubles for Tabor). On top of all that, she was an honor roll student, so you can see why the University of Vermont is lucky!

We wish you the best during your college career Sarah, keep us informed.

❑ Heidi and Justin Maitland of 299 Forest Ave. are on the special people list this week, they rode in the South Tour in the Great Mass Getaway for multiple sclerosis, June 19 and 20. Heidi has ridden this tour three times, Jason (who is in grade six) his first. They rode on those dates in very hot weather but had a good time and the money they raised for multiple sclerosis made it all worthwhile.

They had an overnight at UMass Dartmouth which was a grand success. Congrats are in order for those two special people.

❑ Hats off to Abbie! Abigail J. Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Adams III. She just graduated from Babson and we know she will do well in whatever she decides to do in the future.

❑ Melissa Nothnagle gets special recognition this week, why you ask? Because she graduated from Brown University, Magna Cum Laude with a BA in Psychology. Taffy and Jeff are proud, you can be sure of that! So are we!!

❑ Congratulations to Sara Corbett who graduated May 16 from Keene State College with a B..S. in Drafting and Design. She is the daughter of Eileen and Paul Corbett.

❑ Things were hopping recently, at the Community center of Cohasset. The gymnasts and coaches, everyone involved in the gymnastic program, gave Coach Ruthann Sargent a wedding shower (an August wedding is planned) . Ruthann was so surprised and thrilled and could not believe that no one "let the cat out of the bag".

You know she thanks you all, isn't it great to have friends? She is a friend to all, a grand person.

❑ Finally, something to mark on your calendar right now! As you know, a physical exam is required for all CHS athletes, here are the dates: Thursday, August 26, football, and Boys' soccer will be Friday, August 27. Football, 1:30 p.m., soccer 9:15 a.m. at CHS. All players are required to take one, this is part of the program, take advantage!! Otherwise you go to your own physician at your expense!

That's the news for the week, please call with yours!

Light and glory

Perhaps no one has better expressed the true meaning of the Fourth of July holiday than John Adams, the lawyer from Braintree who was our second president and the father of our sixth president.

In a July 3, 1776 letter to his wife Abigail, Adams of Weymouth wrote, "I am apt to believe that it will becelebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival.

"It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty.

"It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illumination, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

"You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost us to support and defend these states.

"Yet, through all the gloom, I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means."

We should all pause to reflect upon Adams's eloquent words as we prepare to celebrate this holiday.

However, most of us are unaware that the Declaration of Independence was not signed on July 4, 1776, the date it was proclaimed to the citizens of the 13 colonies.

Actually, the Declaration was signed over a period of several months, and for an understandable reason. Many of the signers had not been present in Philadelphia at the time of its ratification. (The greatest number signed in August, while the last didn't add his name until January, 1777.)

It's also true that although Thomas Jefferson has achieved literary immortality as the author of the Declaration, it was not approved by the Continental Congress after three days of debate exactly as Jefferson had conceived it.

The Declaration underwent no less than 86 separate changes and withstood scores of other proposed amendments, including one which called for "clear and sovereign fishing rights."

The most celebrated deletion (considering that it was written by Jefferson, a slaveholder himself) was a paragraph which condemned slavery and called for its abolition.

This paragraph, which accused King George III of "waging cruel war against human nature itself, violating its most sacred rights of life and liberty in the persons of a distant people who never offended him, and carrying them into slavery in another hemisphere," was removed in order to appease the Southern colonies and hold them in the Union.

Adams was initially opposed to this compromise and declared, "If we give in on this issue, there will be trouble a hundred years hence, and posterity will never forgive us." (As we all know, this astonishing prediction of the Civil War missed by only a few years.)

Finally, here's one of the greatest coincidences in all of history. John Adams and Thomas Jefferson both died July 4, 1826. That was the day the United States celebrated the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Please return memorial flowers

To the Editor:

Memorial Day '93 is now a pleasant memory — for most. Except for my family and me. Let me explain.

The week before the Memorial Day Activities my children, my mother and I worked very hard to plant flowers and weed my father's grave area. My mother (Isabel Salvador), purchased a large pot of geraniums to place at the head of my father's grave. It looked beautiful and it weighed over 80 lbs, needing two people to carry it. To our disgust and outrage it is now gone!!!

My mother stopped by my father's grave on Friday and someone has stolen this great tribute to my Dad. Most people in town knew him and I know he was loved by many. He has only been gone for 16 months.

Whoever took this flower arrangement, please return it! Have a heart. The grief process is hard enough to go through without insensitive and greedy individuals compounding it.

If anyone has any information, you can call Kim Maynard at 383-2707 or the Cohasset Police Department.

Crosswalks needed at St. Anthony's

To the Editor:

There has been considerable discussion recently concerning the crosswalks and the placement of signs in town.

One area, however, which has been ignored is the area around St.Anthony's Church. There are many services at St.Anthony's, especially on Saturday and Sunday, including Masses and weddings. Throughout the week there are funerals, CCD instruction, and other training, as well as charitable collections of food and clothing which often has to be brought from the church to the rectory for temporary storage. I have observed young people waiting to cross S. Main St. until speeding cars have passed.

There should be at least three crosswalks: one from the church to the funeral home; another from the service station across S. Main St; and a third from the rectory across S. Main St.

The parishioners of St. Anthony's Church have made many contributions to the good and welfare of Cohasset and deserve better treatment than they have received. Perhaps the town fathers/mothers can correct this situation.

Traffic signs are needed

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen).

Dear Board:

I have owned property on Lamberts Lane for ten years. During this time, a development of six houses has been completed at the end of the road. Eleven children now live in this area near the Golf Club. Traffic has increased and speeding cars think the road connects to Forest Avenue. In addition, cars frequently park on both sides of the road near the club limiting accessibility for emergency vehicles.

It is my hope that you will review this situation and place the following signs on Lamberts Lane:

- Dead End (at the beginning of the street as well as by the Golf Club road).
- No parking (at both sides of road near the Golf Club).
- Go Slow Children (by the Golf Club road).

I look forward to hearing from you regarding this safety matter. Thank you.

I sit with my boyfriend in the booth in the corner
He is the love of my life,
I tell everyone.
He'll always hold my hand,

"I love you" he says,
"I love you too," I reply,
with a lie.
And watch the restaurant move about with the business,

The Days
Those were the days,
When big decisions consisted of
What to bring to show and tell
Who to invite over to play.
When hurt feelings resulted from
A bully who laughed at your teddy bear.
When disappointment was
Not getting invited to Sally's birthday-
The kind where you get to wear a party dress.
When happiness was
A warm sunny day,
A friend who shared her cupcake.

Yet, these are the days
When the same things matter:
Who will make you happy,
What will make you sad.

What will break your heart,
Who will repair it.

Who you'll disappoint,
Who you'll impress.

The pains and gains of experience.

Education bill needs a lot of explaining . . .

teacher's maximum percentage. The teacher can elect various plans which provide for benefits only to the teacher or to both the teacher and his or her spouse upon the death of the teacher. The benefits per year are calculated by averaging the teacher's three highest paid years and multiplying that average wage by the maximum percentage or a lesser percentage based upon which plan is chosen by the teacher.

The early retirement plan would allow a teacher to add five years to his or her age or years of service for purpose of calculating the amount of retirement benefits.

The plan will be available to 2,500 teachers statewide per year, for two years, starting during the 1993-1994 school year. Towns have a local option, which means that each town must approve participation in the early retirement plan. Towns will be limited to one year of participation. Funding of the plan will be financed by both the state and the participating town. Hart said this plan will have to be exhaustively researched and then presented in a clear fashion to the citizens of Cohasset at a town meeting.

According to Hart, the bill also contains a professional development component. This is another area which school personnel and townspeople are likely to be quite interested in and which could help to improve the quality of education system-wide. Funding for these types of programs led School Committee member Ralph Kidder to suggest that the bill might more approximately be termed the "Education Funding bill."

Hart also devoted some of his discussion to the bill's new State Standard of Effort.

This standard is a figure arrived at by the state after considering, among other things, the average per capita income of a town's citizens and the average property values in the town. The standard is a figure which the town should be striving to meet with regard to educational spending.

According to the new bill, if a town falls below its standard of effort, it will be forced to devote 50 percent of revenues recognized pursuant to property tax increases during the following year to the school budget for that year. This is still another area which Hart believes must be fully researched before it can be definitely explained to townspeople.

The School Committee, in view of the concerns of citizens and the statewide confusion about the bill's ramifications on cities and towns, will publish materials addressing the bill's contents and its affect on Cohasset in the near future.

• In other business, the school committee approved plans for a cheerleading club which will be available to seventh and eighth graders at the Junior/Senior High School. The club will be coached by a parent volunteer.

Robinson sails to victory in 10th Annual Sullivan Regatta

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Howling winds on the first day of competition changed over to rain and choppy seas on the next. But that wasn't enough to deter Hingham's Jim Robinson from capturing the 10th Annual Sullivan Regatta, last weekend at the Cohasset Yacht Club.

The regatta, named after the man who played a major role in unifying the 210 class and deepening the fields along the East Coast and in the Mid-West. He also established the status of the organization as non-profit.

Robinson, who captained the String Trio, broke a first-day tie with second-place finisher Fran Charles of Cohasset to capture the event.

Hingham's Sue Epstein maintained her third-place showing through the first day of competition where winds of 18 knots and gusts between 25-30 mph caused damage to a number of the 11, 210-design sailboats entered. Two boats were forced to drop-out on Saturday. One of them could not compete in the two races held Sunday.

The high winds, though, didn't make the races any less exciting. Robinson finished third, first and fifth in the three first-day races, tied for first with Charles' two fourths and a first. Epstein trailed the pair with 11 points.

"It was very close," said Tom Hamilton, the event's chairman. "The lead kept changing in all the races. It really represents a lot of former class champions and 210 champions. Even the lead separating the lead from the back was close. The lead kept changing in all the races."

In the final race on Saturday, Charles won by six inches.

Fred Baker of Scituate, who guided the Plug Nickel to sixth place agreed.

"It's the who's who of 210 racing," he said as he sailed out of Cohasset Harbor to the starting line, two miles off the coast.

The regatta featured five triangular Gold Cup Olympic courses of 8-10 miles each.

Betsy Murry, a member of the yacht club who followed the races in a motor boat said the wind direction had changed very little during the Saturday races, but shifted a number of times on Sunday. She estimated the wind to be eight knots on Sunday, much calmer than the previous day.

Former boxer longs for yester-year

By Joe Reardon

For 78-year-old Harry Jason, the toughest thing about boxing in the 1930s was getting past his mother at the front door.

"My mother would ask me where I was going," said Jason, as he puffed on a cigar in the back yard of his Cohasset home. "I'd say I was going to watch (older brother) Joe fight, when all the time I was fighting."

Once past his mother, Jason would be off to any one of a number of locations in New England. From 1930-37 he fought in the lightweight and welterweight divisions at the Boston Garden, in Providence, Lowell, Lynn, New Hampshire and as part of a squad that represented Boston in Canada.

Jason was a success in the ring during his brief career. He was victorious in 25 of 30 matches, including 17 consecutive wins in Lynn as a lightweight when he held the Mass state title.

He still holds fond memories of the North Shore community, a city where the sport and its competitors were held in high regard.

"Lynn was the greatest place to fight," Jason said. "The crowds were great and very supportive."

But Jason doesn't like the changes he has seen boxing undergo over the years. There are very few fighters he admires and admits he won't sit down and watch a bout unless he is interested in the two pugilists in the ring.

"I'm interested if I find the right two people fighting each other," Jason said. "It was very different back then than it is today.

Still, Jason does have boxers who he enjoys watching.

"I like Vinny Pazienza," Jason said of the Rhode Island boxer who has staged a remarkable comeback, following a car accident that left him temporarily paralyzed.

"He's smart and he handles himself good. Around here today you don't see too many. They're smart. They got out. It's bad for the eyes."

Despite his stellar record and state title, Jason was no stranger to a hard shot to the jaw or head. He lost a match to good friend Red Priest of Cambridge in the Boston Garden when Priest broke Jason's jaw and the fight had to be stopped.

"We had some tough boys back then," he said. "In them days they were tough fighters. Tonight you'd go in and pound the hell out of the guy. Then next night you wouldn't know how. I fought some good boys, I'll tell you that.

"Today, they're (modern boxers) nothing. It's too much like politics. In the older days you were like me and I was like you."

Fighters in the 1930s were generally good friends, Jason said, but there were glaring exceptions. The most notable in Summertime and the tanning is easy.

In case you didn't notice the sun is out and it is time to get off the couch and lose that spare tire around your stomach.

Nowyou can accomplish this by signing up for Richard Simmon's "Deal a Meal" or by exercising.

The following is an Extra Points guide to summer exercise fun.

Horseshoes

Everybody loves horseshoes. There's nothing more exciting than tossing a ringer at a cookout. However, whenever we see people playing horseshoes they are holding a beer in one hand and the shoe in the other.

In order to play horseshoes and lose weight you have to get rid of the beer and instead drink a cool and crisp diet beverage.

And remember, follow through on your release.

Tennis

Tennis is a great sport for staying in shape but you have to know what you are doing.

First of all, don't try to hit home runs over the fence with the tennis balls. It may look fun, but then you have to go hunting for the balls in the woods afterwards.

Second, hit your backhand with one hand. If I see another macho guy hitting with two hands I'm going to lose my lunch. Two hand backhands are for guys from Sweden. Real Americans use one hand.

And lastly, wear white whenever possible. It makes you look cool on the court.

Golf

Golf used to be a sport only for the snotty. Now everyone with plaid shorts thinks they are the next Arnie.

Like tennis, you have to know what you are doing in golf or you will really embarrass yourself.

Take some lessons and learn the etiquette of the game.

For instance, you don't yell, "Look out a Pit Bull" just as someone draws back their club.

Also, golfers dress like preppies. Tanks tops and speedo shorts are a no-no at country clubs.

And if you want to get in shape from golf, walk fast and don't rent a cart.

Volleyball

Like horseshoes, volleyball is often played at cookouts with plenty of cold ones at hand. Avoid drinking or else you might end up hanging yourself when you miss a spike.

Also, the rules allow for three hits on each side before you return a volley. Utilize all three hits to get everyone involved. There's nothing worse than a volleyball Guido who tries to spike every shot he can reach.

Frisbee

Frisbee is great fun on the beach. You run around hurling the wham-o and then jump into the water and cool off.

Frisbee is also fun if you have a talented dog. However, we've seen dogs catch a frisbee once and then never return.

Two teams left in Major League Playoffs

By the time you read this, two teams will be left in the Major League Playoffs being held this week at Barnes Field. Wednesday night, the Rolling "Golden" Red Sox will face off against the Chart House Cards in a duel for the privilege of challenging the Dodgers for the championship of the 1993 season. No matter what happens, red-shirts will face light blue on Thursday night at 6 p.m. in a game you won't want to miss.

The playoffs began with a Pirates/Sox battle. When the graduating Pirates ran the bases for the last time, the team that took the championship last year, laid down their bats for the season. The upstart Rangers took on the A's in the next game and the growing strength of this new team was apparent as they, too, played their final game for their first season. The triumphant A's took on the Sox in the next game and the red shirts ruled, earning some time off while in the next game, the Cardinals met the Mets for a thrilling game described by Coach Baker in a separate article.

Now it was time for the regular season first-place Dodgers to get into the action, and with their exquisite defense backing up ace pitcher Matty Lewis and big swinger Homer Bilton, the Dodgers stayed on top vs the Sox on Saturday. Playing back-to-back games, the Dodgers took on the Cardinals on Sunday, and Jimmy O'Sullivan went the distance as the winning pitcher. Steve Baker held the artful Dodgers to three runs in the first three innings but the Dodgers pulled ahead decisively with an eight-run inning. Spunky Sean Chase hustled down the line on an infield hit, Jake Motley had a sweet double, and Bobby Morgan hit a pretty clutch double, so the Dodger fans hardly got to sit down at all. Relief pitcher Steve Kovach couldn't dig his team out, despite a great effort, holding the Dodgers to only three more hits. Dodger Mark Equi had a nice catch in the outfield. The bats of Good Billy Good and T-Man Goff produced fine redbird hits.

Monday night there needed to be a Greg Taylor alert at town pool. When the Sox took on the Mets, Taylor showed some of what his bat could do as he pounced out two homers, including a grand slam in his final game in Little League. The fans will miss this Big League player. It was a thrill to see his drilling pitches and fine batting, and the players who got a chance to bat against him these past three years will have stories to tell their kids and grandkids, for sure. The Red Sox took the game Monday under the combined superb pitching effort of John Paul Laugelle and Kyle Bunstein. Red Sox bats flew and the victory was theirs.

Meanwhile, both the Red Sox and the Cardinals know that if they win Wednesday, they'll get another cha[nce] against the Dodgers — maybe two.

Schwerin stifles Mets

With the regular season over the second place Cardinals set their sights on the playoffs. The first test was a rather steep one; a square-off against the No. 3 Mets, while facing perhaps the premier pitcher in the league, Greg Taylor.

Despite the fact that the Mets had bettered the Cards during the regular season, two games to one, the Cards were poised and confident that they could knock off the Taylor-led Mets. Their game plan was threefold: First to look for a solid pitching performance from Big Al Schwerin; second, to execute the best of their ability defensively, avoiding miscues at all costs and finally to get batting leadership out of three-year veterans Ted Goff, Steve Kovach, Alex Schwerin, Steve Baker and Chuck Dean.

In retrospect, the club performed up to expectations delivering their first playoff victory of the new season.

Led by "A-Frame" on the mound the mighty Cards did away with a good Mets ballclub 8-2. Schwerin, for his part, pitched the complete game giving up just one walk, striking out nine while yielding only three hits in a masterful performance that inspired his entire team.

In the execution of defense, the Cards worked admirably. Outside of two errors, the entire team did a number on Mets hitters time and time again. Excellent fielding plays were turned in by the ever fleet of foot Stevie "catch-me-if-you-can" Kovach, Stevie "Wonder" Baker, the Awesome A-Frame, "Terrible Ted" Goff, and Andrew "The Man" McAuliffe.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the veterans rose to the occasion and met the test of Taylor head on. Noteworthy hitting stars were Ted Goff (1 for 2, two runs scored), Steve Kovach (perhaps the best all-around pure athlete on the team) went 2-for-2, including a triple and two runs scored; Big Al Schwerin went 1-for-2 including a long double to the gap in left center, and two runs scored. Chuckie Cheese Dean went 1-for-1 with one run scored; and 11-year-old rookie "Don't-Call-Me-Late-For-Dinner" Hubley went 1-for-3 scoring once.

In summary, the ball club withstood a tough test in the Mets and went on to focus its attention on their second playoff game against the Dodgers. This is certainly no time for players with week stomachs. The playoffs separate the men from the boys. It's time to dance and I think the Cards are ready to shake rattle and roll!

Swimming

If you can float and paddle this is the sport for you. Many experts have said it is the best all-around exercise there is.

After the movie Jaws, many people, including at least one member of the Extra Points Crew, try to limit their swimming to fresh water.

Also the beaches on the South Shore are far from tropical. Beware when you dive in suddenly. You may catch frostbite.

Basketball

Nothing beats a game of pick-up basketball. And there are many great courts on the South Shore to play on. One of the best in Cronin Field in Hingham.

But with the limited number of courts and the large number of interested players, you have to win your games to keep playing. If you lose, you snooze.

Rollerblading

It looks fun but neither members of the Extra Points Crew have tried it. It sure looks fun, especially if you can avoid falling on the tar and breaking your nose.

Biking

This is a lovely sport and great exercise. However, watch out for crazed drivers and stick to places like Wompatuck State Park. Also wear a helmet. The last thing you want to do is fall off a bike at 20 miles per hour.

Abington's Dennis Graham doesn't like riding the pine waiting to pitch for the Post 22 Legion squad, but he makes the most of it.

In Sunday's 8-7 loss to East Bridgewater, Graham spent his bench time chatting with people in the stands and playing catch with Kevin McCormack — playfully giving his teammate a hard time throughout.

When head coach Mark Anderson told Graham to warm-up, he let the spectators in the Abington stands know he may be going in.

"Dennis Graham, warming up," he said with a wry smile.

Lest you think of Graham as a total joker, consider this. In 1-1/3 innings he allowed one batter to reach first. And that was through a walk.

Beach volleyball applicants accepted

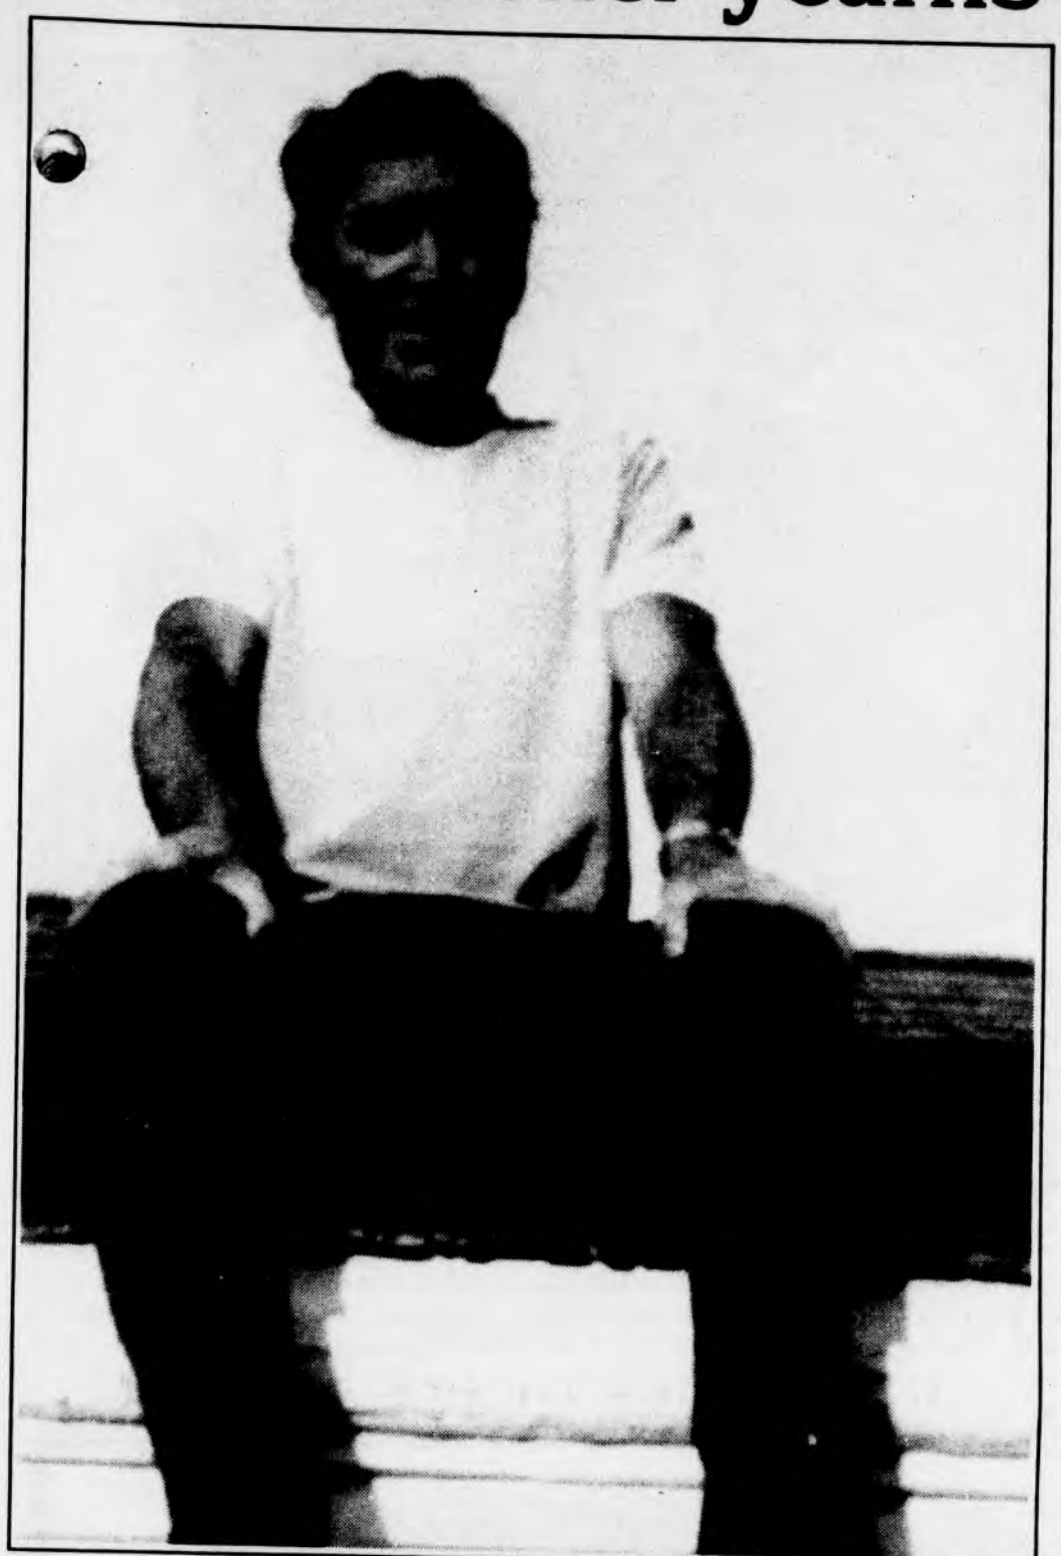
Former boxer yearns for days of yore . . .



Former boxer Harry Jason says the sport has changed drastically since from when he competed in the 1930s.

New England was probably the hatred Jack Sharkey and Jim Mahoney had for each other.

Neither one bothered hiding their disdain for one another.

Both did much of their roadwork along the wind-swept roads of Cohasset, despite the fact they were from Brookline and South Boston respectively.

"They'd pass each other and wouldn't say anything," Jason said. "They were enemies."

Jason attended Cohasset High School for two years before deciding to pursue a career in cabinet making. He transferred to Quincy Trade School. Following his classes, Jason would throw his gym bag over his shoulder and head to Joe Beston's Gym in Braintree to workout. His training included lifting, sit-ups, roadwork, sparring "and all that baloney." Jason, though, enjoyed the work he put in preparing for fights, but he wary about the behind-the-scenes double-dealing among the fight promoters and managers.

Jason and Joe were initially managed by Willy Woods, who oftentime would tell the pair they received a certain amount of money for a fight, when in reality, they were supposed to be given more. Woods would pocket the difference and give them the rest. Jason remembers Joe had been short-changed after one particular bout and went at Woods.

"I had to stop him from beating up Willy Woods," Jason said with a laugh. "Joe was a tough son of a gun."

Jimmy Gardner then became their manager, a move Jason saw as one of the best of his career. A former boxer who had fought for the world welterweight title, Gardner had Jason's complete trust in all boxing-related matters outside the ring.

"He was one of the best," Jason said. "He wouldn't steal a nickel from you."

Jason was forced to retire in 1937 when he injured his shoulder during a match, but he continued to stay close to the sport. Jimmy Doyle, the principal of Cohasset High School, hired Jason to teach boxing at the school.

"He was a great guy," Jason said of Doyle. "We saw eye-to-eye."

Jason taught the kids skills he himself had learned in the ring, but after two years he had to give it up because of pressure from concerned parents who feared for their kids' safety.

"You know how mothers and fathers are," Jason said, matter-of-factly. "It was dangerous as far as boys were concerned."

Jason, though, was not through with boxing yet. He started managing Friday night matches at the Cohasset American Legion hall for high school boxers. The weekly fights became very popular in town and residents flocked to the legion hall to take in the matches.

Jason was also training fighters in the Quincy/Braintree area, but when he was married in 1939, his priorities had to change.

"I liked to train kids," he said, "but at the time I had to go to Quincy and Braintree. And when I got married, that changed. The wife was full-charged then."

During his years working at Brockton Gas, Jason had the opportunity to work alongside a pretty well-known boxer — World Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano. Jason says the Brockton native was probably the most intense individual he had ever met.

"He was the best," Jason said. "He was a great fighter. I used to study him years ago."

But that was a long time ago. Jason's passion for the sport has dimmed.

"Today I just look at the paper and read about this guy and that guy," he said.

Young Life tourney, July 12

Young Life, helping teenagers in Hingham and Cohasset, will be sponsoring the Fourth Annual Invitational Golf Tournament Monday, July 12 at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St. Hingham.

Check-in will be at 12:30 p.m., followed by a shotgun start at 1 p.m., 6:30 p.m. reception and 7:15 p.m. dinner.

The format will be a 18 hole, four person, team Florida Style Scramble.

Entry fees are $90 for an individual, $325 for a foursome and $35 for an awards dinner.

The entry fee includes a greens fee with cart, a dinner prepared by "Tastefully Yours," tennis, swimming pool (separate fee) and locker facilities.

Prizes will be presented for men and women teams, hole in one, closest to the tee, longest drive, and raffles.

Applications will be accepted for foresomes or individuals. Individuals will be assigned to a foursome. Latecomers and non-golfing guests are encouraged to join in the celebration fesitivities at the awards dinner ($35 per person).

For further information, call Corinne Kirkendall, 740-2379 or Peggy Walrod, 749-8490.

Young Life emphasizes relationships. Vounteers spend hours every week involved with teenagers and volunteers go to wherever high school and junior high school students are found. Suicide, sex, drugs, divorce, death, self-image, loneliness, grades, school, church, dates, rejection, acceptance, friends and family are all issues to be heard and understood.

Young Life is a non-denominal Christian organization, ministering to adolescents. The organization is supported by the community from individuals, organizations and churches.

Baseball camp starts this week

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters age five through 18 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide a baseball camp, which will be held this at Milliken Field.

Two camp programs are available to youngsters as follows: full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; camp for age seven and over and a half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.; camp is available for five and six year olds.

The week-long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, July 2.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has provided baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for three years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for Baseball Camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall, daily, Monday through Saturday.

Step training programs offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering both introduction and Fat Burner, Power Step Training programs this summer, taught by Ms. Normandie Nigh of Fit for Success. Classes meet at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium as follows:

"Intro to Step" — a 60-minute class appropriate for beginning to intermediate participants, it includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning which can be adapted for all fitness levels. The class is held Monday and Wednesday nights at 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups and drop-ins are welcome.

"Fatburner Workout with Power Step" — If you love step training, but want to take it to the next level, this class is for you! This is a 90-minute workout consisting of a combination of stepping and toning exercises to help you increase strength and burn fat more efficiently. It is taught by Normandie Nigh, Monday and Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Ten sessions are available and drop-ins are welcome.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information, or you may register at class times.

Soccer camp registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer camp, for children ages four to seven years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, age four to seven. ABC Soccer is especially designed for four and five year olds and meets for 8:00 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19-23. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19-23, for six and seven year olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School.

Tennis lessons held for all levels

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis lessons for all levels of instruction, by calling 383-6791.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: beginners, 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesdays; intermediates, 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesdays; advanced, 6 to 7 p.m., Thursdays; beginners, 7 to 8 p.m., Thursdays. Other classes will be scheduled as demand dictates.

All sessions are five weeks in duration and cost $45 per person, per session. Teaching, will be Ms. Michelle Massa of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own, or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Wednesday evening classes will be made available should demand dictate.

These islands harbor many priceless treasures

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The search for worthwhile and inexpensive summer activities is over.

For just $6, ($4 for children and seniors) anyone can catch a ferry at Hingham Shipyard and spend the day touring the harbor islands.

While there are actually 30 islands in the harbor, the islands of Georges, Bumpkin, Peddocks, Grape, Lovells and Gallops are maintained as a state park by the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) and the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC).

Regular ferry service from Hingham to the state park islands begins July 1. Service is also available from Long Wharf in Boston and Lynn.

The ferry takes passengers to Georges Island, where a free water taxi is available for transport to the other state park islands.

DEM Visitor Services Supervisor Ellenor Yahrmarkt said that each island offers so much, visitors should not expect to tour them all in one day. "You can usually do two or three islands in a day, but you really need to read a schedule," she said.

Yahrmarkt said the state park island offerings are among the best recreational deals in town. "It's a bargain, and it's healthy, quality family time where you get to see nature."

Park rangers offer guided tours on all islands on a regular basis. The tour typically covers the islands' wild flowers, bird life, marine ecology, as well as cultural and military history.

In the case of Georges Island, the most frequently visited island, the cultural and military history is extensive.

The 30-acre Georges Island is dominated by Fort Warren, which was used to hold confederate prisoners during the Civil War. The remains of other forts can also be seen on Lovells and Peddocks islands.

Gallops Island, the smallest of the state park islands, housed a maritime radio school during World War II, remnants of which are still visible.

If you want to get away from tourists, Yahrmarkt suggests visiting the 35-acre Bumpkin Island.

"The anchorage and docking isn't as good, but not as many people go there," she said. "And it has great raspberry picking around July 4th."

Nearby Grape Island, Yahrmarkt said, is also good for visitors wanting few crowds, although its good anchorage makes it more attractive to sailors. Grape Island also once housed Amos Pendleton, a slave trader who used the island to hide from authorities in the mid-1800s.

In addition to the daily island tours, the DEM and MDC also offer free special programs throughout the summer at each island.

Among those special programs is a three-hour workshop in photographing wild flowers on Gallops and Georges islands. Program participants can also explore rocky intertidal zones on Lovells Island with a naturalist from the New England Aquarium or enjoy an open-air concert on Georges Island.

Georges Island will also host a "French at the Fort" weekend. Le Regiment De Saintonge and other re-enactment groups will celebrate the harbor's rich French history with demonstrations of camp life, clothing, cooking, candle-making, military drills and battle tactics.

Officials suggest visitors call DEM at 740-1605 or the MDC at 727-5290 for a complete listing of events. Enrollment in some programs is limited.

The DEM also offers a national award winning educational program, Kidliedoscope, for youngsters two to six. The program is free, but ferry transport to Grape and Bumpkin islands, where it is held, costs $2.

Yahrmarkt said the program includes activities like sensory nature walks, arts and crafts, storytelling and nature games. The program is offered on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and reservations are required.

An entire day of children's activities will be held on all state park islands on Sunday, July 25 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the form of the Children's Festival. There will be face-painting, ice-cream making, kite-flying and other activities. A children's concert will take place in the afternoon on Georges Island.

And, if mainland nights grow too warm and you seek cool island breezes, Yahrmarkt again suggests the state park islands.

"Your can go the islands and camp for $5 a night, and enjoy basically having the island to yourself," she said.

Firefighter is honored

At the request of Fire Chief John Nadeau, selectmen approved the nomination of firefighter Robert Protulis of the Cohasset Fire Department for the 1992 Meritorious Award for Community Service from the Executive Office of Public Safety.

In a letter to Secretary Thomas C. Rapone, Nadeau said Protulis initiated a voluntary "Medical Information Program" that provides "our first due engine and rescue companies with critical, life-saving information.

"This program gives us the information necessary to make a real difference managing emergencies," he said.

Nadeau said Protulis started the data-base project with minimal funding, developed a partnership with local business, and has conducted several speaking engagements.

"It's this kind of excellence that separates mediocrity from excellence. We're proud of the job he's done and ask you to give his nomination serious consideration," Nadeau wrote.

Chiropractic for HEALTH
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg

UNCONVENTIONAL WISDOM

According to a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine, Americans now seek treatment from chiropractors and other unconventional practitioners more often than from internists, pediatricians, and other primary care physicians. In 1990, when the most recent nationwide survey was conducted, one adult in three turned to unconventional healers for the treatment of aches and pains. Among the unorthodox therapies most commonly used, chiropractic placed second. Those turning to alternate therapies did so not to treat life-threatening illnesses, but to treat such chronic problems as back troubles, headache, anxiety, and pain. This study underscores the validity of chiropractic as evidenced by the large number of Americans who seek its treatment in lieu of traditional medicine.

The body has the innate ability to heal itself. The role of the chiropractor is merely to help the body stay healthy by removing any interference to the natural healing process. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC (545-7388), we accept only those patients whom we truly believe we can help. Our office is located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor. Early morning and late evening appointments available. Workers comp cases and most insurance plans accepted. Have a happy and safe July 4th weekend.

P.S. Americans visited non-medical practitioners 435 million times in 1990, versus 388 million trips to primary care physicians.

"New additions"

There are a number of "new" books on tape in the children's room at the library for young readers and "very" young readers to enjoy this summer.

The young readers collection features a series of books on tape by Beverly Cleary and the Mystery collection by John Bellairs. Other popular authors such as Robert Peck and Cynthia Voight are available as well.

For the "very" young readers, the series of tapes and accompanying books features lively narrations by well-known artists, Glen Close, Kelly McGillis, Jodie Foster, Robin Williams and many more. Titles include Thumbelina, The Fisherman and his Wife, and other classical favorites.

Mrs. Terry, the children's librarian, continues the "sign-up" for the Summer Reading Program. Don't forget the "Goldfish" contest at the sign-up desk.

Carillon recital Sunday

The second program in the 69th Annual Summer Carillon Recital Series on the 57-bell Taylor carillon of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, will be given Sunday evening, July 4, by Terence McKinney, Assistant Carillonneur of the Bok Singing Tower in Lake Wales, Florida.

Mr. McKinney will play original carillon compositions by Van den Gheyn, Allard and de Klerk, folk music from Canada, British Isles, and Hungary, and American folk and patriotic music appropriate to the holiday.

The Cohasset recital begins at 6 p.m., is free of charge, and will take place regardless of weather conditions. Printed programs and concert schedules will be distributed both on Cohasset Common and in the courtyard behind the church on Highland Avenue.

For additional information, phone the church at 383-1083, or Sally Slade Warner, Cohasset Carillonneur, at 508-475-2599.

Special pancake breakfast

One of the most popular of recent Cohasset Historical Society events was the special pancake breakfast held on the grounds of the Caleb Lothrop House in celebration of the Lothrop House's 170th anniversary.

This summer the Historical Society will hold a repeat of the special event; a pancake breakfast Sunday, July 11, on the grounds of the famous old house.

Serving hours for the breakfast will be from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tickets will be be available for $5 per adult, $2.50 for children, available from the Society at its Lothrop House headquarters or at the Maritime Museum, Elm Street in the village, during open hours 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays.

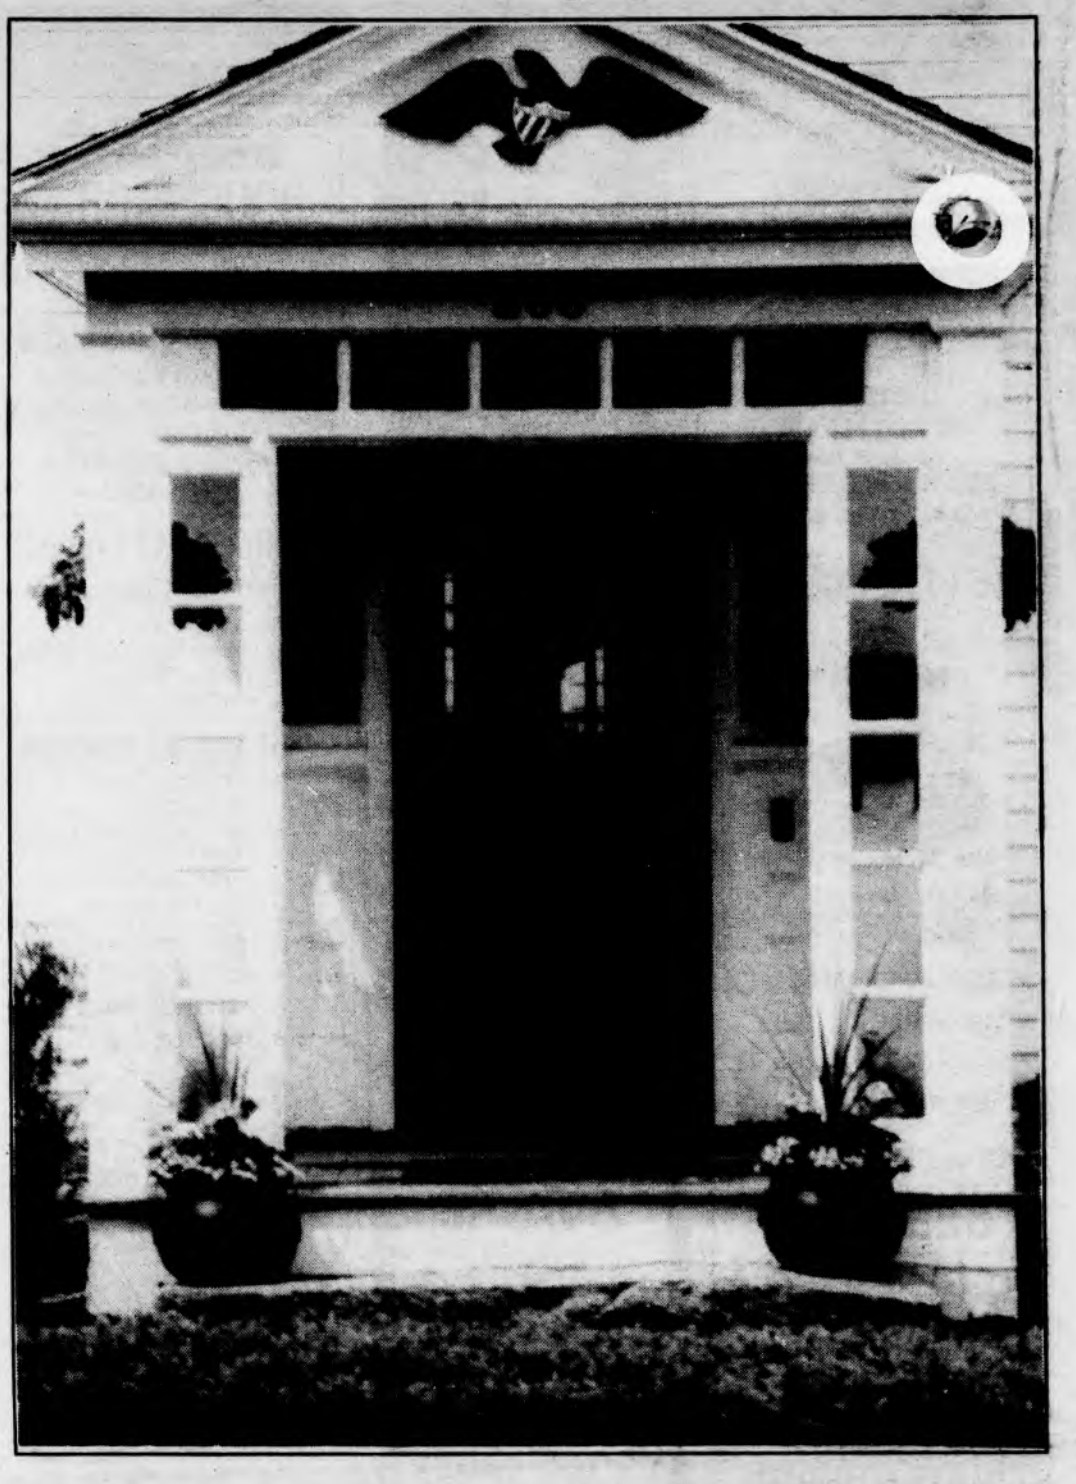
Plan to visit the Cohasset Historical Society's pancake breakfast Sunday, July 11, at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

The Historical Society's phone is 383-6930.

Summer fun slated

Camps in dance and gymnastics will be offered at the center this summer. A special girls night out for girls ages five and over is planned for Friday evening, July 16 from 5 to 7 p.m. Tennis lessons for children and adults will be given throughout the months of July and August. The lessons are given on a private court in Cohasset with four students per class. Aerobics will be ongoing throughout the summer. Summer office hours at the center are 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863



The front door of this South Main Street home has a white wicker basket filled with spring flowers in shades of pink, purple and yellow. On either side of this very unique entryway there are hanging planters filled with dark pink impatiens. The steps are flanked by two black planters filled with pink geraniums, white alyssum and greenery.

Jump start for local car dealership

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

A "new" Spensley Chevrolet emerged July 1.

The company is now debt-free and has consolidated its various car services onto the dealership property at 828 Justice Cushing Highway.

The old Spensley Chevrolet was nearly crushed out of existence by the weight of a $1.7 million bank debt and used three parcels of land to perform what now will be done on one.

"We are regrouping, as they say," co-owner Lloyd Spensley said.

"There is a lot of pressure off us now and we are just going to run with it."

Spensley, who owns the dealership and two parcels of adjoining land with his brother Geoffrey, opened the Route 3A fixture 20 years ago. It was a business he fell into while buying a car for his brother.

"I did the negotiations, and afterward the owner

Quarterly tax billing is a plus for town coffers

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

'Year two' of quarterly tax billing got underway this week as Cohasset residents received the first of four property tax bills.

This is the second year that the town will send four bills instead of two.

And according to Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley, the savings gained far outweigh the hassle.

Ripley said the town gained about $26,000 by switching to the quarterly system. That includes additional interest income on money deposited with the town and lower borrowing costs.

After costs like postage and printing are deducted the net benefit is about $23,000, Ripley said.

But quarterly billing has increased the workload in the treasurer's office.

"Everything doubles like the phone calls, the mail," Ripley said. "But we think the second year (of the system) will go smoother."

Greek Taverna, a festival of red, white & blue

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

For many people, the Fourth of July weekend means HarborFest in Boston, topped off with the Boston Pops Esplanade concert and the fireworks over the Charles River.

However, for the members of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Jerusalem Road in Cohasset, it means something quite different; it means Taverna!

Taverna '93 "A Festival of Red, White, and Blue" marked the 11th year of a celebration of not only one culture, but two.

All weekend long, members from all over the South Shore came to join in the fun of Independence Day, while at the same time savoring the tastes, sounds and sights of a culture that cannot be described as any less than "Yassori" (Wonderful!).

Taverna, in Greek, means tavern, however, not the kind of tavern that comes to one's mind.

"A tavern (in Greece) is a place where one goes to eat and listen to music," said Father John Maheras, who said the event does not include anything detrimental to family values.

This event is certainly a family affair, everybody gets involved. Starting around the age of five, the children of the church are required to help out at the Taverna in

Soccer squad brings state title East

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The boys Under-16 soccer squad taught a most valuable lesson to the 12 teams in its division at the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions. Regular season records don't count for much in the long run.

Cohasset finished its 10-game, spring soccer schedule with a 5-2-3 record to wind up second to Hanover. The overall mark was nothing to be ashamed of by any means. But it hardly raised any eyebrows when the Coastal Division playoffs started.

"5-2-3 is good," said first-year coach Dave Shultz, "but certainly not great."

The playoffs, though, marked the beginning of an 8-0 surge that carried the Under-16 team to the state title, the first time a Cohasset club in any sport has won

Cohasset's week

Buckle up, police say

Cohasset police conducted an informal survey and discovered that Cohasseters are not buckling up.

Sgt. Robert Jackson said an officer standing at the corner of Depot Court and N. Main Street observed that fewer than 30 percent of vehicle drivers and passengers were using seat belts.

"That's considerably below the national average," Jackson said.

He said that state law requires that children 12 years old and under wear a seat belt. Younger children must be properly fastened and secured by a child passenger restraint.

Jackson said when police officers stop vehicles for another violation, operators will be cited if children in the car are not properly restrained.

There is no state law requiring adults to use seat belts, Jackson said.

By-law change supported

Ted and Sue Cox of Parker Ave. wrote to selectmen stating their support for a town by-law change for town-owned parking lot hours.

The Coxes would like the lot adjacent to Government Island to be included in any by-law change.

"We have often been awakened at night by noisy and unruly party-goers," the Coxes wrote.

"On several occasions the police have been notified and asked to remove the youngsters from the parking area. Usually the lot is not used by teens until after the beach parking lot has been closed.

"Then, between the hours of 11 and midnight, the lot becomes increasingly crowded with cars of teens drinking and playing loud music," they said.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said recently he will ask selectmen for support in seeking a by-law change which would cut back the hours that the Sandy Beach lot is open to curb public drinking.

The Coxes said including the Government Island lot in the by-law change would "prohibit the teens from simply moving the party to another spot in town.

"Alcohol consumption by teens is certainly on the minds of many parents in town these days. Perhaps this by-law would serve to not 'condone' this behavior by providing a safe haven for it to take place."

Waste bans in effect

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

April 1 two more so-called "waste bans" went into effect. The substances which will no longer be accepted at SEMASS, the town's disposal facility, are glass and yard waste. At the present time there continues to be small quantities of glass and yard waste mixed with the rubbish.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Unemployment is down

The employment news is good for Cohasset, as the newest unemployment figures were once again on the decline.

According to the state Department of Employment and Training, unemployment in Cohasset for the month of April was 3.7 percent of the total labor force. That's significantly lower than the March figure of 4.3 percent.

The state reported that 139 Cohasset residents received unemployment compensation in April from a total local labor force of 3,738.

The news was not as bright for the state, however, where the unemployment rate rose from 6.5 percent in April to 6.7 percent in May. Unemployment numbers for municipalities lag a month benhind the state numbers.

"Despite a slight increase in the monthly rate, May was the third consecutive month that Massachusetts was below the national average," said Employment and Training Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg.

Quarterly tax billing is a plus ...

Ripley added that the treasurer's office will reorganize internally this year to help handle the impact.

Residents were recently sent a notice with their tax bills explaining the quarterly system. Payment is due in the collector's office, 2nd Floor at town hall no later than 4:30 p.m., August 2. Postmark dates will not be accepted.

Office hours for Monday, August 2 are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Ripley said despite getting billed four times, very few residents have complained.

"Some people, who pay their own bills and don't have an escrow account, like it because the bills are smaller," she said.

At the 1992 annual town meeting, voters approved switching to the quarterly system to improve cash flow and to save on short-term borrowing.

Safe tips on treating an animal bite

South Shore Hospital says certain medical precautions should be followed if anyone is bitten by a wild animal, or a domestic animal that has not been vaccinated, or an animal you are not familiar with.

According to South Shore Hospital Emergency Services Director Dr. Jeffrey Johnson, rabies is a disease of the nervous system which is caused by a virus and is usually transmitted by a bite, scratch or contact with an infected animal's saliva. When an animal or person is infected by the virus, the disease spreads through the nervous system to the brain.

Massachusetts law requires that the state's one million cats must be vaccinated for rabies. While all animals, including humans, are endangered by the rabies outbreak, cats are considered at risk because they often wander unvaccinated at night among other local wildlife. Animal bites most often occur from a wild animal or a domestic animal you are not familiar with. In these instances, these medical precautions should be followed:

- Immediately wash the wound in warm soapy water, gently scrubbing the injured area for at least 10 minutes.
- After the wound has been washed thoroughly, the person should immediately call their family doctor or come to the hospital's emergency room.
- The bite should be reported to the local animal control official and board of health. Get a description of the animal that bit the person. People should learn to identify the animals common in their area, such as raccoons, skunks, foxes, bats, and others.

asked me if I wanted a job," Spensley said.

He accepted, but continued to work his other two jobs — extending his normal nine-hour day to 16 hours. From 1957 to 1960, the former Marine pilot worked as a flight engineer at Lockheed from 1 to 8 a.m., as a box boy at Gimbels Department Store from 2 to 4 p.m. and then sold cars from 4 to 9 p.m.

"When you're young, you can do it," he said.

Spensley showed the same adaptability over the past [illegible], when impending foreclosure proceedings forced the dealership to streamline, and sell another Spensley entity — Handy Dodge of Weymouth.

Consolidation measures began last Thursday, when Spensley Chevrolet transferred its body shop and car services operations from two adjoining parcels of land onto the dealership property itself. The move is part of the purchase-and-sales agreement Spensley has with developer Donald Staszko of Cohasset, who bought the three parcels for $1.3 million.

According to the terms of the contract, Spensley Chevrolet will lease only the dealership property. The brothers have a 15-year lease, with the option to purchase.

Spensley attorney Gary Thomas of Hanover said Staszko bought the property as an investment.

"He felt it was a good business venture," Thomas said.

Spensley added that the drain on Spensley Chevrolet was not caused by poor performance of the Cohasset operation, but of other related business transactions.

"Spensley Chevrolet has always been profitable — this was the most lucrative location," he said.

Spensley said he and Staszko had business dealings before the purchase of the Cohasset parcels.

"We've sold his family, and him, cars. They were very happy with us. They believed there should be a car dealership here," he said.

The purchase price was used to pay part of the dealership's $1.7 million bank debt. The remaining $400,000 was raised by the sale of Handy Dodge of Weymouth.

Thomas said the sale of the land and the Weymouth dealership enabled Spensley Chevrolet to remain in business.

"Spensley owes the banks nothing," he said. "All their debts have been paid."

Lloyd Spensley is optimistic.

"We got our overhead down, we are back working and our plans for the future are very positive," he said.

Spensley said like many businessmen, he took advantage of the boom of the eighties and expanded. At one point, the Spensley brothers owned six car dealerships along the South Shore.

"The best year in general for all dealerships was in 1988," Spensley said. "From there on it fizzled out."

He said the streamlining and consolidation measures are a common reaction to the recession.

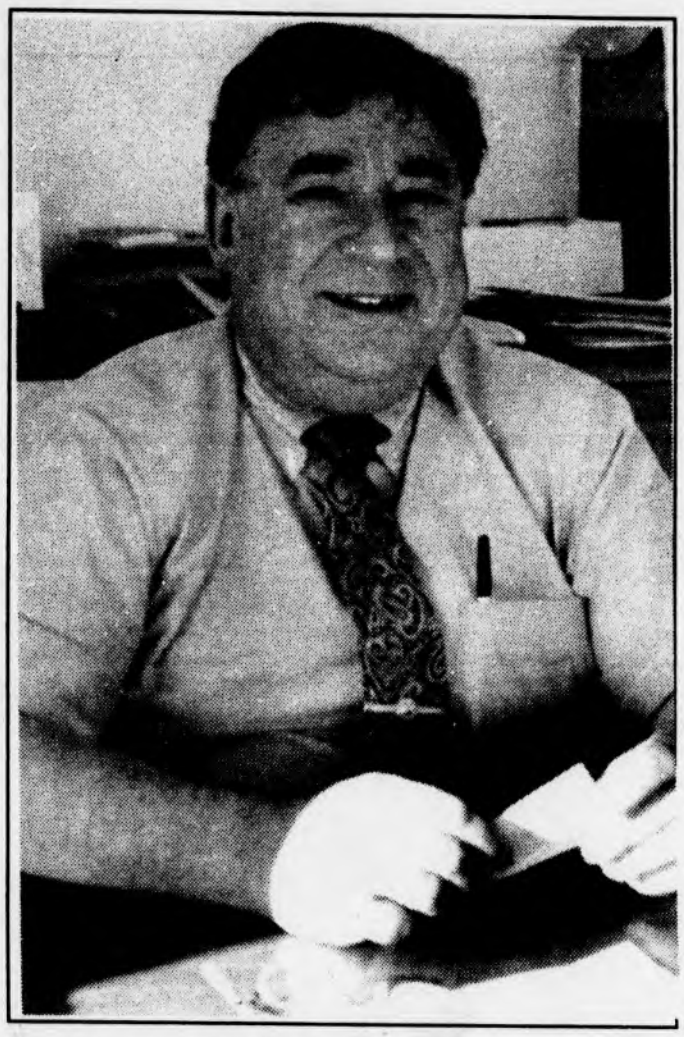
"In 1990 the bottom fell out of the New England economy, and not just for Spensley Chevrolet."

Lloyd Spensley shows no bitterness about the circumstances which have reduced his holdings.

"I don't think backward, I think forward. I'm a positive-thinking person."

The consolidation should also benefit Spensley Chevrolet customers, he said.

"People can deal directly with owners, so we can give better deals."



Lloyd Spenley looks forward to future sales in his Cohasset dealership.

Stellwagen Bank Sanctuary is dedicated

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

Stellwagen Bank, an 840-square mile area in Massachusetts Bay, about 30 miles east of Boston, was formally dedicated June 26 as the nation's 13th national marine sanctuary at ceremonies held near Mayflower II.

The area, as large as the state of Rhode Island, was designated a marine sanctuary last fall after a 10-year effort to protect the whales and fisheries resource.

With the sanctuary designation, sand and gravel mining will be prohibited, and the area cannot be used as a disposal site for dredged materials. Furthermore, no construction is permitted on the sanctuary seabed.

On hand for the dedication were Commerce Secretary Ronald H. Brown, U.S. Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, Massachusetts Executive Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe, officials from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and a host of local politicians and individuals concerned about the environment.

"The new marine sanctuary is a magnificent underwater area, straddling the mouth of Massachusetts Bay," said Brown as he addressed a huge crowd on the state pier in Plymouth.

"Made up of ancient glacial deposits that have become home to a teeming community of marine creatures . . . this national treasure is clearly a place of special meaning for the people of Massachusetts.

"For over 200 years . . . the vast fishing grounds offshore attracted settlers to the region in the earliest days of our history, and the resourcefulness and proud independence of the new England fisherman is one of our nation's enduring images.

"Three hundred years ago," said Brown, fish were so plentiful that vast quantities could be harvested with nets placed in the harbors and rivers.

"But now, as with many of our national fishing grounds, Stellwagen Bank is in danger, with some species showing signs of actual stock depletion."

Brown said Stellwagen Bank brings $20 million to the local economy, but there is a bigger picture . . . "A vital maritime industry must adopt practices that assure sustainable development. And we must marry economic growth to a deep and enduring respect for the environment," he said.

"The work has just begun," said Coxe, who was director of ocean and coastal management for NOAA before becoming a cabinet secretary in the Weld administration.

"For many years to come we must advocate for clean waters at Stellwagen Bank, for Massachusetts Bay and for the Gulf of Maine."

Dr. James Baker, NOAA's new administrator described Stellwagen Bank as a "ridge of sand and gravel deposited by the same glaciers that created Cape Cod 10,000 years ago. It's like an underwater rain forest."

Said Kerry, "I do not believe we inherit the earth, we borrow it. We have a deep responsibility to return it in better shape than we found it."

Studds echoed similar sentiments. "This is a sanctuary, something holy to protect. It would be a privilege if we don't."

Stellwagen Bank is an important feeding and nursery ground for a variety of marine mammals, including the humpback, fin and northern right whales, and supports an abundant variety of fish, seabirds and other marine mammals.

Commercially, bluefin tuna, herring, cod, flounder, lobster and scallops are caught in that area, representing more than $23 million at dockside.

Stellwagen Bank is the country's northernmost marine sanctuary and the only one off New England.

NOAA administers marine sanctuaries — the Florida Keys, just declared last year; the wreck of the Monitor off the North Carolina coast; Graves Reef off Georgia; the Channel Islands in California, the Gulf of the

Phone calls that care made by a computer

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Checking on a loved one has gone high tech.

For $30-a-month, subscribers to a new computerized monitoring service are guaranteed that a telephone call will be made up to six times a day, every day, to designated telephone number.

"How are you today ?" is the computerized telephone service sold by the Automated Communications Division of Langlois & Associates of Hingham. Owner Robert Langlois said the service checks on elderly parents, shut-ins or latch-key children by placing pre-programmed calls to their residences.

"I could identify with it because a lot of people my age have folks that need to be contacted and the reality is many people don't contact them on a regular basis," Langlois said.

At the pre-arranged time, the computer service will call and ask the individual who answers to press "1" if they are okay or "0" if they need assistance. "If they press anything but "1", we assume they need assistance," Langlois said.

If assistance is needed, the computer begins dialing numbers from an emergency response list. Those on the list are friends or family who live close enough to personally check on the person.

Langlois is the first to admit his service is not for everyone.

"The person will have to have some dexterity to press the appropriate responses," he said. "And remember to press them."

The computer message can be personalized and remind someone to take their medication, Langlois said.

Hingham Police Captain William Schmitt thinks the service is a good one.

"It will probably alleviate some of the pressure we are feeling," he said.

"Frequently a friend or relative will call to say they haven't heard from someone, or that they are not picking up the phone."

Schmitt said the police will follow-up with a visit to the person's house.

Director of the Hersey House Senior Center in Hingham Sandra Kent welcomed the monitoring system.

"It's encouraging that more of these services come into being," Kent said. "It's important for the family to make sure the service offers all that they are looking for," she added.

Cohasset Council on Aging Executive Director Kathy Bryanton gave mixed reviews to the service.

"Maybe in large housing complexes or large communities with large complexes, I think it would be an excellent service," Bryanton said. "But in smaller towns, where people want the one to one, they can get it."

Bryanton said Cohasset, for instance, has several outreach programs that provide the elderly with volunteers to check on them.

Langlois said his service is not intended to supplant human contact.

"This is not to absolve someone of their responsibility," he said. "This is to fill in the gaps."

Langlois said one of his first inquiries was from an 83-year-old Randolph man who wanted the service for himself. The man had several children, but none lived in state, Langlois explained. He said while they called him frequently, there were times when several went on vacation simultaneously and he would not receive a call for a week.

The man said he liked the feature of calling at a specific time every day, Langlois said.

"He was very active, and drove. But he liked the idea of someone checking on him at a set time," he said.

Langlois said many of those who receive the service say they feel more independent.

"Because they know if they have a problem, someone will be checking on them and calling for help if it is needed," he said.

Not all calls through the system are from the computer. Once or twice a month, Langlois replaces the computer and personally calls the telephone numbers.

"Our intent is to call live once or twice a month," he said. He added that he wanted his customers to know the person behind the voice that was leaving the recorded messages.

"This is probably the wave of the future, until they come up with interactive television," he said.

Farallons and Cordell Bank, also off the California coast, the Flower Garden Bank in the Gulf of Mexico, off the coast of Texas, and a little one in America Samoa.

An office for the marine sanctuary will open in Plymouth, probably by Sept. 1, according to Bradley Barr of Hanover, who will serve as its manager.

A marine ecologist with the state office of Coastal Zone management, Barr has had "a long-standing association with the federal marine sanctuary program," said Francesca Cava, head of the division of NOAA that administers the nation's 13 marine sanctuaries.

"He is probably the one person in Massachusetts who is most closely identified . . . with the Stellwagen Sanctuary."

Barr has worked with the state coastal zone management program since 1986 as the program's critical areas coordinator.

He received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Maine in 1977 and a master of science degree from the University of Massachusetts in 1987.

As manager for the sanctuary he will be responsible for the day-to-day management of the sanctuary, working with state and other federal agencies, and providing public education and outreach.

❑ Here's a name that we haven't written about in some time, Lauren Wood! The reason we haven't is that she hasn't been skating but, "she's back" ... "and, she's sporting three gold medals and one silver."

Lauren skated in the New England District I ISIA Championship in Bourne, MA and earned gold medals in Freestyle (6), artistic solo (6) and footwork (6), the silver in figures. All of that and she hasn't skated in a while (being a student at UNH is time consuming and plenty of work in itself!).

It has always been a family event for the Woods, and Lauren may be proud of her efforts, she is a darn good skater! She is going to test right before she goes back to school, maybe she'll be in the Olympics yet!

Good luck Lauren, we will all be cheering for you.

❑ Speaking of a winner, good Cohasset track and field news from Springfield College's hosting of second annual Mass Senior Games, held on the 26th and 27th of June. On those two days (temperature 90 degrees), Cohasset's Ellery Clark made a meet record of nine gold medals in nine events. These included the 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes, five kilometers (3.1 miles), 500 meter racewalks and four field events; and running long jump, discus, shot and javelin. These wins upped Clark's career record to 99 wins, 23 seconds and 23 thirds.

He hopes to reach a hundred wins in the 1994 indoor New England Master's games at Brown University, we wish him well!

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Anita Bernstein, we love you.

❑ Congratulations go to Matthew Buckley, who graduated from Merrimack College May 16.. Good luck to you in your future endeavors, Matt!

That's Maria Petrakis and Wigmore Pierson portraying the Lightkeepers' family on the float sponsored by Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corp. in the annual South Shore Art Festival/Harborfest parade June 20. For a big thank you, please see page 10.

❑ Speaking of graduates, here I am in the OOPS department. You will remember all of the accolades that Felecia Bartow received last week, well not only did I misspell Felecia's name, I neglected to say that Felecia graduated from Macalester College, Summa Cum Laude, with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Spanish and Human Service!

Sorry, the error was mine, you are super and should be very proud of yourself for all of your terrific efforts!

❑ Lest you think that Cohasset students don't make a name for themselves everywhere, read the news from the University of Vermont! Edward E. Chase, Jill Lang Hamilton, Jill Christine Alicia Rooney and Melissa Ellen McCarthy all made the Dean's List (that is with a grade-point average of 3.0 or better folks).

Continue your grand efforts, we are proud of you!!

❑ The University of Massachusetts Lowell sends us news about Richard G. Abbadessa, who earned himself a BS in Criminal Justice June 6. Here's hoping that you have a future here in Cohasset, your dad is one of the best and we know that you are too!!

❑ Hats off to Julienne Guemere who will be doing great things this summer. As a Music Ed Major, she will be employed by the New York State Music Camp and Institute in Oneonta, NY. Not only will she be a counselor, jazz librarian, instrumental storage manager and performer, but she has been chosen to conduct a full-piece intermediate band for the summer. Julienne will be working with many professional musicians and educators, and this is a great honor and experience.

Julienne has just completed her

Elsie E. Sladen

Elsie Eddy (Higgins) Sladen, 101, a former employee at Hugo's Restaurant, died July 3 at South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Sladen was born Jan. 9, 1892 at the old Scituate hospital on Kent Street. She was educated in Scituate and had lived in Cohasset for 65 years.

Mrs. Sladen worked at Hugo's and in the Deer Hill School cafeteria until her retirement. During World War II she worked at the Hanover Fireworks Company making rockets that were used on the decks of LSTs.

She was a member of Order of Eastern Star and the Cohasset Senior Citizens group.

She loved gardening, flowers, and reading.

An avid traveler, she drove to Nova Scotia at age 80 with a friend and she continued to drive a 1967 Chevy until she was 97 years old.

Wife of the late John E. Sladen, she leaves two sons, Donald E. Sladen of Scituate and Sheldon F. Sladen of Cohasset; seven grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren and three great-great grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 10 in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., by the Rev. Wallace Cedarleaf. Private burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

There are no visiting hours.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset and Norwell.

Donations may be made to charity.

Civics 101

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

First Amendment to the United States Constitution

Of course the Fourth of July celebrates that firecracker document, The Declaration of Independence, penned by Jefferson and adopted by the Constitutional Convention in 1776.

Important as any first chapter, the Declaration remains prelude to the refinement that is the United States Constitution—in which its positions receive the imprimatur of statute.

The Constitution was written by 55 delegates representing the 13 states in the summer of 1787. Two years later in September the Bill of Rights was adopted. It is these first 10 amendments that enunciate clearly to the world the Rights of Man so eloquently defined and defended in the Declaration.

As courage is the first virtue—without which there can be no others—the First Amendment to the United States Constitution stands to our system of representative democracy.

In these concise 45 words the framers constructed a protective edifice to shelter humanity from the inevitable attempts to curtail freedom that governments (by nature) are wont to make.

It should never be forgotten that the founders saw government as a necessary evil—not a good—not the source of human rights. The Constitution not only outlines the duties of government and its various parts—it protects the people from mis-government at the most basic points.

Likewise it should never be forgotten that the First Amendment enforces by statute the rights enumerated by Jefferson's Declaration—rights which he so wisely placed in the hands of a higher authority (equally wise, never characterized by any particular religious persuasion)—away from the corruption of potential tyrants and political parties operating in their own narrow interests.

The mere 10 words concerning freedom of speech and the press in the First Amendment, are as dear to the rights of Americans as any other.

In our troubled times, when ideologies left and right call for curtailment of opposing opinion and censorship of others, it is well to re-read the First Amendment—in fact the entire Bill of Rights might be in order this Fourth—to remind us where we come from and who we are.

—Richard Small

Harborfest float was a group effort

To the Editor:

As chairman of the parade float committee for the Lightkeepers Corporation, I would like to take this opportunity to thank those who helped with the float for the Harborfest parade.

I think all would agree that it was a beautiful float.

Special thanks to the following volunteers: Bob Barrow, a great carpenter; Muriel Silvia, for contributing her ideas and helping Jean; Maria Petrakis, The "Sweetes gal" and queen of the float.

Wigmore Pierson, the gentleman on the float with his eye on the lighthouse; Peter Laugelle, for letting us use his ever-green grass; Harold Litchfield, for the sand that created the "beach" image; Norma Kravette, Carousel Antiques, for the use of the lantern; Bob Figueredo, for the telescope.

Jean Higgins, donation of lumber for the float; Bob Dennis, the door of the "residence"; Frank Carey, the rope that gave that nautical look; Arthur Lehr, plank sign and the logs; Kit Bryant, the "Lightkeeper's House 1863" sign.

Susan Petrakis, great painting job; Michael Jones, his vehicle and trailer that carried the float; Richard Jones, a great driver; and Marge Ritter, her expertise on arranging the float.

Last, but certainly not least, Jean and Manny Salvador, for putting up with us in their driveway while putting the float together. Jean, there just isn't enough that can be said. You put heart and soul (and a bruised ankle) in the concept, design and construction of the float. Thank you!

It's great to see so many people involved in a community project. Keep up the good work, Keith, Bob, Jim and all the others that made this possible.

Merle S. Brown
Float Chairman

Festival coverage was 'wonderful'

To the Editor:

On behalf of the South Shore Art Center, I wanted to thank you for the wonderful coverage you gave our 38th annual Art Festival and the Cohasset Harborfest. Well over 10,000 people visited the Common and the Art Center over the three-day period!

The community spirit that this weekend evokes is beautifully illustrated by the hundreds of volunteers, businesses and organizations that contribute their time, energy and financial support. We are most grateful to all who help, and, in particular, the Mariner newspapers for their support.

Thank you again for all your efforts to publicize Art Festival/Harborfest. And, please note next year's dates: June 17-19, 1994!

MWRA reform supported

State Senator Brian J. McDonald says that a bill that he and Representative Ronald Mariano filed which would prevent the MWRA from taking Local Aid funds from communities has taken a major step forward in the uphill battle to become law.

According to McDonald, the bill has been sent to the Taxation Committee as the first step in the legislative process. "What is most significant about this important piece of Legislation being referred to the Taxation Committee is the recognition that the issue of whether or not a community should be held liable for delinquent ratepayers is an important consideration," McDonald said.

"Should the MWRA be the party that has the responsibility of collecting delinquent payments from ratepayers or should the towns within the MWRA be forced to lay off police and firefighters to make up for MWRA fees that individuals cannot afford to pay," McDonald added.

McDonald also said that he was encouraged that Senator William Keating (D-Sharon), who is the Senate Chairman of the Taxation Committee, has signed onto the bill.

Cohasset's conservationist extraordinaire is honored

John F. Hubbard was awarded the Certificate of Acknowledgement to non-members for conservation by the Garden Club of America at its meetings held in Cohasset recently hosted by the Cohasset Garden Club. The citation read "For his extensive conservation knowledge, capable administrative abilities, effective leadership, tireless energy and participation with town and civic groups."

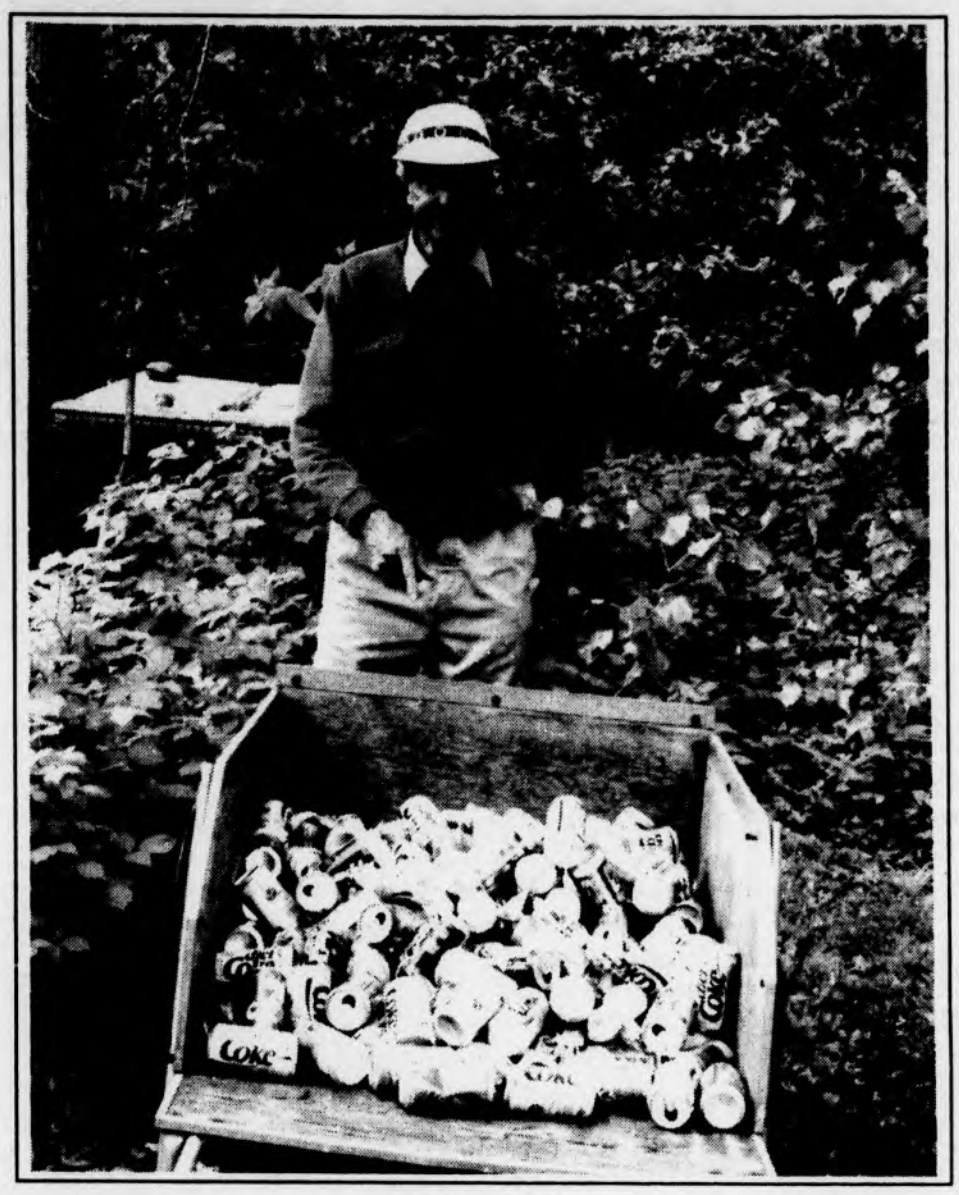
Mr. Hubbard's record of service to the community and the South Shore was testified to in a series of letters from conservation organizations, citing him as "noncombatant environmental who has an unflagging commitment to the ideals of conservation and the environment." His record of service includes:

• Chairman and co-founder of the Cohasset Conservation Trust where he is very active in land preservation, promoting the natural features of Cohasset.

• Member of the Cohasset Conservation Committee for over twenty years and often chairman, furthering our ideals and goals for protecting our natural benefits.

• Trustee of Manomet Bird Observatory in Manomet, holding key positions since 1974 and participating in various field research programs including one in Argentina.

• Member and original developer of the Cohasset Recycling Committee some fifteen years ago, where he continues to hold home composting demonstrations and help maintain the community compost pile at the transfer station.



Jack Hubbard

• President of Board, the Hull Life Saving Museum, and Director of the Alden Ocean Shell Association, Eliot, Maine.

• Director of the Gulf Association of Scituate where he counsels and assists the high school and the water department in water quality testing. The Gulf River runs into Cohasset Harbor and the association is considering applying to have the Gulf become an area of critical environmental concern, a state designation.

• Co-founder of the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham, an organization devoted to treating and rehabilitating injured wildlife and returning them to the wild. Currently is an active fundraiser by collecting and returning deposit bottles and cans with the help of many other South Shore residents.

• Formerly an alternate for the Massachusetts Bay Program, a governmental program to coordinate communities in controlling pollution.

The Garden Club of America is a national organization founded in 1913 whose purpose is to restore, improve and protect the quality of the environment through programs and action in the fields of conservation, civic improvement, and education.

Public recreation serves a 'vital' purpose

By Jack Worley
Special to the Mariner

The month of July is set aside each year, as National Park and Recreation Month.

Recreators throughout the USA share common objectives and goals, the most universal, perhaps being, to encourage people to participate in leisure-time activities. More acutely stated, recreators would like to see everyone participate in new and unfamiliar, as well as the more familiar activities. Not everyone will be inclined to participate in new, or different activities, but those who do, should be well rewarded for their efforts.

Recreation can manifest in countless ways and as a discipline, recreation has no concrete boundaries, or exclusions. The classical definition of recreation states a prerequisite condition, in that it must be the "constructive use of leisure time." Whether or not leisure-time pursuits must be "constructive," may at best be a philosophical question. "Constructive," in this sense may not refer to productivity, but rather, may mean to cognitively plan or structure time for leisure pursuits. That is, we do not need to perform constructively, but need only to provide some sort of format and time for our leisure pursuits.

Recreation can be a very relative and personal sort of endeavor and we must remember, that what may be recreation for one individual, could be a life's work for another individual. If there were any prerequisite conditions to recreation, it very well might be that the activity should provide us diversion from lifes daily chores.

As a socially inclined species, man has an inherent need to socialize and recreational activity often satisfies this need, as well as other basic inclinations. We can recreate group settings, or quietly alone and whichever format seems most appealing to us at a given time remains dynamic and relative to other factors. Often, we pursue recreational activity as an emotional, as well as physical diversion from our daily lives and in this respect, recreation can often be therapeutic.

It is important for us to understand that we must schedule recreation into the structure of our daily activities. Like many other good intentions that we all have, our time for recreating can often be displaced by other, seemingly more urgent and pressing aspects of our lives. Left to chance alone, many of us would be negligent, providing recreational time and opportunity.

We learn to recreate, largely through developed habit. That is, we develop the habit of seeking leisure activity, often at a very young age, from access and exposure to opportunity. In this sense, recreation is education. One of the most vital charges of public recreation is to provide all residents with equal access and exposure to leisure opportunity.

This particular charge is important as it relates to all aged residents, but especially vital regarding children's services. Through access and exposure to recreational opportunity, children develop the habit of recreating. That is! they learn to seek leisure-time activities thru reinforced opportunity. Once learned and developed, the habit of pursuing leisure-activity, should serve us well for a life-time.

Recreation can be anything you desire it to be and may serve or not serve and purpose. It may be productive, or non-productive, provide, or not provide any source of exercise. However, recreation should provide us with gratification, enjoyment, and diversion from life's daily activities. Keep an open mind to new and different sorts of activities, set aside structured and appropriate time for leisure activity. As the slogan says: "LIFE, BE IN IT!!"

Cohasset Democrats caucused on Saturday, June 19 and elected the following Democrats to be delegates to the 1993 Massachusetts Democratic Convention: Roseanne McMorris, Donna McGee, Daniel Kearney, and Randall Nash. Elected alternates are John Norris, Arthur O'Leary, Patricia Laugelle, and Karen Corcoran. Democratic State Committeeman Fred Koed and Democratic Town Committee Chairperson Chartis Langmaid will also be delegates.

The 1993 Massachusetts Convention will take place Oct. 16 at the Worcester Centrum. Over 3,500 voting delegates, elected at Party caucuses throughout the state June 19, will be joined by local Democratic Committee Chairpersons, State Committee members, and Democratic Legislators and Constitutional Officers. They will adopt a Party Platform/Political Agenda for Massachusetts and will consider amendments to the "Charter of the Democratic Party of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The Massachusetts Democratic Party Affirmative Action and Outreach Program allows for underrepresented segments of the population to become "Add On Delegates" by sending an application to the Caucus of Minority Democrats, at the headquarters of the Massachusetts Democratic party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston 02108. Any Cohasset Democrat who is Black, Hispanic, Asian American, Native American, or Cape Verdean; or who is disabled, gay or lesbian, low or moderate income, youth or senior citizen, may apply. The deadline is July 16.

Any registered Democrat in Cohasset may also request to be appointed an election officer by the Selectmen. Please notify Chartis Langmaid at 383-6433 if you which to be included on the list to be submitted. Pay is $5/hour, and you should be available to work the entire election day.

Cancer society elects new officers

Officers of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society for 1993-94 were installed, and outstanding volunteers honored at the recent annual meeting of the unit, which provides extensive volunteer service in the fight against cancer in the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Rose DiPietro, of Quincy, director of home and health resources, Braintree, continues as president of the unit; John Reed, principal of business solutions, Braintree, becomes Vice President; Dr. Walter Kagan of Hingham and South Shore Hematology & Oncology, Quincy, continues as medical director; and Eileen Cooney of Quincy will be secretary. A special presentation was made to Ms. DiPietro for her outstanding leadership.

Awards went to Fr. Bill McCarthy, Quincy, outgoing vice president; Marty Paul, Brockton, outgoing income development chair; and Paula Cushner, Weymouth, outgoing public education chair. Dr. Kagan received special recognition for ten years' service to the American Cancer Society. For her Daffodil Days' fund-raising achievement, Pauline Sweeney, Quincy, received an award, as did Barbara Nermoe and Julie Lacey of Hingham, for organizing a golf tournament at the Cohasset Golf Club.

Certificates for exceptional service went to Eileen Cooney, Quincy; Elizabeth Kirke, Norwell; Kathy Zalis, Randolph; Susan McVeigh, Cohasset; Carol Rizzo, Quincy; Osborne Ingram, Cohasset; and Barbara Tilden of the South Shore Hospital staff.

The following were cited as outstanding volunteers: Donna Nealon, Braintree; Mark Kowalski, Weymouth; John Reed of Business Solutions, Braintree; Denise Valentine of Braintree Medical Associates; Patricia Brice, Hingham; Esther Remick, Quincy; and George Baker, South Weymouth.

Volunteers of the cancer society carry on programs of public and professional education, information and referral, patient visitation and transportation service on the South Shore.

some way or another.

"The kids start very young, and they realize they are working for the church," said Andrea White of Hull, who has helped run the Taverna since the tradition first began.

Her entire family works the Taverna, and they all look forward to doing so.

For the children, there was a game tent and face painting, and they also joined in the fun of dancing.

The children learn the traditional Greek dances at a very early age. Throughout the Taverna weekend, Grecian music was provided by a live band, and three dance troupes performed traditional Greek dances.

One troupe is composed of children, another of teenagers and the third of adults, who dance in traditional Greek costume.

Tony Caramanis, who organized the Grecian dance troupes, said the dancers perform "different dances from various parts of Greece and the islands in three or four versions."

While the troupes are not performing, anybody can get up and dance. Children, teenagers and adults danced together hand-in-hand in a circle that radiated warmth and love for their culture and for each other.

Warmth also radiated in the tummies of all who ate, no devoured, all that delicious, mouth-watering Greek cuisine.

The menu included roast leg of lamb, which is slowly roasted on a spit over a charcoal fire and basted with butter. Spanakopita, pastitsio, moussaka and other traditional Greek dishes were served up and enjoyed.

And for dessert, honey-dripping, sensationally sweet pastries, like baklava and diples, were gobbled up by those who decided to go the extra calorie and with a smile to boot!

Co-chairmen of the Taverna committee, Peter Kulturides and George Papadopoulos were all smiles as well as Taverna '93 was once again "Yassori"!

NOW shows film

The film "Still Killing Us Softly," which explores the way the images of women are used in advertising, will be shown at the July 13 meeting of South Shore NOW, at 7:30 p.m., New North Church, Lincoln Street, Hingham.

Carillon concert Sunday

David R. Hunsberger, Assistant Carillonist at Sather Tower, University of California at Berkeley, will be the featured artist for the third in the current series of ten summer carillon recitals at St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, at 6 p.m. Sunday, July 11.

His varied program will feature original carillon works by Ronald Barnes and Roy Hamlin Johnson, transcriptions of pieces by Bach and Mendelssohn, and a group of arrangements of familiar songs. Mr. Hunsberger has played recitals in North America, France, and New Zealand, and has served as Recording Secretary of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America since 1978.

The 57-bell Taylor carillon in St. Stephen's tower is the largest (by number of bells) in New England, and its 1990 renovation has transformed it into one of the finest carillons in the world. The Cohasset Summer Recital Series, now in its 69th consecutive year, is the oldest continuing carillon series in North America.

Printed programs will be available both on the Cohasset Common and in the courtyard on Highland Avenue behind the church. There is no charge, and the concert will be given rain or shine. Bring lawn chairs and blankets, and enjoy a picnic supper at any of the prime listening places mentioned on the program. Following the recital, those who wish to do so may take a tour of the tower.

For additional information, phone the church at 617/383-1083, or Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's at 508/475-2599.

Special pancake breakfast

One of the most popular of recent Cohasset Historical Society events was the special pancake breakfast held on the grounds of the Caleb Lothrop House in celebration of the Lothrop House's 170th anniversary.

This summer the Historical Society will hold a repeat of the special event; a pancake breakfast Sunday, July 11, on the grounds of the famous old house.

Serving hours for the breakfast will be from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tickets will be be available for $5 per adult, $2.50 for children, available from the Society at its Lothrop House headquarters or at the Maritime Museum, Elm Street in the village, during open hours 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays.

Plan to visit the Cohasset Historical Society's pancake breakfast Sunday, July 11, at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

The Historical Society's phone is 383-6930.

Learn to meditate

John Loupos, chief instructor at Wah Lum Academy and Certified Advanced meditation and chi kung instructor, will offer two Taoist curriculums combined as a single workshop. The Microcosmic Orbit, a sitting meditation, awakens and pilots the Chi, or life force energy, through the body's primary acupuncture meridians, the result being improved health and an enhanced sense of wellness. The Iron Shirt Chi Kung practice entails more movement, actually a series of postures, which then packs the Chi into the organs and tissues to strengthen the nervous, endocrine, immune, and cardiovascular functions. Iron Shirt Chi Kung also teaches how to become more reliant on the structural system of the body, vs the muscles, for optimal efficiency in movement and exercise.

This workshop will be suitable for individuals with no previous experience and is scheduled to be held in a one day format, Sunday, July 11, from 10 a.m. to 6 pm. Cost will be $155. For further information please call John Loupos at 383-6822.

All Paws meet

The next bimonthly members meeting of All Paws Rescue Inc. will be held Tuesday, July 13, at Days Inn, 830 Hingham St., Rockland. It will start promptly at 7:30 p.m. All members and friends are cordially invited to attend.

English choir performs

A concert by the Choir of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, England, will be held at 8 p.m. tonight, at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, 172 Main Street, Hingham.

St. Catherine's College, known to all as "Catz," was founded in 1473 by Robert Wodelarke, who was Provost of King's College. Although originally founded for the study of theology, it has grown over the centuries into a "typical" Cambridge College, providing teaching in all subjects and a lively social life. Music plays a very important part in the college's activities. There are frequent choral, orchestral, and chamber music concerts in various series promoted by the college Music Society; and the college also boasts one of the finest organs in Cambridge, designed by the former Director of Music, Dr. Peter le Huray.

The Chapel Choir was established towards the end of the nineteenth century, when boy trebles sang the top line. After the Second World War, the college relied upon men's voices alone, but in the 1960s, women were drafted in from some of the ladies' colleges to form a normal SATB ensemble. The choir is now mostly made up of both male and female undergraduates of the college, and is run by the Organ Scholars in conjunction with the Director of Music, Dr. W. Dean Sutcliffe.

During term time, the choir sings two services per week, as well as many additional services both in the chapel and outside Cambridge; it delights in presenting many newly-discovered works by Renaissance composers such as Hooper, Wilkinson, Johnson, Tallis and Weelkes. Recent foreign tours have included Germany (1986), Switzerland (1987), Italy (1989), Poland (1990), Scotland (1991), and Hungary (1992). This year's tour is its first venture outside Europe. The Choir has recently recorded a compact disc of "Choral Works" by Kenneth Leighton. This recording, heard on Classic FM radio (UK), constitutes a representative programme of the late composer's choral work, and includes the first British recording of his American commission, "The Beauty of Holiness." The program at St. John's spans music of the sixteenth through the twentieth centuries, including works of William Byrd, Thomas Wilkinson, Henry Purcell, Kenneth Leighton, Peter Warlock, Patrick Hadley, Maurice Durufle, Anton Bruckner, and J.S. Bach.

The concert is open to the public, and donations are welcome.

Art through exchange

The art work of the following students at the Joseph Osgood School was selected to be sent to Sweden as part of CREATE, which stands for "Children Relating Environments in Art Through Exchange." The purpose of the USSEA International Child Art Exchange program is to allow children the opportunity to view the art of children from other countries and to learn more about the country and its people.

The art work included paintings, drawings, collages and prints created during art class with teacher Linda Stevens.

The participants included Devon Coleman, Carlie Carter, Jennifer Buckley, Tim Straughn, Eric Belz, Emily Simmons, Jack Jerz, John Dwyer,Charlie Anderson, Ian Kidder, Krista Nicynski, Martha Wasp, Joseph Meallo, Kelsey Abbruzzese, Jacob Morgan and Diedre Bigley-White. Congratulations to these students for a job well done!

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) has begun work on the popular School Calendar for 1993-94.

Any school-affiliated club, civic or community organization which would like to be included, at no charge, in the community listings is invited to call Carol Riley (383-6215), or send your information to PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025. All groups previously listed on the 1992-93 calendar will be contacted to confirm their listings.

Study skills workshop

A series of two-session study skills workshops for junior high and high school students will once again be held at the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library on Tuesday and Thursday, August 24 and 26, or Monday and Wednesday, August 30 and Sept. 1 from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The workshops are designed to teach students, regardless of current skills or grade level, how to better organize themselves for school. Topics will include note-taking, outlining, time-management, and test-taking strategies, along with practical solutions to better prepare students for the upcoming school year.

Next year's Cohasset High School seniors — the Class of 1994 — wasted no time last month in taking over the senior study, which is now officially theirs.

Classes will be taught by Leslie Goldberg, M.Ed., Educational Consultant and Nancy Blumberg, M.Ed., Learning Specialist, both of whom specialize in methods and motivation. Enrollment is limited to 20 students per session, and an early registration discount is available to those paid by July 15. For information call 749-2074 or 749-4929.

Logo design contest

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 is holding a logo design contest for Cohasset students in grades 7-12. The prize is a $100 savings bond.

Logo designs for T-shirts for the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund must be submitted by July 31 to the American Legion Post, 93 Summer St. (between the hours of 3 and 10 p.m.) or mailed to PO Box 118, Cohasset 02025.

Christine was a student at Cohasset High who lost her life in an automobile accident in 1987. T-shirts bearing the winning logo will be on sale at the Christine Burke Memorial Fund Clambake Sept. 11 at Sandy Beach. A scholarship in Christine's memory is awarded annually to a student selected by the American Legion post.

Theater, art program

The South Shore Art Center is offering preschoolers and their parents two days of theater and art in a new program called "Through the Artist's Looking Glass." Participants will enjoy theatre-in-the-round at the South Shore Music Circus followed by a box lunch and artistic exploration at the Art Center. "Alice in Wonderland Day" will be featured July 22 while "Beauty & the Beast Day" will be held August 26.

Julie Hawkins-Burnham will help the artists create their own artistic wonderland after seeing "Alice in Wonderland" while Helen Duncan will guide artists through their artistic interpretations of "Beauty & the Beast." Both sessions meet from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The cost, which includes admission to the play and a box lunch, is $22 per person per play for members and $25 per person per play for nonmembers.

The South Shore Music Circus is located on Sohier Street (off Route 3A) in Cohasset; the Art Center is around the corner at 119 Ripley Road. Pre-registration is required; please call the Art Center at (617)383-9548.

The Verdict Is In.....

Expertly trained court reporters are in demand.

Aquinas College at Milton is NOW accepting applications for our "Court Reporting Program," using the Stenomask Verbatim method. This is the only program in the region that is approved by The National Stenomask Verbatim Reporting Association. Today's demand for expertly trained court reporters is high...tomorrow's demand will be higher.

Our unique class schedule allows students to concentrate on only 2 courses at a time, which meet 4 days per week for 6 weeks. Classes are offered both day and evening.

Kim Tranmer of Cohasset was recently named referral specialist of The Rehabilitation Center at South Shore Hospital. In this new position, Tranmer will be responsible for introducing physicians and insurance companies to South Shore Hospital's new outpatient rehabilitation center scheduled to open July 1993.

Kim Tranmer

The Rehabilitation Center, which will include warm and cool water therapeutic pools, will be staffed by physical therapists, speech language pathologists, registered nurses, a vocational counselor, social worker and neuropsychologist, all under the medical direction of a physiatrist, a physician whose specialty is physical medicine and rehabilitation. The center's programs were designed in conjunction with New England Rehabilitation Hospital in Woburn.

Before joining South Shore Hospital, Tranmer had been a marketing representative for two years for Back in Action of Texas, a rehabilitation center specializing in chronic back and neck injuries. Prior to that, Tranmer was an account executive for a major advertising agency in New York. She received her bachelor of arts degree in journalism from Southwest Texas State University.

Quincy Hospital recently announced the appointment of George Louis Herlin, M.D., as its new chief of Anesthesia Services.

He previously served as chief of Anesthesia and chairman of the Department of Surgery for Presbyterian Healthcare Services, Albuquerque, New Mexico. He was Clinical Associate Professor at the University of New Mexico and at the University of Texas Medical Branch.

Dr. Herlin graduated from the University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Texas, in 1975. He completed an internship and residency at the Naval Regional Medial Center, San Diego, California, between 1975 and 1978. Dr. Herlin is Board certified in Anesthesia.

Dr. Herlin resides in Cohasset with his wife Nancy and two sons Patrick, age 2, and Peter, 6 months.

Stephen Ng, deputy chairman and managing director of Wharf Cable, based in Hong Kong, recently announced the appointment of David Keefe of Cohasset as cable operations director to head up the company's Cable Operations group, responsible for network planning and operations, marketing and customer services.

Keefe was a founding partner of American Cablesystems Corporation and was the driving force in bringing cable television services to the South Shore. Keefe left American Cablesystem in 1991 after the company was sold to Continental Cablevision. He then started Q Television Corporation in Massachusetts and assumed chief operating responsibilities in radio and televisions properties.

Keefe lives in Cohasset with his wife, Pamela, and their three children, Matthew, Benjamin, and Emily.

MedChem Products, Inc. (NYSC: MCH) announced recently the election of James F Marten, Ph.D., to the position of chairman of the Board of Directors. Dr. Marten replaces David A Swann, Ph.D., who recently left the company to serve as Chairman, president and chief executive officer of Anika Research, Inc., previously a wholly owned subsidiary of MedChem Products, Inc.

James F. Marten, Ph.D. has served on MedChem's Board of Directors since 1983 and has been chief financial officer and treasurer of the company. Dr. Marten also served as president, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of directors of Fresenius USA, Inc., a medical supplies manufacturer which was previously named Delmed, Inc. In addition, he has been chairman and chief executive officer of UltraCision, Inc., a medical device manufacturer, since 1988. Dr. Marten resides in Cohasset, Massachusetts.

MedChem Products, Inc., headquartered in Woburn, develops, manufactures and markets unique medical products that facilitate minimally invasive and cost effective medical procedures. MedChem's two major product lines are the Avitene® family of hemostasis products and Gesco's Per-Q-Cath® family of intravenous catheters for neonatal and adult intravenous drug therapy. Gesco International, Inc. is a wholly owned subsidiary of MedChem Products.

Soccer squad brings state title East

that honor.

"It was a great feeling to get a state championship to Cohasset," said Shultz. "It had never been done in any tournament. It was gratifying."

The real fun started for the team when it swept all three games in the playoffs, which were held in Duxbury. The clincher came when Cohasset dropped Hanover 2-1, after losing and tying the regular season champions during their two initial meetings.

Things only got better when the 15-member team travelled to UMass-Amherst for the state championship tourney odyssey. With more than 80 teams of varying age groups, on the boys' side alone, the enormous athletic field area was buzzing with activity. Players still in high school roomed in the college dorms and got a real feel of what high-quality tournament action was all about.

"There were so many games going on on so many different fields," said Shultz. "It was really a great weekend."

The Cohasset team didn't allow itself to be distracted as it won all five games in the round-robin tournament. Shultz's players scored 20 goals, while the opposition could only get five tallies past goaltender Chris McKenna.

"He played out of his mind," Shultz said of his sharp netminder. "He shut them down pretty well. One goal a game is outstanding in a tournament like this."

Cohasset sweeper Matt Rossi considered McKenna's play the major factor in the team's success in the tourney.

"Our goalie really came up big," Rossi said. "You just stand there and say 'how did he do that?

"He just gets the ball every time and do anything to get it. He's amazing."

Each team was guarantied three games in the tourney. Cohasset blew by its competition, defeating Acton-Boxboro (3-0), Brookline (5-2) and Leicester (5-1) to set the stage for the semifinal game against West Springfield.

The Western Mass squad was the same one that eliminated Cohasset from the tourney last year in the semifinals, but there would be no carbon-copy repeat of their '92 meeting.

"We had a little revenge factor going," said Shultz. "We just peaked at the right time."

Cohasset fell behind 1-0 early, but managed to tie the game as they continued to play the best soccer of the season. Finally, with just a minute left, Ken Leahy drilled home the winning goal to put Cohasset in the finals against Auburn.

The finals turned out to be an anticlimactic following the tough game against West Springfield.

Once again, Cohasset found itself behind 1-0 in the early-going. Jim Magner tied the game on a penalty kick as the first half wound down to a close, setting the stage for Cohasset's biggest half of the the '93 season.

The team came out for the second half and simply blitzed Auburn with four goals — two from Kevin McKenna — within minutes of each other to put the game out of reach in a hurry, and the championship trophy in Cohasset's hands.

"We exploded for four goals early in the second half and the game was out of reach," Shultz said.

He gave credit to the entire team, which had to make-do without one of its better players — Ben Redfield — who injured his ankle in one of the earlier tourney games and was lost to the team for the remaining games.

"Every single player played well above their heads," Shultz said. "That's what you have to do to win tournaments like this and that's what they did."

Stopper Brett MacQuarrie also had a big tournament for Cohasset in dogging the oppositions' most dangerous players.

"He'd see the best player on the team and he'd stay with him," Rossi said. "He was never beat. It made my job a lot easier."

The championship was as special for Shultz as it was for the players.

A recent graduate of Bowdoin College, where he played on the varsity soccer team, Shultz and assistant coach Steve Meyers were both members of Cohasset High School's soccer team which reached the Division 3 State Finals during Shultz's junior and senior year, only to lose both games in overtime.

"It's nice to come back and coach," he said. "It was a lot of fun. I'd definitely like to try and do it again. We had more support and better fans than most teams out there."

Rossi probably summed up the season best.

"I had mixed thoughts," he said of the beginning of the regular schedule. "I knew we definitely had the talent, but I didn't know when we would put it all together. I had the feeling we'd be going to Amherst.

"It was more of a surprise. It took a while to sink in that we were actually champions. We rose to the occasion and knew what we had to do and took hold of it.

"We have a lot of great players and we showed it."

Nobody is doubting that in Cohasset. Championship teams are made up of great players and the town finally has one.

Landsharks feed on Avon, 20-4

By Mike Rolandelli
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Landsharks took the field last Wednesday for the second time in a thorough 20-4 shellacking of once bitten, twice shy Avon squad.

Chris Rolandelli pitched five innings of two-hit, one-run baseball and got plenty of run support from his teammates. Jonah Berger came up big for the Sharks with three singles and four RBI. Peter Fahey chipped in as well going 3-for-4, as did Scott Theriault who had a key triple in the third inning. In the sixth, however, Rolandelli teed off on an Avon fastball and launched a SCUD missile to right-center field for the grand-slam home run.

Ben Berger took the hill with plenty of slack in the sixth inning and painted the corners in the final two innings to slam the door on Avon. The Landsharks are now 2-0 with 15 games to play in the regular season.

The Landsharks are a big league baseball team of 16-, 17- and 18-year-old Cohasset baseball players. They have an intense and very competitive schedule through July with a statewide tournament planned for July 24 and 25 at Fraser Field in Lynn, Mass.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

The Hingham Fourth of July Road Race had its biggest race ever on Sunday as 905 official entrants took part in the 35th annual event. Race director David Drohan, the volunteers and Spitler Race Systems, which pumped out accurate results as fast as the runners finished, should be commended for their work in making the race the most popular on the South Shore.

Third-place finisher Mike Atwood, a middle-distance and steeplechase specialist at Boston College made an interesting point after the race which officials may want to consider in the future running of the event.

Atwood believes lengthening the course 4/10 of a mile to make it an even 5 miles may be a good idea. The Extra Points crew agrees the idea should at least be taken into consideration for one very good reason. With its point-to-point, downhill layout, there's no doubt a vast number of runners would come away from the race with personal records at the new 5-mile distance.

Although it doesn't make sense to add the distance at the finish line because crossing another intersection would be added, there is ample room to move the start back the required distance from the Hingham Middle School. It's doubtful runners would mind jogging or walking the distance from the school, where they check in, up the street towards Queen Anne's Corner. The runners could use the move for a warm-up jog or to collect their thoughts in the minutes leading up to the race. A personal record could be waiting for them at the finish.

Runners glancing at the pre-registrations, taped on the wall at the middle school, took a double-take when they saw the names of four entrants in the early-morning race. Among the throng of 905 were BB Calnan, Mad Max Calnan, Ravin Dave Calnan and Buckwheat Calnan. Max must have been sweltering in the leather pants and jacket.

For those who persevered through the sticky 4.6 miles, it may be good to know they were running for more than a solid finishing time. Proceeds from the race will go towards two $1,000 scholarships for the male and female at Hingham High School who most exemplify the scholar/athlete image the school tries to maintain. Drohan said before the race that the amount will be raised to $1,500 for next year's race.

If it's July it can only mean one thing, the Bay State Games.

While many people lament about professional athletes like Jack "Mr. BMW" Clark, the Bay State Games is what sport is really about.

More than 4,500 amateur athletes from 347 towns throughout the state will participate in the four day competition which kicks off July 15.

Former Boston Bruin Bobby Orr, who is one of the most gracious people one can ever meet, is the honorary coach and this year WBZ-TV's Bob Lobel will be

Cohasset woman wins Palm Beach Open Championship

Diane Johnston of Cohasset recently competed in West Palm Beach, Florida, for the Amateur Adult Jumper Championship against riders from all over the U.S.

Classes consisted of jumps ranging from 3'6" to 4' with spreads 6'. Scores were determined by speed and accuracy over various types of fences, including water jumps, liverpools and others.

Johnston has competed locally in the Myopia Hunter Trials, New England Hunter Trials and the Boston Jumper Classic. She will compete this summer and fall in these shows and the Eastern State exposition.

Johnston has two competition horses: All-American Holsteiner, Aida, and an Irish thoroughbred Spencer. She is a member of the Myopia Hunt and trains with Michael Keogh and David Boley.

An Extra Points brush with greatness

One of the Extra Points crew was in Kennebunkport, Maine over the July 4th weekend and saw former president George Bush.

"I was out jogging Saturday afternoon and about halfway through the run I saw this fleet of cars," said the EP crew member. "I could tell something was up because each car had its lights on despite the fact that it was a sunny day. There were seven cars in total with the first three and the last three being unmarked sedans filled with guys in suits and sunglasses.

However, the fourth car was a long black limousine. The car drove by quickly but I saw a flash of bushy white hair inside that had to be Barbara. I shot a little wave but did not get one in return. I guess Bush still has a thing against the Press."

Congratulations to Norwell's Derek Sulc and Pembroke's Amy King for participating in the first World Scholar-Athlete Games in Rhode Island from June 20 to July 1.

Athletes from more than 100 countries made the journey to Rhode Island to partake in the sports and cultural exchange program.

Sulc, who will be a sophomore at Princeton in the fall, had an eventful few days on the soccer field.

During the playoffs he jumped to reach a header and collided with another play. He received ten stitches above his left eye.

He was back the next day and got whacked in the nose by an errant arm. He broke his nose and received two more stitches.

"I still have two pretty good shiners," he said.

As for King, a junior at Silver Lake, she suffered no injuries on the basketball court. However, on her team was a player from Ireland who had been shot the year before in an act of terrorism.

"It was a very interesting time and I had a lot of fun," King said.

The ninth annual MainSpring Golf Charity Open was a huge success this year. Sponsored by the Jack Conway & Company and held at the Easton Country Club, the event, which is held to aid the homeless, raised more than $7,000, a healthy increase over last year.

Young Life tourney, July 12

Young Life, helping teenagers in Hingham and Cohasset, will be sponsoring the Fourth Annual Invitational Golf Tournament Monday, July 12 at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St. Hingham.

Check-in will be at 12:30 p.m., followed by a shotgun start at 1 p.m., 6:30 p.m. reception and 7:15 p.m. dinner.

The format will be a 18 hole, four person, team Florida Style Scramble.

Entry fees are $90 for an individual, $325 for a foursome and $35 for an awards dinner.

The entry fee includes a greens fee with cart, a dinner prepared by "Tastefully Yours," tennis, swimming pool (separate fee) and locker facilities.

Prizes will be presented for men and women teams, hole in one, closest to the tee, longest drive, and raffles.

Applications will be accepted for foresomes or individuals. Individuals will be assigned to a foursome. Latecomers and non-golfing guests are encouraged to join in the celebration festivities at the awards dinner ($35 per person).

For further information, call Corinne Kirkendall, 740-2379 or Peggy Walrod, 749-8490.

Young Life emphasizes relationships. Vounteers spend hours every week involved with teenagers and volunteers go to wherever high school and junior high school students are found. Suicide, sex, drugs, divorce, death, self-image, loneliness, grades, school, church, dates, rejection, acceptance, friends and family are all issues to be heard and understood.

Young Life is a non-denominal Christian organization, ministering to adolescents. The organization is supported by the community from individuals, organizations and churches.

Consignment Sports moves to Cohasset

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Consignment Sports on Country Way in Greenbush is moving to Cohasset. That means skiers, skaters, rollerbladers, cyclists and enthusiasts for any other athletic activity will have to travel a few miles farther to trade in their gently used equipment.

Owner Ed Kelley got the idea for the business after purchasing new hockey skates for $70 each year for his son, Mark, who, now 16, manages the store.

Kelley said his business would benefit from the increased exposure at his new location on Route 3A, next to Dwyer's Cleaners.

He has been renting the space in Greenbush on a temporary basis from J. Michael Landscaping of Scituate.

"I knew I was going to have to get out eventually. I'm hoping that my new location brings more business," said Kelley, who will pay more in rent for his new site, which includes heat and air conditioning.

With the increased visibility, Kelley hopes to save on advertising.

"I try to do everything as inexpensively as possible. I opened this place on a shoestring."

Actually, he opened the business with the help of neighbors and friends. "For rent, shelving and advertising, it cost me $1,500 to start."

Kelley gives consigners 70 per cent of the asking price of the item after it is sold. He holds gear indefinitely, knowing at some point it will sell. His rule of thumb for pricing: half the purchase price.

But Kelley finds the bulk of his stock by visiting up to 60 yard sales each weekend. He finds $3 ice skates and brings them back to the store to be marked up for a profit.

"For me to make money here, I have to get my stuff at yard sales. That's my stock." He specializes in hockey equipment, from his days as a youth hockey coach, but he carries a range of sports gear.

Ed Kelley

"I haven't really set my parameters. As long as the stuff is decent and salable," he said.

Kelly, a full-time post office employee, said he started the business "as a lark.

"I just do it because I really enjoy sports," he said. He sharpens skates and re-grips golf clubs in addition to selling the second-hand goods.

Kelley first looked into the consignment business for sports equipment four years ago and sought advice from the managers of Play it Again on Cape Cod and Sports Rebound in Weymouth. Today, Sports Rebound shares purchasing opportunities with Kelley.

Kelley was opening the store in the afternoons from 3 to 7 Wednesday through Friday, from noon to 6 Saturday and 1 to 5 Sunday.

"Wednesday would be a busy day because people would come back after they saw something they wanted in the window," Kelley said.

When the move is completed this week, Kelley may expand his hours. "I'll wait and play it by ear."

Kelley has turned down only one potential consignor, a horse breeder who was trying to sell a saddle.

Another interesting client was an archer who sold him a once-used crossbow.

His favorite conversation with a client, however, was with a man from West Virginia who stopped by the store while in town to be in a friend's wedding.

He asked Kelley to set aside a pair of skis but forgot to pick them up before returning home. A few days later he called Kelley long distance and arranged to ship the skis, plus boots and poles.

Often, customers don't take advantage of a deal when they see it, and the item is sold when they return, Kelley said. One customer deliberated over a $160 wetsuit, negotiated the price, and finally lost out on the deal when another customer bought it for $145.

Kelley offers his customers this advice: "You see it, you like it, you better buy it because it may not be here again."

Tag-a-Keg legislation boosts local by-law

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Following the lead of Cohasset and 50 other Massachusetts communities, the state has adopted a uniform plan to discourage the purchase of beer kegs for minors.

"Tag-a-Keg" legislation became effective across the state July 2 and provides a mechanism for law enforcement officials to trace keg-buyers.

The mechanism is a buyer's identification tag which is affixed to the keg. The tag contains the name and address of the package store where the keg was purchased, and a number. The number corresponds to the name and address of the buyer.

In addition, buyers of keg beer must sign a statement acknowledging that misuse of the keg, or its contents, may result in civil liability, criminal prosecution, or both. The regulation further requires that purchasers leave between a $5 and $20 deposit, depending on the size of the keg.

If the keg is returned without the identification tag, or if the tag is illegible, or if the keg is returned after 60 days, the buyer loses the deposit. The money is put in the town's general fund.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said the state law will give a needed boost to the town's local legislation.

"The state program will be more powerful," Noonan said. "I think the courts may have been leery of this from the local community, but now that the state has passed it, the courts will be more confident enforcing it," he said.

Noonan said since Cohasset passed its own Tag-a-

In 1838 local citizens petitioned the state legislature to have the part of Cohasset on the far side of the Border Street bridge annexed to the town.

"That was probably because of the distances people had to go to church and school," notes local historian David Wadsworth.

That Border Street area included Gulf Island, now known as "Government Island."

The seven-acre parcel was annexed by the U.S. government in 1858 in connection with the construction of the second Minot's Light and became the U.S. Lighthouse Service Shore Station, Gulf Island. The first Minot's light was toppled in a gale in 1851.

In 1946 when lighthouses became automated and the island was declared surplus, the town bought the Champion diver to check Bay State waters

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Fifteen-year-old Dawn Meehan had a decision to make that most athletes can only dream about.

With the Bay State Games qualifier meet quickly approaching, the Milton Academy junior-to-be had to pick between entering the synchronized swimming competition or diving.

She decided to go with the latter.

"I've been doing syncho forever," said Meehan, just hours after taking first place in her diving division during the Cohasset Swim Team's victory over the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

"I decided to give diving a try."

What, in fact, Meehan did was to simply move laterally from one sport she has excelled in since she was eight years old, to another where she has proved to be equally efficient.

Meehan has been the New England Junior Olympic champion in synchronized swimming since she was eight, the first year she participated in the BSG. Synchro had just an open division at the time but that didn't stop Meehan from taking on girls more than twice her age and winning a bronze medal in the solo competition. She went on to win the gold as a 12 year old.

As a diver, Meehan is the defending One-Meter Springboard diving champion in the South Shore Swimming and Diving League. She also was a vital cog in Milton Academy's Independent School League championship squad.

Police, safety news

A boat collision, a couple of motor vehicle accidents, a police pursuit and an arrest made for a busy couple of days in the height of the heat wave for local public safety officials.

A priest sustained minor injuries after the rowboat that he and another priest were in collided with a lobster boat in the harbor Saturday afternoon (July 10).

Harbormaster Irving Gadow said collisions are rare in the harbor which was very congested that afternoon. He said the harbormaster's office had not determined the cause of the accident.

July 11 at about 1:18 a.m., police arrested Mark P. Brennan, 19, of Duxbury for OUI and minor in possession.

A few hours later on July 11 Matthew J. Darrigo, 21, of Scituate, the operator of a vehicle was cited in an accident at Route 3A. The vehicle Darrigo was driving hit an Eastern Edison pole.

Three passengers in the vehicle were transported to the hospital with minor visible injuries, police said.

Darrigo was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes and operating without a license.

Sunday afternoon (July 11) two people were transported to the hospital with minor injuries following a motor vehicle accident at the corner of S. Main and Summer Streets.

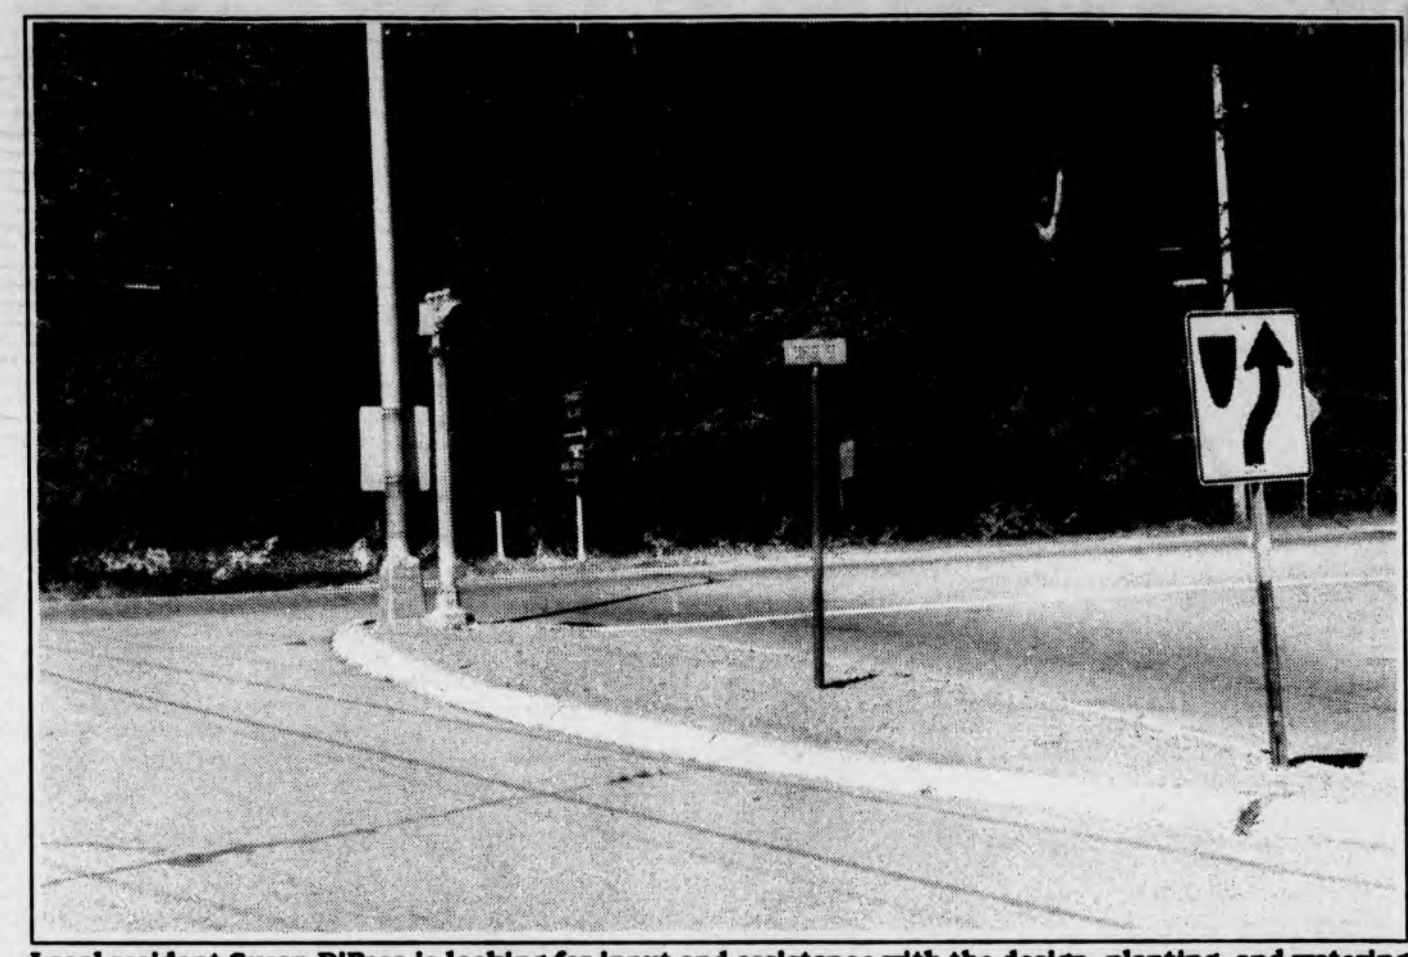
And at 12:21 a.m., July 13, police arrested Vaughn R. Simmons, 27, 23A Highland Ave., following a short pursuit.

Police said Vaughn ran a red light and a stop sign on Sohier Street, and caused yard damage at 72 N. Main, before being apprehended at the highway barn in the village.

Police charged Vaughn with 12 violations including OUI, operating to endanger, speeding, failure to stop at a red light and stop sign, and refusal to stop for a police officer.

As of 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Vaughn had defaulted at his arraignment in Quincy District Court, police said.

The police have been pestered with continual problems at the Border Street bridge. Kids, coming in carloads from out of town, have dropped water balloons on boats, spat and swore at people. The situation is difficult to police because the kids return after police disperse the gathering, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.



Local resident Susan DiPesa is looking for input and assistance with the design, planting, and watering of the island at the corner of Rte. 3A and Sohier Street. It was recently dug up by the town so it can be 'beautified.' If you can help, please leave your name with the selectmen's office at 383-9900 and Susan will get back to you. (Staff photo/Laura Gilpatric)

Linda Berthold

Name: Linda Berthold.

Occupation: Manager, Cohasset Plaza Liquors.

Best day of your life: The day I got this job.

Most embarrassing moment: The day I called the police saying there was an intruder in my friend's house—and it was her parents. My friend and I had gone to the movies, and her parents had left on vacation at the same time. When we got back to the house, lights were on and a door was open, so we thought an intruder was inside. Police charged in the house, guns drawn, only to discover the parents inside. Their car had broken down and they returned home.

Goal: To be successful.

Favorite season: Spring.

Worst vacation: Going to Martha's Vineyard several years ago with my girlfriends. One lost a wallet, another lost a leather jacket, we got in a car accident and then, on the day we were supposed to leave, none of the ferries left the dock because of bad weather. We had to pay $175 for an extra night.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: Procrastinators.

Favorite book: "Kane and Abel," by Jeffrey Archer.

Favorite movie: "Beaches."

Biggest worry: Loss of a loved one.

Favorite place: Arcadia Forest in Maine.

Favorite junk-food: Cheese-its.

FIREPLACE FLUNKS AS HEATER

QUESTION: Is a fireplace an effective method of heating a house?

ANSWER: When the weather is frightful, the fire is delightful. But as a house-heater, it flunks. It actually does a better job of heating the outside than the area in front of the fireplace. Ninety percent of the heat goes straight up and out. Add to this the extremely high cost of firewood and you have a lot of money going up in smoke.

When the fire is not going, be sure the flue is closed or you'll lose 20% of the warm room air out the chimney each hour.

There are ways you can increase the heating efficiency of your fireplace, such as the addition of glass doors, duct vents or hollow tube grates.

Cohasset's burying grounds reflect town's history

By David Wadsworth
Senior curator,
Cohasset Historical Society

As early Colonial settlements planted their roots along New England shores one of the important tasks of each scattered group of farms and homesteads was the setting aside of land for a cemetery or burying ground. Cohasset's early centers of population included small groups of homes located in various parts of the newly populated lands. Largest settlements were those near today's village and Common, at Beechwood and along the shore road leading to the village called Jerusalem or North Cohasset near the boundary of Hingham (today's West Corner).

Each of these villages developed a burying ground for the use of nearby families. Additionally, there was a small burying ground developed midway on Cedar Street near today's golf course, serving families at the western end of today's North Main Street and along Hull Street.

Each burying ground served families in the immediate area, and family names visible on the "old slate" gravestones are those of the earliest Cohasset generations. Of the early burying grounds, all continued to grow beyond their 18th century beginnings to hold the town's 19th century residents, and three remained active by the early 20th century.

Today's early burying grounds still active include Central Cemetery near the Commons, Beechwood Cemetery, and until past the mid 20th century, North Cohasset or Green Gate on Jerusalem Road. The early burying grounds contain numerous examples of "old slates", the almost universal dark gray slate gravestones of Colonial time.

Expansions of the original burying grounds in the 19th century saw the introduction of white marble grave markers. This soft stone allowed the development of more intricate carving of decorative motifs and monuments. However, the white marble stones have suffered severely from erosion in recent time.

By mid 19th century granite had supplanted white marble in Cohasset's burying grounds. Favored stone was Quincy granite, dark gray stone from the quarries of West Quincy, widely used as a high-grade construction material, including Minot's Ledge Lighthouse off Cohasset's shore. Recent years have seen some return to the use of dark slate for gravestones, and to the shape and style of early Colonial markers.

At Central Cemetery, the original Burying Ground on the south-facing slope of the hill is easily visible from Joy Place, itself the early "Road to the Burying Ground". Nineteenth century expansions of Central Cemetery included an addition running southeasterly up the slope to North Main Street and another extending north to the shore of Little Harbor. Slate, marble and granite stones and monuments are found intermixed in the 19th and 20th century expansions of the Burying Ground.

The oldest stone in the cemetery is that of Margaret Tower, wife of Cohasset first settler Ibrook Tower, and is dated 1705. Among the "old slates" of Central Cemetery can be found those of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, the town's first pastor and that of Rev. John Browne, Cohasset's Revolutionary War pastor, ardent patriot who preached the cause of independence to troops departing for the battlefield. Also evident is the marker of Rev. Joseph Osgood of Cohasset's First Parish, respected community leader instrumental in the founding of the town's inside her home. They sleep on beds and sofas, roam freely from room to room, and a pet-door provides them with 24-hour access to the outside.

"My house is all dog," Watson said.

When the septuagenarian began her business 15 years ago she wanted her charges to feel as if they were in their own home. So, she tore up the carpet and left bare wood, put away fragile pieces, bought two second-hand sofas, and was ready for business.

"Wherever I go, they go," she said. "They even have donuts at the donut shop with me," Walton said.

"And I talk to the animals."

Walton, whose permit allows her to board 10 dogs, said the canines mingle well together.

"Dogs are pack animals," she said. "First they get to know each other, and then they get along."

Walton's clients have included cats, and an occasional rabbit. The cats, like the dogs, are free-roamers, but the rabbit is caged.

She said her personal touch to boarding animals is what keeps her customers coming back.

"I'll pick them up at the airport and I send owners pictures of them when they are separated for a long time," Walton said.

Clients reciprocate, she said. "I get Christmas cards and letters from clients, telling me how the animals are doing."

She added that long separations between owner and dog have enabled her to witness remarkable reunions.

"This one dog's owners were gone for 13 months overseas," Walton explained. "When he came to pick her up, as soon as the dog saw him, she crawled on her belly the whole way over to him. The dog was crying, the owner was crying. I never saw an animal so happy. It proved to me that they do remember," she said.

Walton's love of animals began at age 2, she said.

"I was put on a Shetland pony and have loved animals ever since." Walton began her business in 1978, after her mother passed away.

"I was lonely, and told a friend I was thinking of taking in dogs," she explained. "Three days later, a man in a Cadillac drove to my house, handed me two leashes and said 'I'll be back in three months.' My friend was with him. And that's how it started," Walton said.

The energetic animal-lover worked for several years on the board of the Animal Rescue League. She said her reason for joining was to convince others that if animals must be killed, it should be by injection, not the League method of suffocation.

Walton left her position on the board, after several years, once the League changed its policy toward putting animals to sleep.

Other Walton women have also devoted themselves toward better treatment of animals. Walton's daughter in New York rescues cats from allies and finds homes for them, she said.

centralized school system and public library, who died in 1898.

Clergymen, merchants, seafarers, actors and summer colony residents are buried at Central Cemetery. Numerous of Cohasset's "Deep Sea Captains" and sailors can be seen memorialized. More than a few have gravestones having the legend "Lost at Sea". Central Cemetery is a virtual genealogical record of the town's early families and leading citizens. Originally a municipal burying ground, Central has been, since the 1860's, owned and maintained by a private organization, the Central Cemetery Association.

Beechwood Cemetery also contains an "old slates" area going back to 1734, as well as later marble and granite stones. At Beechwood generations of early families of that section are seen. Prominent is the stone of Aaron Pratt, called "Squire Pratt", many times a public benefactor to the Beechwood community and the town in the latter 19th and early 20th centuries. For more than two centuries Beechwood Cemetery was privately owned. Today it is a municipal cemetery.

At North Cohasset, just off Jerusalem Road, Green Gate Cemetery also contains old slates, marble and granite stones and monuments. Burials there extend to as recent time as the 1960's. The cemetery, which includes Hingham as well as Cohasset names, is maintained by the Town of Cohasset under terms of the Charlotte Lincoln Bell Trust.

Midway along Cedar Street, amid greens and fairways of Cohasset Golf Club, another small and early burying ground exists, active only from the 1700's to just past the mid 1800's. Cedar Street Cemetery once served a cluster of families in the Hull Street and westernmost North Main Street area, but the last burial there dates from 1876.

Gov't Island up for a National Register review . . .

island back from the government for $29,000 in a 377-2 vote at town meeting.

That's just a brief look at the very rich history of the island which may soon qualify to be listed on the National Register of historic places.

The Cohasset Historical Commission has prepared the inventory for the nomination which will be considered at the September meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC).

The MHC reviews the nomination and votes whether or not to give it state approval. If approval is obtained, the MHC forwards the nomination to the Department of Interior which makes the final decision.

The National Register is the nation's official list of buildings, districts, sites, structures, and objects important in American history, culture, architecture or archeology, according to documentation provided by the MHC.

Wadsworth, who serves on the Cohasset Historical Commission, a town board, said the commission began in earnest to get the inventory together for the nomination several years ago.

The board obtained the go-ahead from selectmen because the nomination involved town-owned land.

The only property in Cohasset currently listed on the National Register is the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street. The Lothrop House, a brick-ended federalist style home, is the owned by the Cohasset Historical Society, a private, non-profit organization.

Wadsworth explained that the MHC will consider the history of Government Island and its association with the construction of the lighthouse in addition to structures on the site like the "circles" or templates where the granite for the light house was cut and tested for accuracy and the replica of the Minot's Light watch room as well as the lightkeepers' house among other buildings.

Structures at the site not included in the inventory or ones rejected for inclusion by the MHC are called "intrusions."

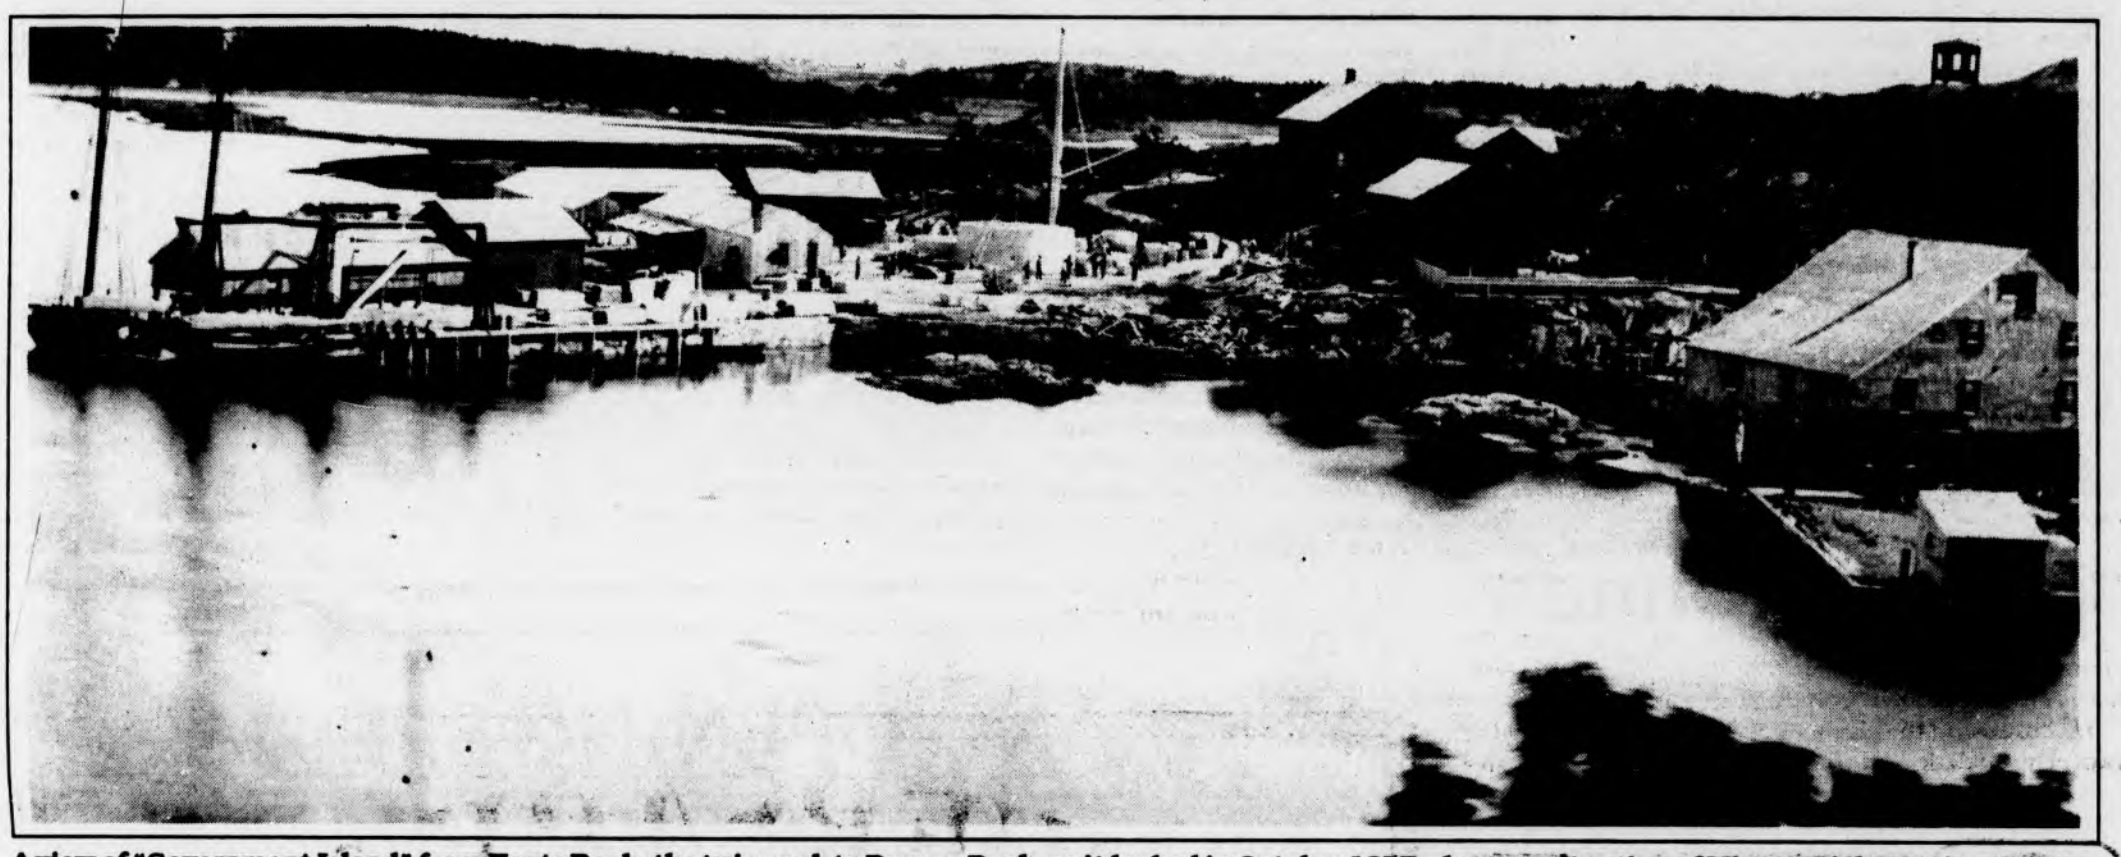
Wadsworth explained that the MHC is partial to lighthouses. In the early 1980s the commission nominated all remaining Massachusetts lighthouses, including Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, to the National Register.

The criterion for acceptance of an "area" to the National Register isn't as rigid as for an individual building like the Lothrop House because it contains many points of interest, he said.

Wadsworth is optimistic that the lightkeepers' house — being renovated by volunteers through the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, a private, non-profit organization — will be included because of its historic significance. The renovation of the house, which includes some changes to the exterior, is not restoration of a historic building in the purist sense.

Benefits of being listed on the National Register include recognition, some tax incentives, eligibility for

(See page 7)



A view of "Government Island" from Kents Rock, the twin peak to Beacon Rock, as it looked in October 1857 when construction of Minot's Light was in progress. Note the barns in the background which later became the lightkeepers' residences, one of which still stands today and is being renovated through the efforts of the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation. The large building, far right, was the Gulf Grist Mill which later burned to the ground in 1862.

P[illegible]rvation grants, and protection from adverse affects of projects paid for by the state or federal governments.

There are about 53,000 properties in Massachusetts on the National Register, Wadsworth explained.

And despite the daunting amount of paperwork, acceptance to the register is worth it.

"There are not many avenues which assist historic preservation through the law — this is the only one readily available," Wadsworth said. "It doesn't guarantee preservation but it encourages it."

The historical commission also recently submitted the inventory of the Cohasset Common Historic District for nomination to the National Register as a historic district. The Common Historic District runs along N. Main Street from Sohier Street to St. Stephen's Church. The preliminary review process by the MHC can take about a year.

Health agent recommends involvement in anti-smoking program

Town Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the town should consider becoming involved in a state-funded "Tobacco Control Program" through the South Shore Coalition, of which Cohasset is a member. The program would make a grant of $100,000 available every year for five years.

Dr. Godzik told the board that the $5 million program will be paid for in part with proceeds from the extra 25 cent cigarette tax.

Criterion for the program include: policy development, education on the hazards of smoking, and starting a smoking cessation program.

Other towns beside Cohasset involved with the Coalition include Hingham, Hull, Hanover, Norwell, Duxbury, Weymouth, Scituate, and Marshfield.

In addressing the chances of the group receiving the grant, Dr. Godzik said that "the state is looking to give this money out, and is encouraging all Boards' of Health to apply for the grant."

Cohasset would serve as the Coalition's "lead town" for this project according to Dr. Godzik, and thus would accept the grant award each year and also pay any bills that are encountered through the program.

Dr. Godzik added that the town accountant has already been approached about handling the billing for this program, and had no problem with taking on the added responsibility.

All towns would have an equal say in matters of policy for the program, with Cohasset's "lead town" status being limited only to the earlier mentioned accounting.

Dr. Godzik said a half-time executive director, two educators, as well as a half-time secretarial clerk would be needed to administer the program.

Dr. Godzik volunteered to take the proposal to selectmen, saying that he did not think that they would have any problem with the Board of Health entering this program.

"Smoking is the most detrimental thing to good health in this state, with over 11,000 deaths last year being directly attributed to smoking" Godzik said.

❑ Walter Johnson was cited recently at Suffolk University! He was presented an Evening Division Student Association (EDSA) award for outstanding faculty member at Suffolk's EDSA Recognition Night award ceremonies held at the Museum of Science in Boston. Congratulations!

❑ More than 170 students received juris doctor degrees from the University of Toledo's College of Law last May, and Bartholomew Zadel of Howard Gleason Road was one of them. Best of luck in the future!

❑ Applause goes to Hope Gaston this week, a sophomore at Holderness School in Plymouth, NH. Hope has been named to the school's honor roll for the spring semester, which means she had an overall numerical average better than 85 and showed outstanding effort in all courses.

Continue your good work Hope, everyone is proud of you!

❑ Eileen P. O'Connor, daughter of Peter and Patricia O'Connor, was graduated May 17 from the University of Notre Dame with a bachelor's degree in history and German. She was also named to the dean's list for outstanding scholarship during the spring semester.

Eileen is a 1989 CHS grad, and here is to your continued success!

❑ Everyone who went to the Art Festival/Harborfest Gala recently undoubtedly noticed the colorful flags at the juncture of North Main and Highland Ave. which welcomed people to the various events. They were the artistic work of Jim Lagrotteria, and it was probably a coincidence that the flag with the Italian Colors sparkled from the highest pole, right?

All of your work looked great, Jim, and you, the rest of the Chamber of Commerce and the Art Center are to be applauded for making it a memorable weekend for all!

❑ Three hundred ninety-seven seventh-graders from Massachusetts were honored for their outstanding verbal and/or mathematical ability at the 1993 annual Talent Search conducted by The Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth in Baltimore, and Cohasset's own Elizabeth Hills and Christopher Laas "made the grade." Christopher was honored at the regional level for high mathematical scores!

Once again CHS students do us all proud.

❑ Yeah, Kristin! Ellinger that is! She was one of 483 seniors who received a bachelor of arts degree at Colby College May 23. Kristin graduated with a major in government and must have enjoyed the commencement speaker, U.S. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole.

We know that you will be very successful, Kristin. Your degree combined with your sparkling personality guarantees it!

❑ Paul G. Froio, son of Ms. Agnes Froio and Dr. Ralph J. Froio, also graduated from Colby May 23. Paul also graduated with a major in government...if those two could run for president and vice president, what a team! Maybe we have just predicted the future, but we won't say which will be which!

Congrats, Paul!

❑ Forty people from 11 families have used the Food Pantry, and their needs that continue include juices, crackers, canned fruit, jams, cereals, rice, detergent, personal products and toilet tissue. Donate one of those above and you will feel so much better!

❑ Accolades go to two gals from our fair town who have earned it! Elizabeth M Gruber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Gruber, and Jennifer L. Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Murray, both of whom received degrees from Boston College last month. Jennifer earned a BS with a major in biology, and Elizabeth graduated Magna Cum Laude with a BA, majoring in communication.

We wish you both the best in the business world!

❑ Can you believe that our own Olive Weisenfluh will be 90 years old this month? July 23 to be exact! Be sure to give her special greetings when you see her; she is one very special lady!

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew O. Christensen

Christensen/Sandblom

At a March 27 ceremony at the Second Congregational Church, Lauren J. Sandblom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell J. Sandblom of Cohasset, became the bride of Andrew O. Christensen of Westminster, Massachusetts.

He is the son of Dr. Owen E. Christensen and the late Patricia (Lundeen) Christensen.

The Rev. Gary Ritts officiated. A reception followed at the Milton Hoosic Club in Milton.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Jodi Sandblom, served as maid of honor.

The groom's friend, Kevin Feen of Ashburnham, Massachusetts was best man.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Plymouth State College. She is employed as a legal assistant at Staples, Inc. in Framingham.

The groom is a graduate of Oakmont Regional High School and Northeastern University. He is a rehabilitation specialist at the Fallon Clinic in Worcester.

After a wedding trip to Barbados, the couple is making their home in Westminster.

Pet-side manner

Local veterinarians, their assistants, and public health officials in area towns have been performing yeoman's service by responding quickly and positively to a public health crisis: rabies.

And we can speak from first-hand experience because we've been to more than our share of rabies clinics lately — partly as reporters and photographers and partly as pet owners.

Each time, we've been impressed with the "pet-side-manner" of animal health officials in providing rabies vaccinations to hundreds of animals as their anxious owners look on.

Saturday's clinic in the town garage in Scituate was no exception.

Despite soaring temperatures and stifling humidity, animals and their owners were handled in an efficient and caring manner — even when faced with a pet emergency.

About an hour into Saturday's clinic, a cat escaped and ran in among the parked tractors and machinery. As far as places to hide go — it was a cat's dream.

But the animal experts on hand didn't panic — nor lose their sense of humor. In a systematic way and in record time, they cornered the cat and got it safely back into its carrier.

Then they bravely tried again to take the same cat out of the carrier to give it its shot. And this time they succeeded.

Rabies, a disease of the nervous system which is transmitted by contact with saliva of an infected animal, is on the rise in Massachusetts. An outbreak of raccoon rabies made it's way to our state last year and is spreading to towns on the South Shore.

Rabies, which can be fatal to humans, could be a crisis of monumental proportions.

But with the kind of professionalism shown by those involved in tackling this dreaded disease — the chance that our pets will provide the link between us and rabies which is infecting wildlife has been greatly reduced.

Historians

Some Cohasset citizens may be unaware of a town treasure: the Cohasset Historical Society.

We have found it to be one of the best around. Its people — like senior curator David Wadsworth and president Burt Pratt — have been extremely cooperative and helpful in providing us with background and stories involving Cohasset's past.

The pancake breakfast Sunday — an annual fund-raiser for the historical society — was a delightful event. If you didn't go, be sure to attend next year to support the private, non-profit group. (Not to be confused with the Cohasset Historical Commission, a town board, which also does good work and consists of many of the same volunteers).

And try to stop by the Maritime Historical Museum and the Capt. John Wilson Historical House this summer to find out more about your town. The museums are open afternoons from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. except Mondays through September. For information, please call 383-6930. Admission is free. Donations will be accepted.

Rotary installs officers for '93-'94

At its installation of officers held June 28 at the Log 'n Line, Cohasset Village - Cathy Dwyer was installed as president of the Cohasset Rotary.

Members of the board of directors for 1993-1994 are: Ed Fox, Arne Gjesteby, Tom Gruber, Peter Logan, Austin Lyne, Peter Pearce, Doug Peck and past president John T. Price of Kingston, who has been chosen to be an Area Representative to the District Rotary Governor.

Dwyer is one of 26,000 incoming Rotary presidents residing in more than 180 countries and geographical regions throughout the world who will assume office July 1, 1993 for a one-year term.

Dwyer, vice president of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot with nine locations on the South Shore, is the club's first woman president. In the 65-town regional Rotary district, which extends from Quincy to Cape Cod through Rhode Island, Dwyer is one of 14 incoming women presidents.

There are 1.1 million Rotarians throughout the World. Thirty thousand are women, who are largely concentrated in The United States.

Lightkeepers' tours are ongoing

The Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence is open for tours each Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers' Board of Directors will have someone on-site to answer questions.

Residents are encouraged to see the progress of this community service project which is intended to make the building available to all Cohasset residents while preserving an important aspect of Cohasset's seafaring heritage.

Growing up on Government Island

By Molly (Tornberg) Orr, St. Petersburg Florida
(Part 3)

"My interest in the restoration (of the Lightkeepers House) is keen and personal. My father, Per F. Tornberg, was keeper of Minot Light from 1922 until he was transferred to Annisquam in 1936. I lived on the Island from 1922 until 1934 when I graduated from high school. Part of my heart is still on the Island and I treasure the memories of the wonderful life I had there."

The sink and pantry were in an extension off the kitchen. In the winter we didn't need to use the icebox for keeping food. The pantry got so cold it served as the icebox.

The dominant piece in the kitchen was the large black iron stove whose edges were brightened with nickel trim. Mother thought of this stove as her "Black Beast". She had been used to a gas stove that cooked with the turn of a knob. The Black Beast needed constant attention. It had to be fed on demand or else it refused to function. It occasionally spewed out a lick of flame or a belch of smoke. Worst of all it was capable of becoming a silent assassin by suffocating all of us with poison gas if the proper vents weren't opened. It sometimes didn't digest its full meal of coal. Some unburned pieces wound up in the trash bin. When the contents of this bin was emptied, we children raked through the ashes and retrieved the whole pieces of coal.

It took some time for mother to become the master of the Beast instead of the Beast mastering her. But by the time this had taken place, the Black Beast was the fulcrum of our home life. It cooked our meals, warmed our clothes that hung on a line in back, toasted our frosty feet when we returned from a long play in the winter snow. It was a gathering place for us and our guests on many, many happy and wonderful evenings. The warmth of the hospitality and the warmth from the stove were the qualities that made those evenings very special.

The fact that the house had no telephone, and no electricity was the chief concern of our parents. We had Lighthouse Service kerosene lamps issued to us. There was one graceful lamp that had a plaque on it that said "Table Lamp U.S. Lighthouse Service." It was made of brass and had a pedestal base with a slender stem that held an elliptical font. A white, milk glass shade softened the light from its tall, clear glass chimney. Jean painted a lovely scene on the underside of this shade that was visible only when the lamp was lit.

The rest of the lamps were small, squat brass bowls with fat, short chimneys and hook handles.

From the day we arrived at our new home we were admonished to be careful with the lamps. We had drills on how to carry a lamp so our clothes could not catch fire. The placement of a lamp in a room was decided so it could not be inadvertently knocked over. These rules were rigidly enforced and by osmosis we developed careful attention when handling one of the lamps.

Saturday morning all the lamps were collected on the kitchen table. The brass fonts were polished to a high shine, the wicks trimmed, and the chimneys washed and dried. It was also the duty of the older children to polish the stove to a patina that mother was proud of, and the nickel trim was removed, cleaned, polished and replaced.

Although our home life was ours, the house in which our life was spent was part of the lighthouse property and was subject to inspection periodically. The Inspector was named Capt. Eaton. We feared him almost as much as the lamps.

We were told by mother that we had to keep our bedrooms tidy, with all clothes picked up and put away, and the beds made every day because Capt. Eaton might come to inspect. If he found anything out of order there was no telling the penalty we would suffer.

I well remember each time this Bogey-man came to inspect. In reflection I realize that he probably didn't like his duty any more than we liked the intrusion. The purpose of the inspection was probably to note the need for repairs in any of the buildings rather than to give marks or criticisms for housekeeping. Although we stalked him at a safe distance trying to read his facial expression to know whether or not we passed, his demeanor was serious and remote. He never acknowledged us children with a smile or a pat on the head.

Over the years our fear of him should have dissipated. I believe mother kept it at a high pitch so she wouldn't have the tedious job of cleaning the rooms every day. She was a superb cook, but she was neither a good scullery maid nor an upstairs maid. Her children performed these duties in her stead.

I have tried to describe my home graphically because part of my heart still rests in it. From the year 1922 when I first set foot in it until June of 1934 when I left for a short trip and never returned except to visit, I spent some of the most emotionally rewarding and enriching years of my life in this house on Government Island in Cohasset, Massachusetts.

Consequences of driving under the influence

By Paul E. Troy, Esq.
Sherburne, Powers & Needham, P.C.

Anyone who has ever been arrested for "drunk driving" will tell you that loss of license, attorneys' fees and the possibility of a jail sentence are only part of the picture. The nightmare begins immediately when the police officer first orders you to pull over.

While the cruiser's blue lights flash and cars speed by on their way safely home, you may be asked to perform "field sobriety tests" at the side of the road. If you cannot perform simple tasks such as walking a straight line, reciting the alphabet or touching your nose with your finger, the officer may be convinced you are under the influence.

You will be arrested, handcuffed, advised of your rights, and taken in the cruiser to be booked at the station.

Your criminal probation record will now permanently reflect this arrest even if you are later found not guilty.

If court is in session and you are deemed "capable" (i.e., not stone drunk), the police will transport you directly to court. If court is not in session, you will usually be locked up in a holding cell until your bail is set and posted. Your personal possessions will be inventoried and taken from you, including anything with which you may harm yourself such as your shoes, shoelaces, jewelry, glasses, and your belt.

At the station, a police officer may also administer a so-called "breathalyzer" test (actually, an infrared breath-testing device). If you drive a car on a public road, the law says you have automatically consented to such a test if you are arrested for driving while intoxicated (DWI). Before you are given the breathalyzer test, the police officer will tell you to sit where you can be observed for at least ten minutes to ensure that you have not vomited or put something in your mouth, either of which might affect the reading.

The breathalyzer measures the percentage, by weight, of alcohol in your blood. The machine's reading will fall in one of three categories:

Less than .05 — there is a presumption that you are not under the influence of alcohol, the arrest is cancelled, and the police must let you go.

Over .05 but less than .10 — the jury will be told that this reading presents no presumption either that you were or were not under the influence. The jury may consider this reading as evidence that you were drinking, but they must make their decision about your guilt from other evidence presented at the trial.

Over .10 — there is a presumption that you were under the influence, but this may be rebutted at trial by your testimony or other evidence.

You will need to take two breathalyzer tests. In between these, the police officer will run a check of the machine's accuracy. These readings will be introduced in court.

Currently, if you take the breathalyzer test and flunk with a reading over .10, the Probation Department will take your license at your initial court appearance and hold it for 90 days. If you refuse the test, the Registry of Motor Vehicles will suspend your license for 120 days. In addition, any conviction will bring an additional loss of license.

Remember, too, that even if you refuse to take the breathalyzer test, you can still be found guilty of DWI. At your trial, the police will testify about their observations of you — that they smelled alcohol on your breath; that your eyes were glassy and your speech slurred; and that you flunked the field sobriety tests.

At the courthouse, whether you are still in custody or free on bail, the probation officer will review your full criminal record and ask you questions about your family history and any prior criminal record and employment. The judge will use this information when setting bail and to determine whether you are entitled to a court-appointed attorney. You will be arraigned and must plead "guilty" or "not guilty."

At the arraignment, the judge will also set a "conference" date at which your lawyer and the Assistant District Attorney will try to work out a plea agreement. If an agreement is not reached, the judge will set a trial date. In most courts, until the system changes next year as a result of the Court Reform Act, you will have the opportunity for two separate trials: a first trial before a judge and, if you are found guilty and you appeal, a second trial before a six-person jury.

During your trial, the judge and/or jury will listen to the police testimony; the breathalyzer test results (if any); your testimony, and that of any witnesses. The judge and/or jury must determine whether they believe beyond a reasonable doubt that when you were driving your car, you were under the influence of alcohol or that your ability to operate your vehicle safely was diminished by the alcohol you consumed.

In an attempt to educate drunk drivers and to give an alternative to the draconian penalties in the old statute (i.e., jail sentence up to two years, $1,000 fine, and automatic one year loss of license for the first offense), the Legislature created the Alcohol Education Program (M.G.L. c.90, §24D), best known as the "24D Program."

The 24D Program is consensual and you cannot be forced to participate; however, you are ineligible if you were previously convicted of DWI within the last six years, or if there was a serious personal injury or a death as a result of an accident you caused.

If you do not enter the first offender's 24D Program, your license will be suspended for one year. If you do enter the program, however, you will lose your license for 45 to 90 days. If you are under 21 years old, your license will be suspended for 180 days and you must attend a special program.

A typical 24D Program lasts 40 hours and will require you to attend a weekly two-hour class for 16 weeks where you will listen to lectures, watch films, and receive information concerning drunk driving and driving improvement skills. Additional classes usually consist of a lecture by Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

If you participate in the 24D Program, your performance will be evaluated and if it appears you have a serious drinking problem, the Court can order you to enter a long-term alcohol treatment program for "treatment and rehabilitation." The judge can also require anyone who takes the 24D Program to perform up to 30 hours of community service.

Finally, there are the costs and fees. You can expect to pay for such items as:

Registry of Motor Vehicles (for return of license)	$300
Treasury fee (to Commonwealth of Massachusetts)	250
Fee for 24D Program	526
Court Costs	200
Potential court fine	100
Victim witness fee	30
Car tow	40
Car storage per day	15
Magistrate's nighttime bail fee	20
Defense attorney	1,500+
Probation supervision fee ($30 per month for one year)	360
Loss of safe driver credits for three years (depending on place of residence, age of automobile, amount of insurance carried, and prior driving record).	2,500
Total:	5,841+

Should this cautionary tale of legal and financial costs fail to convince you never to drive under the influence of alcohol or other psycho-active substances, let me add one further warning: if your drunk driving doesn't maim or kill you, it may maim or kill another innocent human being. We can never put a price on such a tragedy.

(Paul Troy, a Hingham resident, is a former Assistant U.S. Attorney and Assistant District Attorney. He is presently a member of the Boston law firm of Sherburne, Powers & Needham, P.C., and specializes in civil and criminal litigation.)

Tag-a-Keg legislation boosts local by-law

Keg by-law two years ago, the town has prosecuted two cases.

The second case developed just three weeks ago.

"We responded to a loud party," Noonan said. When police arrived, several minors were drinking from a keg. "The owners weren't there. The tag lead us to the next-door neighbor," Noonan said.

The neighbor told police the keg was stolen from his garage.

If convicted, the neighbor faces maximum penalties of six months in jail, or a $2,000 fine, or both.

Andrew Hailer, manager of Curtis Liquors, supports the program. He said he has traced the purchasers of confiscated kegs for police several times through the attached tags.

The loss of the deposit should also help discourage people from buying for minors, Hailer said.

He added that the uniform legislation will prevent keg-purchasers from seeking out communities without a tag program.

"At the beginning, (when Cohasset enacted 'Tag-a-Keg') there was a decrease in sales," Hailer said. "A few people may have gone to Hingham, or another community that didn't have the tags."

Hailer said Curtis Liquors sells approximately 15 kegs per week during the summer.

Patrick Connelly, manager of Liquors Unlimited, Inc. in Cohasset Village, said he supports the legislation also.

"I think it's a very good idea," Connelly said.

Other liquor store owners, however, like Bill Stewart of the Wine Company in Hingham, said the identification is an invasion of privacy. "I'm in favor of what they are trying to accomplish, but if it begins here, if someone buys a six-pack of beer will I be asking them for their name and address?" Stewart asked.

Alcohol and Beverages Control Commission Chairman Stuart Krusell said the deposit and beer registration regulation also applies to "beer balls."

Beer balls, outlawed in Massachusetts for the past five years, are round, disposable plastic containers holding about 5.5 gallons of beer. The ABCC voted to allow them back into the state upon adoption of the Tag-a-Keg program.

The Plymouth County Cooperative Extension, 4-H program, will host an open photography contest for the 1993 Marshfield Fair. The purpose is to promote and portray the food and agriculture in Massachusetts and the contest is open to persons six to 19 years of age.

All photos must have been taken within the previous year according to Robert Mott, extension specialist, the photography contest will include divisions for photos of farm people; farm animals; scenic farmland or horticultural landscapes; still life (farm buildings, machinery or farm implements; and a photo essay contest. Prints may be either black and white or color. Entrants do not have to be a member of 4-H to participate. Rules and entry details are available by calling (617) 834-6629.

The 126th annual Marshfield Fair will be held Aug. 18 to 29 at the fairgrounds off Route 3A in Marshfield.

'New Views' presented

Through July 27 the Artist's Son Gallery presents "New Views: Recent Works by Lynne Adams and Peter Wagner," featuring oil paintings of New England landscapes.

Adams and Wagner bring highly personal interpretations of familiar scenes. Each artist offers a unique representation of nature. Adams with her intimate inland views and Wagner with his meditative beach scapes.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday 10 to 6 p.m., Friday and Saturday 10 to 5 p.m.

Theater, art program

The South Shore Art Center is offering preschoolers and their parents two days of theater and art in a new program called "Through the Artist's Looking Glass." Participants will enjoy theatre-in-the-round at the South Shore Music Circus followed by a box lunch and artistic exploration at the Art Center. "Alice in Wonderland Day" will be featured July 22 while "Beauty & the Beast Day" will be held August 26.

Pre-registration is required; please call the Art Center at (617)383-9548.

SHARE pick ups set

SHARE is a non-profit organization dedicated to community service and self-help, offering good food at great savings for those who participate.

The next pick-up day for SHARE is from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Saturday, July 24 at the Deer Hill School.

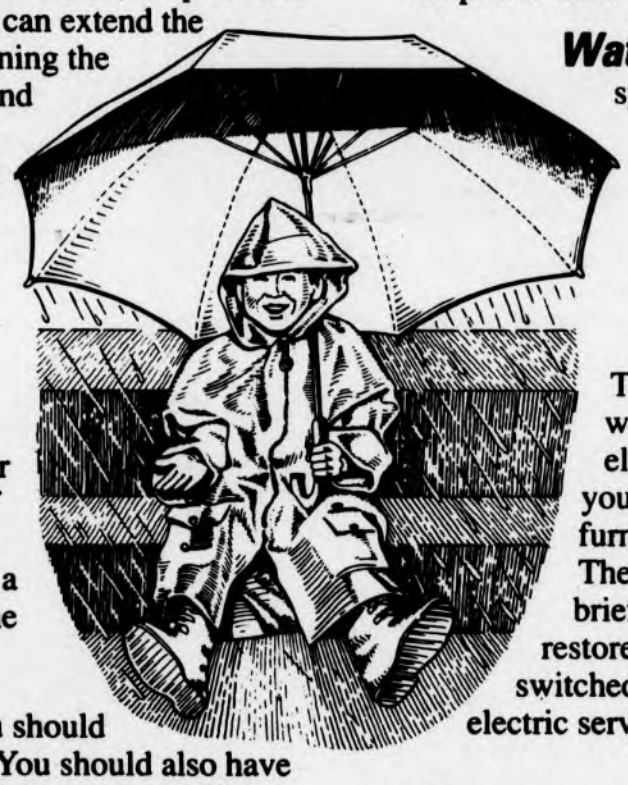
Please call John Kierce at 383-0578; the COA at 383-9112; or the Social Service League at 383-0771 for information.

SHARE participants pay $13 for the food and pledge two hours of volunteer service once a month. In return you receive 15-17 food items, good wholesome nutritious food purchased from growers and processors, with a retail value of $25-$35. SHARE has no eligibility or income requirements and is not connected in any way to any government program.

Prepare for Storms Before They Hit!

When little showers turn into big storms, your electric service may be interrupted. However, there are some simple measures you can take to help ensure your comfort and safety during a power outage.

Food...Have canned and packaged foods that need no refrigeration. If you have an infant, keep several days' supply of formula. You can extend the life of perishable foods by turning the controls of your refrigerator and freezer to the coldest position before the storm hits. During winter storms, you can use a picnic cooler outside your home to preserve frozen foods. And don't forget your manual can opener.



Water...Clean containers should be filled with tap water in case your electric water pump or area water supply is affected. Also, you can flush a toilet by pouring water into the bowl.

Medical Supplies...You should have a complete first-aid kit. You should also have an adequate supply of prescription drugs or dietary needs.

Cooking...A fireplace or wood stove can be used for cooking. Gas grills or camp stoves should only be used outdoors. Charcoal grills–because they release carbon monoxide, a deadly poison–should NEVER be used indoors.

Lighting...Camper lanterns and battery-operated lights are safer than candles. And keep an adequate supply of fresh batteries. Propane and oil lanterns are useful. But you need to store the fuel in a safe place.

Radio...A battery-operated, portable radio may be the only way you can get up-to-date information on what's going on during and after a serious storm.

Burning Wood for Heat...
If you have a fireplace or wood stove, keep an emergency supply of dry firewood on hand.

Emergency Generator Safety...If you have an emergency electric generator, please follow these safety precautions: the generator must be UL approved and it should be installed by a licensed electrician and inspected by your municipal wiring inspector. There must be no link between our lines and your generator, because an improperly wired generator could endanger your life and the lives of your neighbors and emergency workers by "backfeeding" electricity from your generator out to the power lines in your neighborhood.

Water Pipes... If your home-heating system is down for an extended period of time due to a winter storm, drain your water pipes and traps. Remember to shut off the main water valve to prevent flooding when the power is restored.

Protect Your Appliances...
Turn off and unplug all appliances that would go on automatically when your electricity is restored. This includes your TV, VCR, microwave, dehumidifier, furnace, water heater and water pump. These appliances could be damaged by a brief voltage surge when the power is restored. Turn off lights, but leave one light switched "on" so that you'll know when your electric service is restored.

Remember to stay away from fallen wires!

Our emergency numbers are open 24 hours a day.

'Secret family recipe' highlights historical breakfast

Sunday's pancake breakfast with all the trimmings couldn't have been finer.

The annual fund-raiser sponsored by the Cohasset Historical Society on the grounds of the Caleb Lothrop House attracted dozens of local citizens who feasted on pancakes made from a 'secret family recipe' augmented fresh blueberries.

Earl Harmon of Hingham spotted the sign advertising the breakfast on his early morning bike ride through town.

"It seemed like a relaxing, peaceful thing to do," he said. So Earl and his wife, Kim Harmon packed up the kids and decided to stop off in Cohasset on their way to the Cape for the day.

The Lothrop House was also open for tours. And the two antique fire engines were a hit with the kids present.

National qualifier should be clear sailing for Joe Menis

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Joe Menis has already worked out a strategy for the Area "A" sailing competition he'll be competing in August 2-3.

It's not much of a strategy, really, but Menis is counting on it to get him to the U.S. Sailing Junior Nationals.

"I'll show up low-key," said the 16-year-old Menis, now in his second year as a sailing instructor at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club. "I won't try too hard and hopefully I'll win."

Menis' attitude has a tone bordering on indifference, but in reality, he sees an over-aggressiveness on the open seas as a hindrance for many sailors. In the past, Menis has fallen victim to getting "caught up" in his every move during a race and dwelling on mistakes, rather than shaking them off and concentrating on the task at hand.

But no more.

"I try not to let mistakes rattle me," he said.

Menis was especially in tune with his races as he captured the Curtis Cup in the single-handed competition at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's pavilion, two weeks ago. Sailing in his 15-foot Laser, Menis captured four of the five races to qualify him for the Area "A" competition.

The races in Maine are especially important because he is the defending champion. Menis is looking forward to a solid performance and the chance to improve on his seventh-place finish in the junior nationals in '92 in Newport, Rhode Island.

"I won last year," Menis said of the national qualifier. "I have to keep that going and see what I can do."

Menis has been sailing since the ripe old age of three, but he didn't first get into a boat on the South Shore. He is originally from the San Francisco Bay area and sailed out of the Richmond Yacht Club.

With the more moderate temperatures he was able to sail comfortably a solid 12 months a year.

"I grew up on the West Coast," Menis said. "You can sail year-round there and get away with it."

Menis still sails year-round, but admits competing in Scituate's frostbite series during the winter is a tad bit different than a race in the middle of July.

"It gets pretty cold out there," Menis said.

Menis not only competes in races during the summer and winter months, but also was a major reason Cohasset High School finished second to Belmont Hill in the State Sailing Championship. He plans on continuing his sailing in college, with the University of Rhode Island currently his No. 1 choice.

Still, Menis hasn't ruled out other schools. They do, however, have to have one prerequisite. The school has to have "a good sailing team."

Champion diver headed for competition

Her strength, she says, is the fact that it doesn't take her long to learn a dive. Meehan can then perfect it quicker and raise the degree of difficulty when she becomes even more comfortable.

"I learn dives pretty quickly," Meehan said, matter of factly.

Meehan has been training four hours a week perfecting the dives she'll be required to perform in the BSG. Each diver has eight dives, a required front and back dive and six optionals.

Meehan's back dive is her strongest, so it's no surprise one of her optionals will be a back dive with a full twist. The particular dive as a 2.0 degree of difficulty. Meehan has recorded a score of 6.5 on the dive. Her highest score ever is a 7.0 on a back dive.

With the success she has had, Meehan has attracted a fair amount of attention, particularly from Harvard diving coach Keith Miller. Miller offered an invitation to Meehan to practice with the university's diving squad. Despite the fact that her time is extremely limited during the school year because of academic and athletic demands, as well as working as the sports editor of the school's bi-monthly newspaper, The Milton Measure, Meehan is tempted to accept Miller's invite.

"I might want to pursue it because he's a great coach and it's a great opportunity," she said.

Training with the team would also give Meehan a closer look at the college she ultimately wants to attend. An honors student at Milton, Meehan stands a good chance at diving for the Crimson.

But for now, Meehan just wants to concentrate on what she has to do in the pool. She admits she is not sure who her competition will be at the games "but once I get there I'll recognize some."

Meehan likes her training but it is the competition, and all the little aspects of a swim meet, that she enjoys the most.

"I like to compete and go to the competitions," she said, "especially in synchronized swimming. I've made friends all over the country and it's great to see them at competitions."

She also thrives on the attention other competitors give her in their attempts to knock her out of first place. The SSL championships in mid-August will have several divers from the South Shore focused on Meehan.

Dawn Meehan stretches and looks for the water during the diving competition at a Cohasset Swim Team meet. The Milton Academy student received an open invitation from the Harvard University diving coach to train with the team whenever she wants. (Photo by Althea Stamp)

"I've heard some of the girls on the South Shore have been practicing harder to beat me," Meehan said. "I'm pretty confident though. I think I can defend my title."

Rather than getting anxious before meets, Meehan gets excited about what she has to do to win. It's been a process she has learned to develop through years of swim meet competitions.

"It's not really nerves because I've been doing it for so long," Meehan said. "It's routine."

As for the games, Meehan sees it as a great event for the state's athletes.

"I think it's a great program because most kids don't make it to the Junior Olympics or higher levels," she said. "It's a great opportunity for people in Massachusetts and you can make a lot of friends."

And for Meehan, it's a chance to pick up some medals along the way.

Sports is our life, but when it's 150 degrees and humid, no one wants to do anything athletic.

It was so hot that at least one member of the Extra Points crew was forced to drink many cold beverages, can after can, for the entire weekend.

Anyway, with the heat in mind, we have prepared a Top-10 List of Things To Do To Beat the Heat. (We will present them in reverse order just like Extra Points fan David Letterman. By the way, the list originates from the home office in Marshfield).

Here we go.

10) Shave off all your body hair. (Hello Andre Agassi)

9) Fill your bath tub with lime Jello and work on your belly flops.

8) Do the "Achy-Breaky Shuffle" dressed only in a Speedo.

7) Go to an ice hockey rink and talk to the Zamboni guy.

6) Play frisbee in an air-conditioned convenience store.

5) Have Bob Rufo deputize you so you can pull over an ice cream truck and confiscate the cargo.

4) Swim to New Zealand.

3) Buy a life-size ice cube tray, turn on the hose and invite a few friends over.

2) Set off the sprinkler system at your favorite shopping mall.

1) Two words: "Pool hop."

Pembroke's Kevin Stevens suffered more than a bump on the nose during the NHL Stanley Cup playoffs when he collided with Islander defenseman Rich Pilon.

Friends of Stevens from his Silver Lake days, said the big left winger on the Pittsburgh Penguins had to have several plates put into his left cheek to repair the bone damage he suffered when he fell to the ice after being knocked unconscious during the collision.

To put the plates into his face, surgeons had to make a very large incision.

Reportedly, the incision ran from Stevens right ear up along his temple, across his scalp and down to his left ear.

It isn't pretty, but the surgeons then pulled down his face to install the plates.

Stevens' friends said it would have been easier for the surgeons to make the incision across Stevens face, but it would have left a very noticeable scar and Stevens opted for the more difficult operation.

Stevens should be ready to play when the regular season begins in the fall. However, he will probably wear a full face shield and it is uncertain if the injury will have an effect on Stevens physical style of play. Stevens is 6' 3" and weighs 225 pounds and is a two-time 50 goal scorer.

His injury should make the NHL rethink its policy of not requiring helmets for its players.

Youth hockey players, high school players and collegians are required to wear full face protection on the ice.

However, last year the NHL passed a rule that allowed players to play without helmets. The move was designed to increase the popularity of the sport by Dodgers dominate with 20 straight wins!

In their third attempt at the Little League Post-season championship, the Dodgers came up winners. It was their 20th win of the season. They finished the year at 20-0.

The Dodgers had reached the championship game in 1991 only to be defeated by Jim Magner's Red Sox team. In 1993, they lost to John Snoots' Pirates. This year they were not to be denied.

Steve Baker's Cardinals' victory over the Red Sox in the semifinals earned them the privilege of going up against the Dodgers. Although a victory for Cards in the first game would not have ensured them the title, the Redbirds hoped to chip away at the light blues one game at a time in the double-elimination series.

Before the largest crowd of the year, the Dodgers defeated the Cardinals for the championship. It was a beautiful night for a ball game. Both teams were introduced by league president John Carr. The national anthem was played and the game began.

Matt Lewis, whose ace pitching included a no-hitter in the regular season, was the winning pitcher. In his last career league game, he went the distance, striking out 12 Cards to post the victory. This was a team victory. The Dodgers executed in the field and at the plate. The Dodgers had hits from Lewis, Mark Equi, Jimmy O'Sullivan, Jack Mathey, Dennis Rooney, Brian Harley, and Greg Bilton who hit homerun No. 14 for the season and No. 20 for his career. Adam Leahy, Jimmy O'Sullivan, Dennis Rooney, Jake Motley, Shawn Chase and Grey Bilton played well in the field. Mark Verrochi and Bobby Morgan led the Dodgers on the base paths.

The Cards were led offensively by Charlie Dean, Ryan Hubley, Steve Kovach and Alex Scherwin who all had hits. Ted Goff, Steve Baker, Billy Good, Scherwin and Dean played well defensively for the Cards.

It was the last Little League appearance for many of the second-place Cardinals as well. Only three years old, this 1991 expansion team went right up to the finals and has every reason to be proud of its record. Fans will miss watching the play of A Frame Scherwin, Goff, Baker, Kovach, Connolly and Skorupa.

The Dodgers' Morgan, Hurley, Motley, Equi, Rooney, O'Sullivan, Bilton, and Lewis all played their last game as well.

Taylor, Lewis lead squad

How much foam can you squeeze into a catcher's mitt? Only Ben Smoot knows for sure. As catcher for Cohasset's 12-year-old Williamsport Tournament team, Smoot has the formidable task of catching Cohasset's fireball hurlers Greg Taylor and Matthew Lewis.

Taylor and Lewis had spectators, coaches, and opponents buzzing after Cohasset defeated perennial baseball powers Milton American and Hanover by scores of 6-0 and 13-0 this past weekend.

Taylor tossed a no-hitter against Milton American while striking out 10. Lewis nearly duplicated the feat, his no-hit effort spoiled only by a seeing-eye ground ball that found its way to right field.

Over the two-game span 10 different Cohasset players scored runs as Cohasset's offensive attack was powered by a total team effort. Denis Rooney, Justin Golden, Greg Bilton, Eric Hanlan, and Ben Smoot all had extra base hits. Steve Baker, Greg Taylor, Jim O'Sullivan, Mark Equi, Kyle Bunstein, and Jamie DeMichele punched out timely hits contributing to a 19-run production in only 11 innings with Cohasset at the bat.

Cohasset's next game will be against Braintree American at 8 p.m. Thursday, July 15, at the Braintree American field.

Tennis lessons held for all levels

Sharks remain undefeated

By Mike Rolandelli
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Land Sharks upped their mark to 4-0 this week with 11-1 and 4-3 victories versus Canton.

In the first game (played on July 6) Chris Rolandelli took the hill for the first two innings, gave up one run and set the stage for an absolutely brilliant, masterfully crafted five-inning symphony of pitching by Scott Theriault. Theriault's motion was flawless, he threw strikes, and mixed his curve ball. He allowed no runs and no hits while fanning nine batters.

Run support came in the form of two doubles by Peter Fahey, a two-run triple by Ben "the Bambino" Berger, a solo dinger by Nick "the Magway" Welz, and a three-run round-tripper by Theriault.

After a washout in Avon due to lightning, Canton visited the Shark Tank again on the eighth to be bitten 4-3 in a lightning-abbreviated game.

Nick "the Magway" Welz started hurling for the Sharks and got into early trouble, allowing three runs in the first inning before settling down nicely in the second and third. The Sharks had a couple of barrels in them but refused to submerge as they retaliated with four runs in their half of the first, two on a Theriault single scoring Fahey and Rolandelli. "The Magway" continued hitting the ball well as he tripled to left in the second, diving into the bag head first.

Electricity filled the air in the fourth inning in more ways than one. Umpire Aaron Berger called the game due to violent lightning but not before a near brawl occurred between a soccer player on the next field and a fired-up Canton ball player. Though rain-abbreviated, the Sharks picked up another win.

The Sharks have home games this week Tuesday through Friday, all starting at 6 p.m.

Speaking of 50-goal scorers, Marshfield's Jeremy Roenick, an all-star center for the Chicago Black Hawks, drove a golf ball 347 yards during a long drive contest at last weekend's Isuzu Celebrity Golf Tourney in Lake Tahoe, Nevada.

The tourney was broadcast on NBC and featured sports stars such as Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley, Johnny Bench and Mario Lemieux.

Roenick, who stands 6' and weighs 175 pounds finished second in the long drive behind NBA player Bill Lambier.

Lambier, who stands 6'11" and weighs 250 pounds, drove the ball 348 yards.

Roenick's 347-yard drive once again shows that hockey players are standout golfers because of the similar action involved in shooting the puck and driving a golf ball.

The average pro hockey player is a much better golfer than the average football, baseball or basketball player.

Legend has it that Boston Bruin Bobby Orr drove a golf ball 300 yards the first time he ever tried the game.

That is easy to believe considering Orr's dreaded slap shot and powerful legs.

A special "Thank You" goes out to Dave Mihal and the Abington Minor League for the baseball gift they sent. We'd also like to thank Mr. Mihal and the rest of the Little League representatives who took the time to write game wrap-ups for the sports pages. They were most appreciated and gave the kids the credit they deserved through the season.

Baseball camp starts this week

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters age five through 18 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide a baseball camp, which will be held this at Miliken Field.

Two camp programs are available to youngsters as follows: full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; camp for age seven and over and a half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.; camp is available for five and six year olds.

The week-long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, July 2.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has provided baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for three years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for Baseball Camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall, daily, Monday through Saturday.

Basketball camp sign-ups

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting registrations for a Boys' and Girls' Basketball Camp to be held the week of Monday, July 12, at the Cohasset High School gym.

Ron Ford, head boys' varsity basketball coach and his staff will conduct the week-long camp, which is for youngsters aged nine and over. The tuition for Basketball Camp is $125 per child and camp hours are from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily, Monday through Friday, July 12-16.

Registration forms are available at the recreation department office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall. Non-residents will be accepted for Basketball Camp on a space available basis.

Step training programs offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering both introduction and Fat Burner, Power Step Training programs this summer, taught by Ms. Normandie Nigh of Fit for Success. Classes meet at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium as follows:

"Intro to Step" — a 60-minute class appropriate for beginning to intermediate participants, it includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning which can be adapted for all fitness levels. The class is held Monday and Wednesday nights at 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups and drop-ins are welcome.

"Fatburner Workout with Power Step" — If you love step training, but want to take it to the next level, this class is for you! This is a 90-minute workout consisting of a combination of stepping and toning exercises to help you increase strength and burn fat more efficiently. It is taught by Normandie Nigh, Monday and Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Ten sessions are available and drop-ins are welcome.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information, or you may register at class times.

Photography exhibit opens

The photography of Anne Henning is currently on display in the reference room of the library. Ms. Henning photographs many forms of artistic work. She is particularly drawn to sculpture and to architectural detail. Through her photography she st[illegible] to capture the artist's vision and attempts to "m[illegible] sculpture come to life." Ms. Henning's favorite subjects include works of artists and architects who have as she puts it, "respect for the land."

An award winning photograph, "The Ghosts of Las Colinas" (#2), captures the spirit of the wild mustangs who used to roam freely on land now occupied by IBM, Fidelity, Polaroid and the Four Season's Resort in Dallas, Texas. The juxtaposition of the corporate structures and the magnificent untamed animals restores the wild mustangs to their earlier prominence and portrays two powerful entities coexisting in Las Colinas, 1993.

In addition to the photography exhibit, Suzan Pope, reference librarian, has organized a collection of art books in lobby. All aspects of art are represented in the collection, artists, sculpture, architecture, architects, as well as photography. Many books are oversized and contain museum quality prints.

Anne Henning displays one of her photographs on exhibit in the reference room at the library.

BOUND FOR GOOD HEALTH
Information on Heat Stress

As you get older, your body may become less able to respond to long exposure to hot or cold weather. Hot weather can place a dangerous strain on your body, especially your heart. If the burden is too great, heat can make you very sick or even kill you. It's important to keep several facts about hot weather in mind:

Your body needs time to adjust to hot weather, so the risk of heat illness is greater when a sudden increase in temperature occurs, leaving your body unprepared for the strain.

Your chances of getting sick in hot weather are increased by a weak or damaged heart, hypertension, problems with circulation, diabetes, a previous stroke, overweight, infection or fever, diarrhea, drinking alcoholic beverages, and skin diseases or sunburn. Many prescription drugs can make you much more vulnerable to the heat. If you take medicine for high blood pressure, nervousness, depression, poor circulation or sleeping, ask your doctor or pharmacist for advice.

Temperatures above 90 degrees can be very dangerous, especially when combined with high humidity. Whatever the temperature, if you feel hot and uncomfortable, take steps to avoid heat stress.

- The best way to avoid heat stress is to keep cool.
- Spend as much time as you can in cooler surroundings — an air conditioned mall, public library, or movie theater. Use air conditioning at home or a fan to keep the air moving. Wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.
- Don't wait until you are thirsty to drink. In hot weather, your body needs more water, so drink often and in reasonable amounts. Avoid too much coffee or tea. Water and fruit beverages are best. If you have a problem with your body water balance, check your doctor for advice on how much water you should drink in hot weather. This information comes from the National Institute on Aging.

The Council on Aging now has air-conditioning, so if you need to be in a cool place, come down to the center and enjoy the cool air! You can read or watch T.V.

You don't want your septic service showing up with your guests. . .
neither does E.L. Margetts and Sons of 97 Ward Street, Hingham 617-749-0559. When your septic system's on the blink, it's always an emergency and E.L. Margetts treats every customer like its only customer.

E.L. Margetts and Sons is a fourth generation business, which was started by Edward Margetts in 1912. The late Bobby Pape of Cohasset contracted with E.L. Margetts for ALL of his company's pumping services, and many Cohasset residential and commercial customers continue to utilize Margetts.

Eleven employees, including Judy and Dave Margetts, two older Margetts brothers and a nephew work at the family business which houses a fleet of pumpers, utility trucks, dump trucks, excavators, and backhoes. "You can say we do it all - everything from a pumping to building new systems and repairing old," Judy Margetts said.

E.L. Margetts and Sons are the people "the towns" call in an emergency situation for pumping, sewer connections, or sewer repairs.

SUMMER SALE.

During our Summer Sale, you'll save on the entire Eldred Wheeler collection of authentic, hand-made, 18th century reproduction furniture. This is a rare opportunity to take home an Eldred Wheeler piece at unprecedented savings.

We make our furniture by hand, using the same carving, assembling and finishing techniques developed by early American craftsmen. Our work is truly authentic. And now, it's more affordable than ever.

But hurry, quantities are limited, and this sale ends July 31!

Carillon recital Sunday

The Sixty-Ninth Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, continues Sunday, July 18, at 6 p.m. with a performance by Claude Aubin, carillonneur of St. Joseph's Oratory in Montreal, Quebec, Canada.

Aubin will play original carillon compositions by van Eyck, Barnes, Rusterholz, and van den Gheyn; transcriptions from the works of Beethoven, Gluck, Rodrigo, J.S. Bach, and C.P.E. Bach; and arrangements of hymns and folksongs. In addition to his carillon duties at the Oratory, Aubin directs the shrine's Adult Choir. He made a recording of popular Christmas carols for the Oratory in 1986.

The Cohasset concert will take place rain or shine; in case of bad weather, listen from parked cars. Printed programs will be distributed on the Common, and will also be available in the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, which is one of the recommended listening places mentioned on the back of the program. Picnics are invited, as well as lawn chairs and blankets. Following the concert, a tour of the tower is available to those interested.

For further information, call the church at 617/383-1083, or Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's, at 508/475-2599.

Band concerts set

The next scheduled concert on the common is Tuesday evening, August 17, at 7:30 p.m., Cohasset Town Common. Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and are financially possible from matching grants of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and the American Federation of Musicians.

Please bring blanket or lawn chair and often insect repellent is a good item to have available.

Circus is coming

The Hingham Mother's Club is sponsoring "Vidbel's Olde Tyme Circus," Wednesday, Aug. 4, at the Hingham Junior High School grounds.

Show times are 4:30 and 7 pm. Special reduced-price tickets are being sold in advance at Hunneman's & Co., 7 Central Street, or from members of the Hingham Mothers Club for $5. Call 749-4430 for more information.

This performance has something for everyone — jugglers, clowns, aerialists, tumblers, bears, a lively circus band, elephants, trained dogs and much more. Elephant and pony rides will be available for children starting one hour before each performance. Proceeds benefit the Hingham Mother's Club Scholarship Fund.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

The flower-lined porch of this Pond Street home is picture-perfect. The flower boxes are brimming over with pink and red geraniums. What a spot to sit and enjoy the sunshine with a glass of lemonade! If you spot a garden or special detail that you'd like to share with The Grand Tour, be sure to call Ginger at 383-2863.

'Fun Fest' is planned

The islands just off Hingham's coast will be bustling with inexpensive children's activities Sunday, July 25.

The Boston Harbor Islands State Park will host its annual "All-Islands Children Fest." Different islands will host various activities.

Candle-making and bubble-blowing will be on Grape Island, while kite-flying and kite-making will be on Gallops Island. Other islands will have face-painting, windsock-making and group singing.

The activities are free, but round-trip boat transportation costs $4 per child and $6 per adult. Boats leave directly from Hingham.

For more information call Ellenor Yahrmarkt at 740-1605.

Police take tough stand on beach carousing

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan made it clear Monday night: if there's a choice between safety and public access — safety wins.

"I'm the police chief not the recreation director," Noonan said.

He asked selectmen to seek a change in a town by-law which would close the Sandy Beach parking lot at 8 p.m. instead of 11 p.m. which is allowed now.

The change in hours would curb illegal activity — under-age and public drinking — at the site, Noonan said.

"It's the only way we can get control of a dangerous situation down there," Noonan said.

He added police have the authority to shut the parking lot down at any time for public safety reasons.

Selectmen — leaning toward a closing time of 9 p.m. as a compromise — said they were concerned about drinking problems at the beach but were reluctant to support shutting the parking lot at 8 p.m.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said people like to park at the beach on a hot summer night.

"The truth is Rocky, they're afraid to do that (now)," Noonan countered.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan favored a greater

Eating out is way to beat the heat

While temperatures soared last week, so did sales at several Cohasset establishments.

J.J's Dairy Hut saw an unprecedented number of frappes and other liquids sell, owner Lilly Sestito said.

"We sold twice as many frappes! As well as a lot of raspberry lime rickeys. We couldn't keep limes in stock," Sestito said.

She added that while ice-cream and soft-serve sold well, most people wanted a liquid form of their dairy product of choice during the hottest days.

For those who wanted more solid food, Sestito said a salad was usually the preferred meal.

"No one wanted anything hot," she said. "We sold a lot of salads."

Sharks relaxed as they head to tourney

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset has undergone a rebirth in baseball for high-school age players this season. And it should have a lasting effect when the team — along with its new attitude — takes the field next March.

The Cohasset LandSharks, many of whom played varsity baseball at the high school in the spring, have learned one important lesson this summer: The importance of relaxation.

It may sound like an easy bit of advice handed down from head coach Mike Rolandelli, but after the season the the players had on the CHS team, queasy stomachs and sweaty palms were commonplace.

As members of the high-school team, there was a great deal of tension and frustration as the squad

Cohasset's week

Cohasset lifeguards Colby Lawrence and Elizabeth Tileston stay vigilant at Sandy Beach.

Don't feed the animals

In light of the rabies epizootic, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik warns residents to avoid strays and wild animals.

"Don't feed unknown animals," he said. "Parents should keep young children and toddlers away from 'cute' wildlife such as rabbits and squirrels even though they have a low risk of contracting rabies."

Young children are unable to distinguish between the rabbits, potentially harmless, and raccoons, potentially deadly, if they come upon one or the other, Godzik explained.

"All wildlife should be avoided," he said.

Woodside taps dry

Due to lack of rain, the well system at Woodside Cemetery has run run, said Peter G. Laugelle, superintendent of the Tree, Park & Cemetery department.

He said the taps used to fill watering containers at the cemetery are dry and that the system will be operating again as soon as there is sufficient rain.

Study extension granted

Selectmen granted a 60-day extension to the Oregon-based company Management Development Institute to study the consolidation of Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate Fire Departments. The due date of the study was July 22.

The company requested the extension due to the serious illness of its president Jack W. Snook.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke explained that Snook is the recent recipient of a heart transplant. She said Snook had gone into the hospital for by-pass surgery.

Cohasset is administering a $30,000 municipal incentive grant from the state to conduct the study. At $18,000, Management Development was the low bidder for the project.

Civil Service list

At the recommendation of acting Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln, selectmen will ask for a current fire captain eligibility list from Civil Service.

A temporary vacancy in the fire department was created when Lincoln — the department's most senior captain — was appointed acting fire chief following former Chief John Nadeau's resignation.

Lincoln said having the list would be useful should selectmen wish to fill the captain's vacancy on an acting basis.

Selectmen said if there is no current list of eligible candidates they will ask Civil Service to hold a captain's exam.

Before proceeding with hiring a permanent fire chief, the town is currently exploring the feasibility of sharing a fire chief with Scituate.

New COA appointees

Margaret Bates, 365 Beechwood St., a retired registered nurse, and Linda McCarthy, 38 Lantern Lane, a registered nurse who works with the Norwell Visiting Nurses Assoc., are the newly appointed members of the Council on Aging.

Selectmen interviewed three candidates for two spots on the board last month and made the appointments July 19. Forest Ave. resident Frances C. Walton, who has driven the senior shuttle and runs a small boarding kennel, also applied.

Special counsel appt'ed

Selectmen gave the board of assessors permission to hire Frank D. Rodick of Rodick & Rodick as special counsel for the defense of Pilgrim Cooperative v. Town of Cohasset appellate tax board case.

Assistant/Assessor Appraiser Joseph DiVito Jr. said Rodick came highly recommended. Rodick charges $80 an hour. DiVito estimated that the required services would not exceed four hours.

DiVito said the reason for seeking services of special counsel is that town counsel has professional conflict with the case.

Help us, please!

Presently, supplies in area food pantries are critically low. And as each day passes, the situation worsens.

Could you help us? A donation of nonperishable food (preferably canned goods) is very much needed and would be extremely appreciated by those less fortunate. Donations of cash in lieu of food would also be very much appreciated. You may drop off your donations at either our main office in Cohasset or at our branch in North Scituate.

Thank You from all of us at Cohasset Savings for helping us to help others.

police presence rather than closing the parking lot early.

"Eight p.m. is too early. I have mixed emotions about the idea," he said. "I think it's healthy for youngsters to have a place to congregate. I don't think we should condone drinking but I'd like to see us spend money so kids can congregate."

Noonan said once police show up, kids go elsewhere.

"There will be nobody there, I'll guarantee you," Noonan said about police presence as a deterrent to minors' gathering.

Noonan said it would cost the town about $5,000 a summer for ten weeks (three-hour shifts) to have police on-site at the lot from 8 to 11 p.m. Four full-time summer police officers would cost about $12,800, he said.

Currently an officer is stationed at the Sandy Beach parking lot gate on Friday and Saturday nights. The officer checks for current beach stickers and takes a cursory glance for any alcohol in the vehicle. Cars are not being searched, Noonan said. He said police do not have the staff or money to baby-sit the Sandy Beach parking lot seven days a week.

Noonan also asked the board not to allow the beach parking lot to open after the high school prom, which has been an annual practice. He said kids had to be "herded out early" at the beach following prom night last spring because "they got out of hand" and trashed the parking lot from one end to the other.

Selectmen decided to ask for input from the town drug and alcohol committee and voted to require prom organizers to hire a detail officer at the parking lot.

And in responding to a letter of concern from the Coxes of Parker Avenue, the board decided to close the Parker Avenue lot at 9 p.m. to deter teenage drinking and congregating there. The Parker Ave. lot is not included in the town by-law.

A change in the by-law for different hours at the Sandy Beach lot would have to be approved at town meeting.

In Noonan's June status report, he said "I realize these changes might be unpopular with some people, but I feel it is the only way we are going to be able to control the current problems."

Eating out is a good way to beat the heat

Carmine Carlucci, owner of Strawberry Parfait, said barbecued items were the rage during the heat spell at his establishment.

"We sold less ice-cream and more food," Carlucci said. "Mainly everything barbecue — spareribs, swordfish, chicken."

Carlucci noted that Strawberry Parfait also sold more than its normal amount of frappes.

He added that people ordered very little fried food.

"That week we sold three times the normal volume of spareribs and other grilled items, more cook-out type of things."

His observations holds true for Peter Kulturides, chef at the Log 'N Line.

"I sold a lot of broiled chicken and barbecue ribs, twice the normal amount," Kulturides said.

He added that extreme heat lessens appetites so he saw more orders for lighter fare.

"We went through 100 pounds of fresh fruit that week," Kulturides said. "Normally we sell 40 to 45 pounds." Like J. J.'s Dairy Hut, the Log 'N Line saw more requests for salad plates.

"Tuna salad, chicken salad, egg salad and pasta salad. We sold three times what we normally sell in salads," he said.

Red Lion Inn chef Richard G. Straley said the Inn sold a lot of ice-cream. "We saw a lot of ice-cream go out," he said. For main meals, people ordered cold dishes, Straley said.

"They leaned toward cold foods— like cold pasta salads and shrimp cocktail," he said. "When it gets so hot, people go out cause they don't want to cook and it's air-conditioned in most restaurants."

However, the cooler environment ends at restaurants' kitchens.

"We have a thermometer in the kitchen, in front of the broiler," Straley explained. "It registered 165 degrees during those hot days."

To keep cool, he said the kitchen staff drank lots of water and Gatorade.

According to Joseph Gagne, manager of Curtis Liquors, residents drank more than water during the heat wave.

"Anything cold sold, especially cold wine," he said. "Every time you turn around, the cold wine coolers were gone," Gagne said.

Curtis Liquors also sold twice its normal amount of ice, he added.

Residents interested in keeping their homes cool purchased all the fans available at Cohasset Hardware. Manager Phil Rose said the store is still out of the mechanical air-circulators.

"They are back-ordered. The supplier doesn't even have any," Rose said. Another item the store sold out of that it hasn't been able to replenish is lawn sprinklers.

"Sprinklers, soaker-hoses and water-related items — they are back-ordered, too," he said.

One thing people did not buy a lot of were the services of dry-cleaners, according to Cathy Dwyer, co-owner of Dwyer's One-Stop Cleaners. She said summer is usually a slow time for dry-cleaners, but that the unusually high temperatures made it worse.

"We see less dry-cleaning in the summer anyhow, but especially now," Dwyer said. She speculated that people wear more casual clothes in the summer, like cotton shorts and shirts. Those items, she said, they can wash themselves at home.

Dwyer also said it was so hot during the heat wave few people wanted to be out carrying clothes to the dry-cleaners.

Grant will light up stop-smoking efforts

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset may be 'tiny town' but it gets its share of administrative duties.

It's too much for the smallest town in the area, Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle says, about the extra work.

Although after the discussion Laugelle joined the rest of the board in giving the go-ahead for Cohasset to serve as the lead town in a new smoking cessation program — his okay wasn't without protest.

"I don't understand it, we're the smallest town of the group," Laugelle said.

Cohasset will serve as the lead town in a collaborative effort with Braintree, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, and Scituate for tobacco control.

The collaborative boards of health are seeking a grant from the state. The grant is paid for through the cigarette excise tax approved when voters passed Question #1 in last November's state election.

"Whoever receives the money is the lead agency," Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik explained.

As chief financial officers, selectmen are required to sign the contract with the state. The grant would make $100,000 available every year for five years.

He said that town accountant Michael Buckley has agreed to handle the financial aspects of the contract for the collaborative. Godzik said the town would be reimbursed through the grant for any administrative costs including Buckley's time.

Laugelle was not pleased about sharing the town accountant.

"Doesn't he (Buckley) have enough to do? He should have approached us first and asked us," Laugelle said.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained Buckley's duties would include paying invoices, process supply invoices, and recording revenue from the state.

"A lot more work will be done by the health agents and boards of health in the towns," Doyon said.

The goal of the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program is to reduce smoking incidence by 50 percent in five years, Godzik said. He said 24 percent of the population smokes now.

Cohasset also serves as the lead town for the five-town fire department regionalization study paid for through a state grant.. Buckley's duties for the smoking program would be similar with this grant, selectmen said.

Godzik estimated that grant monies would be used to hire four people on a contract monies to administer the program.

The tobacco-control grant proposal will include:

- policy development including developing smoking policies in public places and the workplace;
- education, including educating the general public regarding the hazards of smoking and environmental tobacco smoke; coordinating efforts with schools to target children and adolescents; pregnant women; and minority, ethnic or other groups with high-smoking incidence;
- enforcement, including current regulations regarding sales to minors and possible "sting" operations in stores where tobacco products are sold;
- smoking cessation programs.

Harbormaster candidates are interviewed

Selectmen Michael H. Sullivan and Rocco F. Laugelle narrowed 46 candidates for the town's full-time harbormaster post down to three who were interviewed by the entire board July 19.

Finalists Sean Kelly of Scituate and Frank Carey and John Winters of Cohasset are vying for the job held by Irving Gadow who steps down August 15.

Kelly, who is one of 14 assistant harbormasters in Scituate, cited his five years experience as an assistant harbormaster and 13 years in the Coast Guard as assets.

Kelly explained that in Scituate the harbormaster's office is "pro-use of the harbor for everyone" and doesn't show favoritism to any one group. He said if chosen he would volunteer to serve as a call-firefighter in the winter to help to get to know the town.

Carey, who runs Mill River Marine in Cohasset, said he had a plan to increase mooring space in the harbor. He would also like to see harbor rules posted on the dock. Carey said he has a good relationship with commercial fishermen.

Winters, who has served as an assistant harbormaster in the past, is a former lobsterman and worked as a property manager for State Street Development, said by charging a float fee and having guest moorings, he thought the harbor "could be a money-making operation." Winters does specialty woodworking and had a hand in building the town pump.

Selectmen asked the harbor committee to recommend one of the finalists and plan to appoint Gadow's successor at their Aug. 2 meeting.

Texaco station to get high-class canopy

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Protecting Cohasset Village's aesthetic charm was the theme that ran through two issues the planning board discussed July 14.

The privately-owned Olympic Texaco gas station in the village will have a canopy by next year or no longer be a Texaco. Owner George Roukounakis said all Texaco gas stations have to comply with the same structural image by next year the latest.

The Mobil gas station in town already has a canopy and the Exxon station has gained approval by the planning board as well to build one. Planning board members agreed that Roukounakis has to get a canopy to stay in business.

The sensitivity of the downtown area, however, demands special attention to be given to the design of the project.

"Structurally, it's simple," said planning board member Bob Sturdy, who suggested that the design review board assist in the canopy design.

The design review board, is appointed by the selectmen, assists the planning board when trying to maintain an aesthetic image.

Chairman of the planning board, Albert S. Moore, said, "I don't think there will be a great objection from Texaco if the design review board does something creative, as long as it works within the structural parameters of theirs."

A main concern with building a canopy is the level of lighting that will be given off. Even though the downtown area is commercial, it is also residential from every side.

"Any level of lighting under a canopy is sort of like a carnival," said Sturdy, who is concerned that the lighting does not "bounce all over the place."

Signs are another concern of the planning board. When it comes to big flashing signs, Moore said the site of Olympic Texaco does not call for people to come in and get gas.

A site plan review will be conducted to make certain the site is safe for canopy placement and suggest changes if necessary.

The location is a fortunate one, said Moore, because it is set back from the street. A public hearing on the issue will be held sometime in August, he said.

Sign permit refused

Also on the agenda was a proposal by Saint Stevens Episcopal Church to put up a 21 square foot sign on their front lawn.

The sign, which would be double sided, hand-carved, brick red mahogany, would be non-conforming to the town statute that prohibits any sign exceeding six square feet within a residential area.

Also, with the area being considered for National Register Historic district status, the planning board does not want to jeopardize the outcome.

No signs exceeding two square feet can be placed within 15 feet of a historic district, the board explained.

Another topic concerned the opening of a bed and breakfast at 2 Boundbrook Lane by John and Doris Golden.

The special permit request was denied. It was disapproved by Sturdy and seconded by Bill Good because it is a residential area and access and parking may have caused problems.

The next planning board meeting is Aug. 4.

OK given to borrow

Selectmen gave the okay to the treasurer's office to borrow $102,533 at 2.25 percent from Rockland Trust for highway resurfacing in anticipation of state aid.

The town will also borrow $485,000 at 2.3 percent from Fleet Bank to purchase the Hagerty property off Border Street. Town meeting authorized the purchase. Fleet Bank was the low bidder, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

around town

❑ Welcome Timothy Patrick Grady, son of Maryanne and Sean! Timothy was born June 19 and weighed 8 lbs. 9 ozs! His grandparents are Rose and Joe Dooley of S. Dennis and Betty and Tom Grady of St. Clairsville, OH!

❑ Davis Rosser Walp makes the news this week! He graduated from the University of Rochester with a bachelor's degree in psychology, and we think that is grand!

❑ John P. Staunton also joins the group of grads; he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English from Middlebury College May 23!

❑ Sydney Johnston received a Certificate of Distinction for her achievement on the SAT test. She was one of 18 Derby Academy students to do so. What an honor and what a grand young lady!

❑ The final bit of news for the week is special! Robert V. Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davenport, a senior history and leadership studies major, made the 1993 dean's list at Ripon College.

Here's to a super guy with a great future ahead of him!

❑ Let's start off by giving a rousing welcome to Tara Murphy Goodwin, the brand new daughter of Ron and Mary Goodwin. Tara was born June 6 and weighed 6 lbs. Imagine how tiny she must look to her big sister Margaret who is 2 1/2 years old!

Naturally Tara's grandparents Ruth and Harry Goodwin and Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy are thrilled, and her Auntie Ruthie is coming from California to be her godmother. What a happy family, how nice!! Watch for the baby carriage to be wheeled "around town".

❑ Susannah K. Lean, daughter of Mary Beth and William R. Lean Jr., graduated from Hartwick College with a Bachelor of Arts degree in art.

Sue is a really talented lady, watch for her name in the future.

❑ The Shumaker family sure had a busy spring! It all started in May when Jim had his "biggie" birthday. Then came June 10 when David graduated from Harvard with a 3.5 overall average. Then, David got "hitched." He married Patricia O'Brien in Morristown, N.J. , with his best man Rob Leonard by his side. Lisa came for the event from California (for those who may not know, Lisa is David's sister). From all reports, the whole time was wonderful!

David and Patricia are living in Quincy, and both have great jobs. David is with Mass General, a research assistant and Patricia is at John Hancock with elderly. Congratulations!

❑ Thayer Academy sends us news of the Verocchi family this week. Marisa was elected as an officer of the sophomore class, and Matthew earned himself a spot on the grade six achievement honor roll.

We are sure that Mom and Dad, Paul and June, are very pleased with them!!

❑ Speaking of Thayer Academy, that is where Davis Rosser Walp graduated from. Now news comes from the University of Rochester that as a recent graduate from there he has also been named to the Dean's List for academic achievement! Hats off to you Davis, and here's to a wonderful future for you.

❑ Another Cohassetite makes the Dean's List, this time it is Noah M. Hill at James Madison University of Forest Ave. fame.

❑ Here comes a story that will be told at family events for generations in the Doggett family. Polly and Thomas' son, Dana, recently became a Dad for the fourth time, the young lady's name is Alexandra. Dana was on a trip with the Scouts. They were in Falmina Gourge, rafting, when he was hailed to let him know the news. He flew out of the wilderness, thanks to lots of help, to see Chris and Alexandra.

Can you imagine being out in the middle of nowhere, then getting word that you are about to be a Dad?

Babies have a schedule that is all their own, and Alexandra's Dad sure had to go through plenty to give her that first kiss! Flamina Gourge will not be forgotten!!!

At a May 15 ceremony at St. Anthony's Church, Virginia Nussdorfer, daughter of Daniel and Jayne Nussdorfer of Jerusalem Rd., became the bride of John Froio.

He is the son of James and Barbara Froio of Surrey Drive.

The Rev. Nicholas Morcone officiated. A reception followed at the Cohasset Country Club.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister Julie Nussdorfer was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Christina Buckley, Jennifer Long, Wendy White, all of Cohasset, and Christine Conti, Holly McCown, Lisa Deletto, and Lisa Marion.

Glen Froio of Cohasset served as best man. Ushers were Jim Froio Jr., Daniel Nussdorfer, Joe Carroll, Jesse Phifer, Brad Whitehead, Chris Pearson, and Chris Cox.

The bride is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and is employed at Warner Lambert Co. in Boston.

The groom is a graduate of Wake Forest University in North Carolina. He is a medical student at Boston University.

After a wedding trip to Sanibel Island, the couple is making their home in Boston's North End.

Beach boozing

We think Police Chief Brian W. Noonan deserves unequivocal support from both elected town officials and ordinary citizens in his efforts to ensure that Cohasset isn't in the business of condoning under-age drinking.

And if that means changing a by-law to shut down a beach parking lot to deter under-age drinking from taking place or kicking prom-goers off town-owned land — then so be it.

The chief says his stance may be unpopular and he's probably right.

Some people won't like having their access to Sandy Beach later in the evening curtailed because of a problem with teenagers. However, that point may be moot because under current conditions the average citizen is afraid to park there in the evening.

And some misguided parents may feel that drinking is something that most teenagers experiment with so they might as well do it close to home.

But we think at the very least most citizens will be pleased to have less broken glass to deal with.

And believe us — broken beer and wine bottles are no small problem in town. Two weeks ago, I took my four young nephews on a tour of Cohasset following the pancake breakfast sponsored by the historical society. One of our stops was Government Island which included a climb up Beacon Rock to get a bird's eye view of the harbor and Minot's Light.

I told the boys about the hard work of many volunteers to make Government Island truly special. But our scaling up Beacon Rock made us feel sad. The rock was strewn with countless pieces broken glass. And some of the large, jagged, broken beer bottles posed a real danger for young hands and knees negotiating the climb. We left relieved that our visit didn't require a trip to the emergency room.

Clearly, the dangers of broken glass is a related issue to one of the biggest health crises facing Cohasset and the country: alcohol abuse.

The office of the Surgeon General reports that eight million of our nation's teenagers drink weekly. Cohasset High's own Michael Gill conducted a survey which revealed that 73 percent of 11th and 12th graders in town said they'd been drunk in the prior year and 40 percent said they had passed out from drinking.

Kids do need a place to go and have fun — the good, clean kind. But we find it ludicrous that selectmen will ask the prom-organizers to hire a detail officer to monitor kids at the beach rather than shutting the gates. The use of Sandy Beach after hours for prom-goers is a privilege that should be earned.

Instead of requiring the prom-organizers to hire a detail officer — why not require the kids' parents to chaperone and sign a form stating they will be responsible for their children's behavior?

Maybe that will get the message across.

Police aren't baby-sitters — they are professionals who know very well the tragic consequences of mixing youth and alcohol. The town should not put road blocks in front of the clear message that Noonan wants to send: underage drinking is taboo in town.

To the Editor:

This is a recognition and thank you letter to the people and organizations that assisted in the building of the Cohasset World War II honor roll. They all assisted in different ways that would be too lengthy and boring to describe. It would have been impossible to complete without them. I estimate their assistance amounted to $23,000.

They are: Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146, George H. Mealey Post 118, Sons of George H. Mealey Post 118, Harold Coughlin, Foster leaders, Helen Pratt, Burt Pratt, James Tyeryar, Paul Laugelle, Peter Laugelle, Harold Litchfield, Anthony Sestito, Carl Sestito, Cohasset School Committee, Raymond Vanderweil, Arthur Pompeo, Honorable Gerry Studds, Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, Patrick McCarthy, Richard Henderson, Nancy Snowdale, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Bob Martin, Paul Barry, James Shurau, Kathy Becker, George Haley, James Donahue, Herbert Towle, Sumner Smith, Peter Faga, Joseph McElory, William Higgins, David Hassen, B.E. Peterson Co., Larry Ahearn, Committee members, Ralph Perroncello, Joseph Perroncello, Stephen Wigmore, Thomas Healey, Richard Leggart, Robert Silvia.

The final work of erection and construction was done by Louis Bailey with crane, Paul McEachern, Robert Silvia, Bruce Edmonds.

A very sincere thank you

Help made '93 tennis tourney a hit

To the Editor:

We would like to extend our appreciation to the numerous people who helped make the 1993 Cohasset Community Center Round Robin Tennis Tournament a tremendous success.

The committee members did an outstanding job from planning to implementation. Thank you to Chris Horne and Jan Bickford for setting up court placements for us. Our court monitors were essential in keeping the spirit and enthusiasm high during the warm weather play, thank you. There were many students who volunteered during our youth tournament and made tennis a fun-filled experience.

Thank you to all the very generous court owners, who once again donated their courts for a very worthy cause. We are grateful to the many local businesses for contributing items for our raffle. A special thanks to our corporate sponsor Fleet Bank for their financial support and concern for the Nardo Nursery School Scholarship Fund and the Community Center's Mortgage Reduction Program.

We look forward to hearing from you with any suggestions you might have for helping make the tournament even better.

State should help cities and towns fight rabies

State Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci recently called on the state to provide more assistance to municipalities in fighting this year's outbreak of rabies, which has become a statewide public health hazard. Fourteen cities and towns have asked DeNucci, through his Division of Local Mandates, to review various rabies laws under his authority to determine whether state funding would be required.

"The additional cost of rabies control across the state could very well approach $5 million this year," warned DeNucci. "These costs will include veterinarian services, quarantines, inoculations, medical treatment, and increased municipal personnel expenses. The support should come in the form of financial assistance, administrative support and legislative relief."

Auditor DeNucci's recommendations come on the heels of his recent determination that the local mandate law fails to protect municipalities from these extra costs because state law pertaining to rabies control was enacted prior to Proposition 2 1/2. In conducting the review, DeNucci noted that some of the laws had become obsolete and need to be changed.

The outbreak of rabies in racoons has been advancing northward from the mid-Atlantic since 1977. Rabies (except in bats) has been rare in Massachusetts for over 40 years; therefore, local budgets to deal with this problem are generally inadequate.

"Despite of the amount of time available to prepare, the state has done little to provide any more than the usual level of support services to cities and towns. Even though local communities are doing everything possible to combat this epidemic, state help is necessary to assist in dealing with this unforeseen health and safety problem," concluded DeNucci.

Community Lights

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Susan DiPesa is looking for assistance with designing and maintaining the island and the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A. If you can help please leave your name and phone number at the selectmen's officer (383-9900) and Susan will get back to you.

• Anyone, who has trade skills, willing to donate their time and/or simply wants to physically help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Renovation Project, please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505.

• The American Cancer Society needs volunteers to organize walkers, work on logistics, and help along the five-mile route for Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, a walk to benefit the American Cancer Society, Sunday, Sept. 26 on Boston's Esplanade. Call Rita Pastore at 1-800-952-7430.

• The following town committees currently have vacancies: Cable-TV Council (2), Mosquito Control Committee (1), Personnel Committee (1), School Facilities committee (3), and Zoning Board of Appeals (1). Any citizens interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office at town hall.

• Although the following town committees do not currently have openings, any citizen interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office and you will be contacted when an opening comes up: by-law committee, cultural exchange committee, design review board, registrars of voters, public works garage study committee, South Shore Regional School District Committee, computer study committee, conservation commission, water resources protection committee, Straits Pond committee, Wompatuck State Park advisory council, historic commission, recycling committee, cemetery study committee, 911 committee, council on aging, drug and alcohol committee, arts lottery council, housing partnership committee, insurance advisory committee, handicapped commission, Cohasset Common historic district commission, regional refuse disposal planning committee, capital budget committee, public safety study committee, solid waste study committee, solid waste committee, regional school district planning committee, and Title 5 transition committee. All applications will be kept on file in the selectmen's office.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers needed to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• Compassionate human services professionals and other caring special persons needed to volunteer as facilitators for self-help parents' groups in the Weymouth area. These groups provide support for parents under stress who want to improve their relationships with their children. One evening a week commitment. Training and support provided. Call 337-7916 or 1-800-882-1250.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Q & A: Rabies in Massachusetts

(Editor's note: the followtng is from the Massachusetts Dept. of Public Health).

Rabies is a much-feared disease of the nervous system that dates back to ancient times. It is caused by a virus and is transmitted by contact with the saliva of an infected animal, usually through a bite or scratch. The incubation period can last from several weeks to a year or more. If left untreated, the disease is fatal.

Rabies has been rare in Massachusetts for decades, appearing primarily in a very small percentage of bats. However, an outbreak of raccoon rabies, which originated in the mid-Atlantic states in the early 1980s, has now made its way to New England. It is one of several strains of rabies currently plaguing wildlife in different areas of the United States. There is no need to panic, but it is essential that residents know how to protect themselves, their pets, and other animals in their care.

Q. How will I know if an animal is rabid?

A. You can't be completely sure that an animal has rabies just by looking at it, because the signs of rabies are extremely variable and the symptoms often resemble those of other diseases. Animals with rabies sometimes become aggressive, have seizures and attack people and other animals or objects. Rabid animals also sometimes suffer paralysis of the jaw, excessive salivation and weakness. Wild animals may become unusually tame or friendly. Any abnormal behavior in a wild animal should raise the suspicion of rabies.

If you see an animal that you suspect may be rabid, don't try to deal with it yourself. Call your local animal control officer, health board, police department, the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, or the Massachusetts Department of Public Health for assistance.

Q. What animals carry rabies?

A. All mammals can contract rabies, but the current outbreak primarily affects raccoons, with some spillover into skunks, foxes, and occasionally woodchucks (also known as groundhogs). Rabbits, opossums, squirrels, chipmunks, rats, mice and other small rodents are rarely affected. Birds, snakes, turtles, lizards, frogs, toads, salamanders, fish and insects do not get rabies.

Q. What can I do to avoid rabies?

A. Pets are the most common link between rabid wildlife and humans. The most important preventative step you can take is to be sure your dogs and cats are up-to-date on their rabies vaccinations — for your sake and theirs. Even indoor cats should be vaccinated since they can accidentally get out, and infected animals can get in. Do not let your pets roam free, and do not feed them outside. If you keep a bird feeder, clean up spilled seed to avoid attracting other wildlife. Consult your veterinarian about vaccinating livestock, since they can also contract rabies.

Enjoy wild animals from a distance. Never handle or attempt to pet or feed them. Do not keep wildlife as pets; there are no rabies vaccines approved for use in wild animals. Keep your trash cans in a closed garage or shed. Use raccoon-proof lids on garbage day. Keep wildlife from living in and around your home by sealing holes and screening chimneys. If you have raccoons, skunks, or other wildlife living in your house, call or write to the MSPCA for a copy of its "Critter Proofing" brochure for advice on encouraging them to leave before you seal their entryways.

Q. What should I do if my pet comes into contact with a potentially rabid animal?

A. First, take your pet to a secure place as soon as you can safely do so. Always try to identify the animal your pet had contact with before it runs off; observe its behavior and appearance. With gloved hands, wash your pet's wounds thoroughly with warm soapy water, then call your veterinarian or emergency animal hospital immediately.

Any animal bite, regardless of whether the attacking animal is suspected of having rabies, is an emergency situation requiring immediate veterinary attention. It is essential to see a veterinarian even if there are no apparent wounds. Rabies, transmitted by saliva, can spread via mucous membranes as well as previously existing cuts.

Also, contact your local animal control officer, health board, police department, or the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife immediately to report the incident and ask for assistance in removing the other animal if it is dead or still present in the area.

Q. What if my child is bitten or otherwise comes into contact with a potentially rabid animal?

A. The Department of Public Health recommends that you wash any wounds thoroughly with warm soapy water, then call your pediatrician or go to your local emergency room immediately. Obtain as much information as possible about the animal. If it was a neighbor's pet, ask the pet owner if the animal's rabies vaccinations are up-to-date. Then contact your local animal control officer, health board, police officer, or the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife immediately to report the incident and, if the animal is not someone's pet, ask for assistance in capturing it.

Q. What if my pet bites or scratches someone?

A. A dog or cat that bites a person or another pet must be quarantined for ten days — even if it is up-to-date on its rabies shots. Your local officials will monitor and enforce this regulation. If the animal has rabies, it will show signs of the disease in that time period. If signs of rabies develop, the animal will be euthanized and tested for rabies.

Q. What do I do if I see a sick raccoon, skunk, or fox wobbling around in my backyard?

A. Don't attempt to kill the animal or handle it yourself. Contact your local animal control officer, health board, police department, or the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife for information and assistance.

Q. It's a sunny day, and there is a raccoon, skunk, or fox in my yard. Does that mean the animal is rabid?

A. Not necessarily. Although these animals are usually nocturnal, even healthy ones may come out during the day. If the animal doesn't appear sick, leave it alone and keep your children and pets indoors.

Q. Where can I get more information about rabies?

A. You can call the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, (617) 522-3700; Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, (617) 727-3151; Massachusetts Division of Animal Health, (617) 727-3015, Massachusetts Division of Environmental Law Enforcement, (800) 632-8075; or your local doctor, veterinarian, animal control officer, or board of health.

Ed. reform bill could mean $165K for town schools

By David Wolcott
Mariner staff

Following the lead of most every school department across the Commonwealth, the Cohasset school committee took up most of their meeting last week discussing the ramifications of the recently passed $175 million educational reform bill.

School Supt. Stephen Hart did his best to try and condense the 97-page, 105 section bill into an outline that the school committee will now have to follow.

"The Department of Education has a tremendous task ahead of them right now to try and implement all of the changes that will occur with the bill" said Hart.

Hart estimated that the reform bill could mean an extra $165,000 to the town, according to the formula for distributing the financial aid that will be used by the state.

"What this bill has done is put a great deal of focus on education", said Hart. "People are now talking about the quality of education in this state, and that is a very good thing to have happening."

Hart indicated that although the $165,000 due to the town was fairly secure, the exact financial workings of the bill are still to be worked out by the state legislature.

"The magic words 'subject to appropriation' appear within the bill, so the financial section of the bill is still unclear at this time," he said.

When asked after the meeting about possible places where the extra money could be used, Hart said that there was no specific plans in place yet for the distribution of the funds, but that the intent of the bill was that the money not to be used for increasing teacher salaries or on collective bargaining agreements.

Looking at the bill itself, school committee chairman Nancy Sandell expressed concern about the amount of new work for the school administration that sections of the bill will bring about, saying that the principal will have at times an "awesome task".

Another area that Supt. Hart touched upon was that of the elimination of the tenure status for teachers as well as the new relationship mandated by the reform bill between the school committee and the teaching staff.

The language of the bill has eliminated tenure status for all teachers, with that being replaced by professional teacher status that can be achieved by a teacher after three years at a school.

Also, teachers now can only be dismissed from their positions by the school principals, who would need to have the consent of the Supt. Hart to do so, which effectively cuts any school committee out of any hiring/firing decisions except for that of the superintendent.

A teacher can be dismissed for many of the same reasons as before, with such situations now added including performance as well as "just cause", and a dismissed teacher can no longer appeal to the school committee if they are fired, but the matter will go directly to an independent arbitrator.

One of the more controversial issues of the reform package is the setting up of a school council at each school, which will consist of the principal, school parents who have been elected by other parents of children at that school to serve as representatives on the council, teachers at the school as well as other persons who are not to be either parents of students or teachers at the school.

Cohasset is already served through the school system by a Parent-Student Organization (PSO), which has two representatives for each of the three town schools, which Supt. Hart said might already meet the standard set by the bill.

Chairman Sandell spoke out in favor of the advent of the school council, saying that "we need to have as many people as possible involved in trying to make an impact on education. This is not a rubber-stamp group at all, and the council will be a very important factor and a positive helper for the town."

The school council is being set up to assist in the identification of the educational needs of the students at that school, will review the annual school budget and also assist in the formulation of a school improvement plan each year.

The committee set their next meeting for Tuesday, August 10, and then for Sept. 2 to discuss goals for the 1993-94 school year.

Use of Common granted

Selectmen granted a request from Donald B. Armin, 12 Tupelo Rd., to use space on the east side of Cohasset Common on the afternoon of Sunday, July 25.

Mr. Armin explained that following a memorial service for his late wife, Jean Nelson Armin, a memorial tribute honoring her work for and commitment to the goals of the Boston Children's Theatre is planned. Kids of the BCT's stagemobile will perform excerpts of two children's classics, "Hansel and Gretel" and "Pinnochio" at about 3:15 p.m. The excerpts will be performed by youngsters currently taking part in the Stagemobile's summer program.

"Having these kids perform in honor of my wife's long-time commitment to children's theatre is a warming, appropriate gesture of appreciation for what she held dear," Mr. Armin wrote in his request.

Ambulance billing report

Before fire Chief John R. Nadeau left for his new post in Salem, NH, he submitted a full, 12-month FY'93 ambulance billing report to selectmen.

Total receipts/turnovers for the year were $89,411.14. Nadeau set a goal of $90,000 for FY'93.

Billed calls for June totalled $9,516.16 and receipts deposited for the month with the town treasurer were $6,218.91.

Board pays bills

At their July 19 meeting, selectmen authorized payment of the following bills: $1,076.40 and $4.20 to the legal firm Warner & Stackpole, which works with the health board, for professional services for May and June; $1,866.48 to engineers Civil Designs, Inc., for beach repairs for April, May and June; $5,375.18 to labor counsel McGowan, Engel, Tucker, Garrett & Schultz for January through June; $128.70 to sewer counsel Goodwin, Procter & Hoar; and $2,793.50 to town counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services for June.

Games are no big deal to Freeman

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Ryan Freeman probably would have had experienced less culture shock if he travelled to Italy last weekend than compete in the scholastic wrestling division of the Bay State Games.

The Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic won three of his four matches, yet it wasn't good enough to get him into the top six. Unlike high school matches, where the matches are bracketed and the winners advance, the BSG uses a point system.

And although Freeman wasn't particularly thrilled with the format, he wasn't overly disappointed with his performance.

"It doesn't bother me as much as if it was a loss in the regular season," said the personable junior-to-be, who was 32-4 for the Cohasset High School wrestling team.

"This right here (BSG) was practice. I'd rather lose now than later on."

Freeman also experimented with a new weight division during the BSG. During his all-scholastic season he wrestled at 112 pounds. For the BSG, he didn't place himself on a specific diet as he does in the winter, and decided to compete in the 135-pound division.

"I figured for the summer I didn't want to cut weight," Freeman said. "I'd wait for the winter."

Freeman found his competitors to be much stronger than anticipated. He freely admits he wasn't as mentally prepared as he should have been, but that didn't stop him from winning his first three matches before dropping his semi-final grapple by one point.

"I've got to go out harder," Freeman said of his major mistake that may have cost him a medal. "I just went out too relaxed."

Freeman liked competing in a mid-summer, non-season meet, just to get an idea of where his conditioning is at.

"It's fun," he said. "It's a good experience because you wrestle people from all over the state. It's also one of the best tournaments of the summer."

A three-sport athlete at CHS, Freeman has spent the summer lifting, running and attending wrestling clinics at Brockton High School. He also attended a wrestling camp at the University of Iowa, which was taught by head coach Dan Gable and several of the Iowa wrestlers.

Freeman "learned a lot of technique. Mainly takedowns.

"Overall I have a better technique at wrestling. I perfected my moves better."

Sharks confident going into tourney suffered through a miserable 3-12 season under head coach Ted MacDermott. The same players, though, finished up their Big Leagues' schedule this week with a 6-2 record and a trip to the state tournament this weekend on the North Shore.

MacDermott, it was recently learned, will not be coaching the team in '94. It was no secret that there was tension between several players and MacDermott, who also is the varsity football coach.

None of the players interviewed know who will be replacing MacDermott, but they are looking ahead to the season, based more on the fact that the LandSharks' season has gone well, rather than MacDermott's departure from the head job.

"Everyone's looking forward to it," said catcher Chris Rolandelli, Mike's younger brother. At the plate, Rolandelli had a season much like his high school campaign. The 17 year old, who'll be a senior in September, batted in the .330s with a number of extra-base hits.

Despite the solid numbers, he was over-anxious at the plate and never really relaxed. As a result of playing for the LandSharks and the advice from his brother, Rolandelli has become more selective in his pitch selection more confident he is going to wind up on base when he's at bat.

"The biggest thing I've learned," Rolandelli said, "is to be patient. In high school I was more anxious."

That goes for the rest of the squad as well.

"During the high-school year we weren't really a team," Rolandelli continued. "Everyone is more relaxed on this team. We're more laid back.

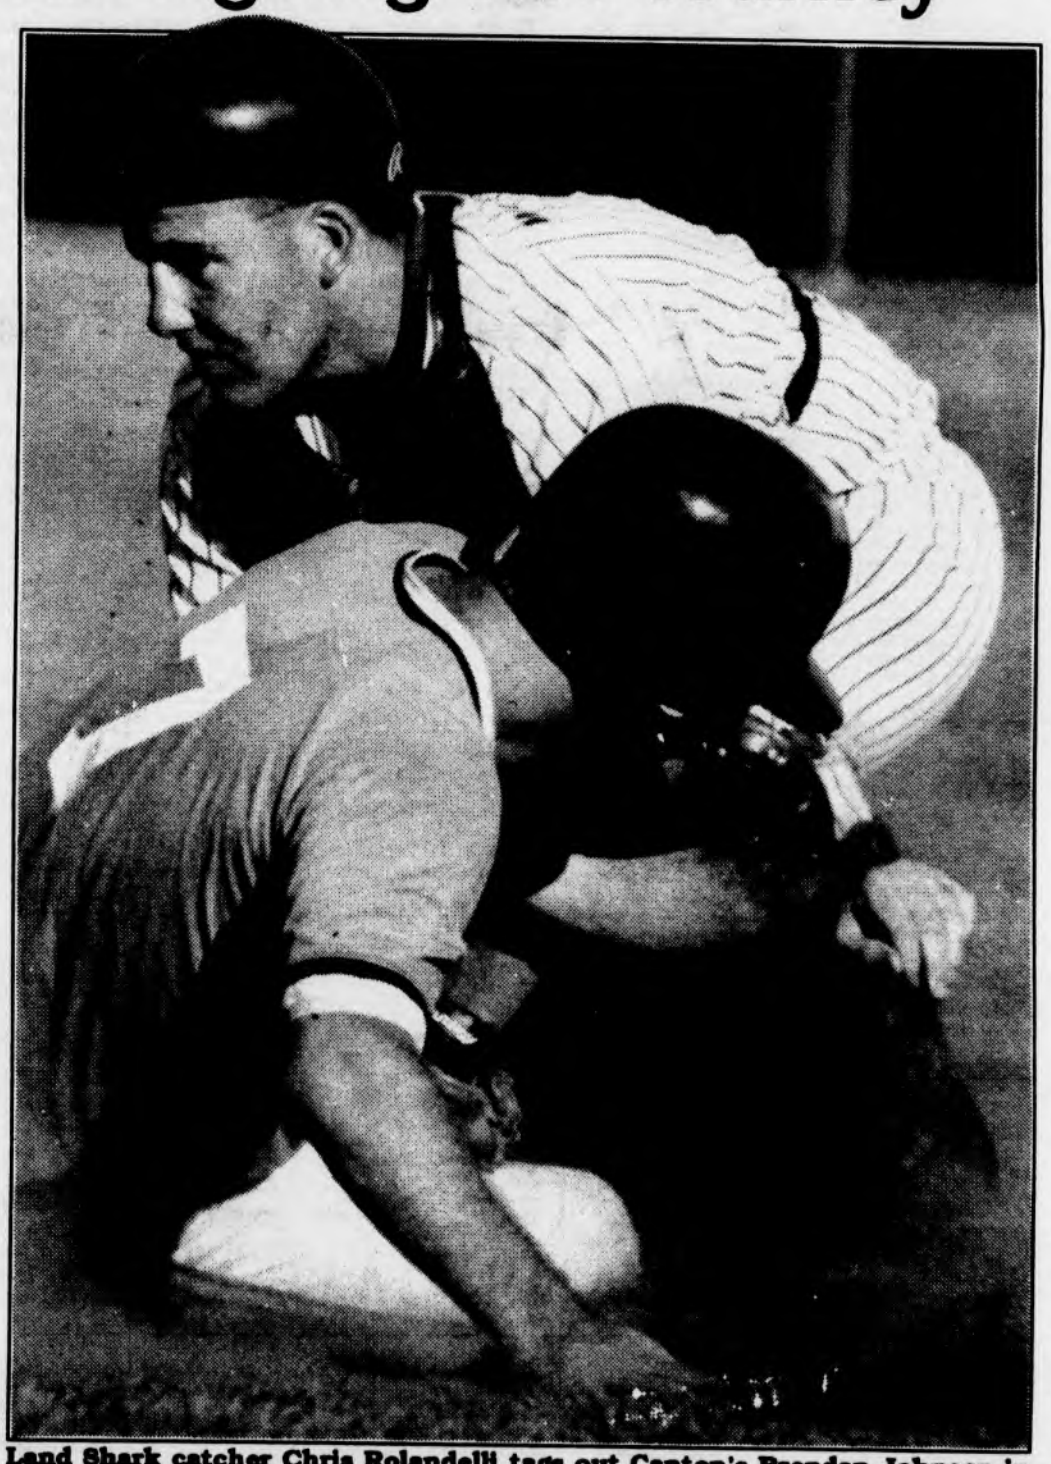
"He (Mike) always says 'relax, it's no big deal.'"

Rolandelli has also found a new position he plans to stick with in his final high-school season. His brother made him the team's catcher and Rolandelli took an immediate liking to working with the pitchers and being part of the game on every play.

"This is my first year catching," he said. "I love it. I think it's the best position and I've played all of them."

Second-baseman Brian Kinchla, who played in the Cohasset Pony League last summer, saw a definite improvement in his fielding and believes the team will improve greatly on its three-wins when next spring rolls around.

"I didn't make as many errors as I had," said Kinchla, who committed just one error this summer. "I had lots more than that (on the high school team).



Land Shark catcher Chris Rolandelli tags out Canton's Brendan Johnson in their Major League game on Tuesday. Cohasset is undefeated in the newly-formed league. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Kinchla, too, liked the laid-back style of play stressed by Rolandelli. "He wanted us to win, but wanted us to have fun mostly."

Senior-to-be Andy Church, the team's starting left fielder, has seen improvement in his batting, mainly, he says, because the tension he once had at the plate has disappeared.

"I'm more relaxed," he said. "I don't feel like I'm under a lot of pressure.

"At the end (of the high-school season) we didn't care that much about it. We just wanted to get the season over with and play the last couple of games."

Church is convinced playing for the LandSharks can't help but improve on last year's record.

"I think the summer league will help us out for the spring because we're playing almost year-round. I think it will help out a lot.

"The LandShark team is more fun to play on than the high-school team. The games are more competitive and closer."

High-tech, and location bring life to sports museum

By David McKee
Mariner staff

You look out towards the mound through your catcher's mask and call for a curveball.

Boston Red Sox all-star pitcher Roger Clemens, who is standing 60 feet, six inches away, shakes his head. He does not want to throw an Uncle Charlie.

Instead you decide on the fastball and Clemens rears back and throws.

The 90-mile an hour fastball flies through the air and thuds into your glove for strike three.

No, this is not a scene from a Red Sox fantasy camp but "Catching Clemens," one of the many new high-tech exhibits at the Sports Museum of New England.

The museum, formerly located on Soldier's Field Road in Brighton, opened at the CambridgeSide Galleria Mall, near the Museum of Science, on April 23.

"Catching Clemens" is just one of the many participatory exhibits at the 17,000 square foot museum, which also houses vast amounts of memorabilia on sports in New England.

At "Catching Clemens" visitors simply bend into a crouch, place their face into the catcher's mask and put their hand into the catcher's mitt.

They press either "fastball," "curve," "slider," or "forkball," and a videotape of Roger Clemens fires the pitch to the person.

When the pitch reaches the plate, the impact of the ball can be felt in the glove which jolts back. If someone calls for the same pitch too many times, Clemens will shake them off.

"Catching Clemens" is one of the more popular high-tech exhibits at the museum.

Others include bleacher and court-side perspectives of the Boston Garden, Fenway Park and Harvard Stadium.

In these mini-theatres, visitors can sit in an actual seat from Fenway or the Garden and see a life-sized view of these sports shrines while they watch videotape highlights.

Another high-tech exhibit is the "In the Net" where visitors stand in front of an NHL hockey goal and fend off simulated shots from some of the top NHL stars like Pittsburgh's Mario Lemieux.

The high-tech exhibits and the prime location at the popular shopping mall have been great for business at the museum.

At its former site in an abandoned municipal building on Soldier's Field Road, there were space as well as accessibility problems.

Museum curator Dick Johnson and chairman of the board, former Celtic Dave Cowens finally found a suitable location for the museum at the CambridgeSide Galleria after years of searching.

The building on Soldier's Field Road is now used as an archive.

"The business has been very steady since the opening," said Admission Representative Jane Brunet. "This is a great location and people can come by while they are shopping and have a good time."

Jeff Jackson, a development assistant at the museum, said the idea of locating at the CambridgeSide Galleria happened by chance.

"Dave Cowens was on a plane and was sitting next to Steve Karp, the owner of the Galleria and they started talking and one thing led to another and now we're here," Jackson said.

The funding for the new location came primarily through corporate donations, according to Jackson.

The museum, which is non-profit has a $6 admission fee for adults with $4.50 for seniors and children. The admission fee covers the operating expenses for the museum, according to Jackson.

The admission price includes a free Polaroid snapshot next to any exhibit in the museum.

The museum has a merchandise store next to its entrance.

Family and individual memberships to the museum are also offered. Membership allows for unlimited visits to the museum.

Individual memberships are $35 [illegible] family memberships costing $75.

Jackson said the memberships are important for the growth of the museum.

"We are hoping to generate a large membership," Jackson said. "The more members we attract, the more we can offer patrons.

However the main attraction to the museum is its extensive memorabilia collection.

The three most impressive items are the life-sized wood sculptures of Boston Celtic Larry Bird, Boston Bruin Bobby Orr and Boston Red Sox Carl Yastremski created by artist Armand LaMontagne.

One of LaMontagne's other works, a life-sized sculpture of Boston Red Sox Ted Williams, resides in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

The three museum sculptures show Bird, Orr and Yaz in action and bear an uncanny resemblance to the sports superstars.

Accompanying each sculpture is a video tape of the artist working with the athlete during the creative process.

There are also jerseys, old gloves, sticks and balls from Celtic, Red Sox, Patriot and Bruin history.

There are also sections dedicated to the Olympics, High School and college athletics. There are sections on distinctly New England sporting events like the Boston Marathon or the Head of the Charles.

The newest exhibit honors the professional women's baseball leagues that existed during the WWII era. A recent movie, "A League of Their Own," brought these neglected leagues to the public's attention.

Some of the other items at the museum include a racing car from actor Paul Newman and the Yawkey Pavilion, a classroom and meeting room dedicated to former Sox owner Thomas Yawkey.

There are even old photos of Babe Ruth when he played for the Red Sox during the 1918 season, the last year the Sox won the World Series.

The museum is located on Edwin H. Land Boulevard just beyond the Museum of Science off Storrow Drive.

There is ample parking and the museum resides on level one of the mall.

Freeman wins three of four . . .

He'll play soccer in the fall, but will have the winter season in his mind. Freeman intends to run and lift weights in the morning during the soccer season to maintain what he builds up this summer.

"I like to stay in shape," he said.

Although Freeman wasn't on a weight schedule, he'll be back to a strict, non-fat, high carbohydrate diet when the season begins. He wants to wrestle at 119 or 125 pounds.

"Most of the weight I lose is water weight," Freeman said, "but in the end you lose the fat — and a little bit of muscle."

Freeman should be the most watched of the Cohasset wrestlers, following the graduation of fellow all-scholastics Nate Fiore and Ray Jones. The team lost much of its depth after finishing third in the South Shore League at 12-5.

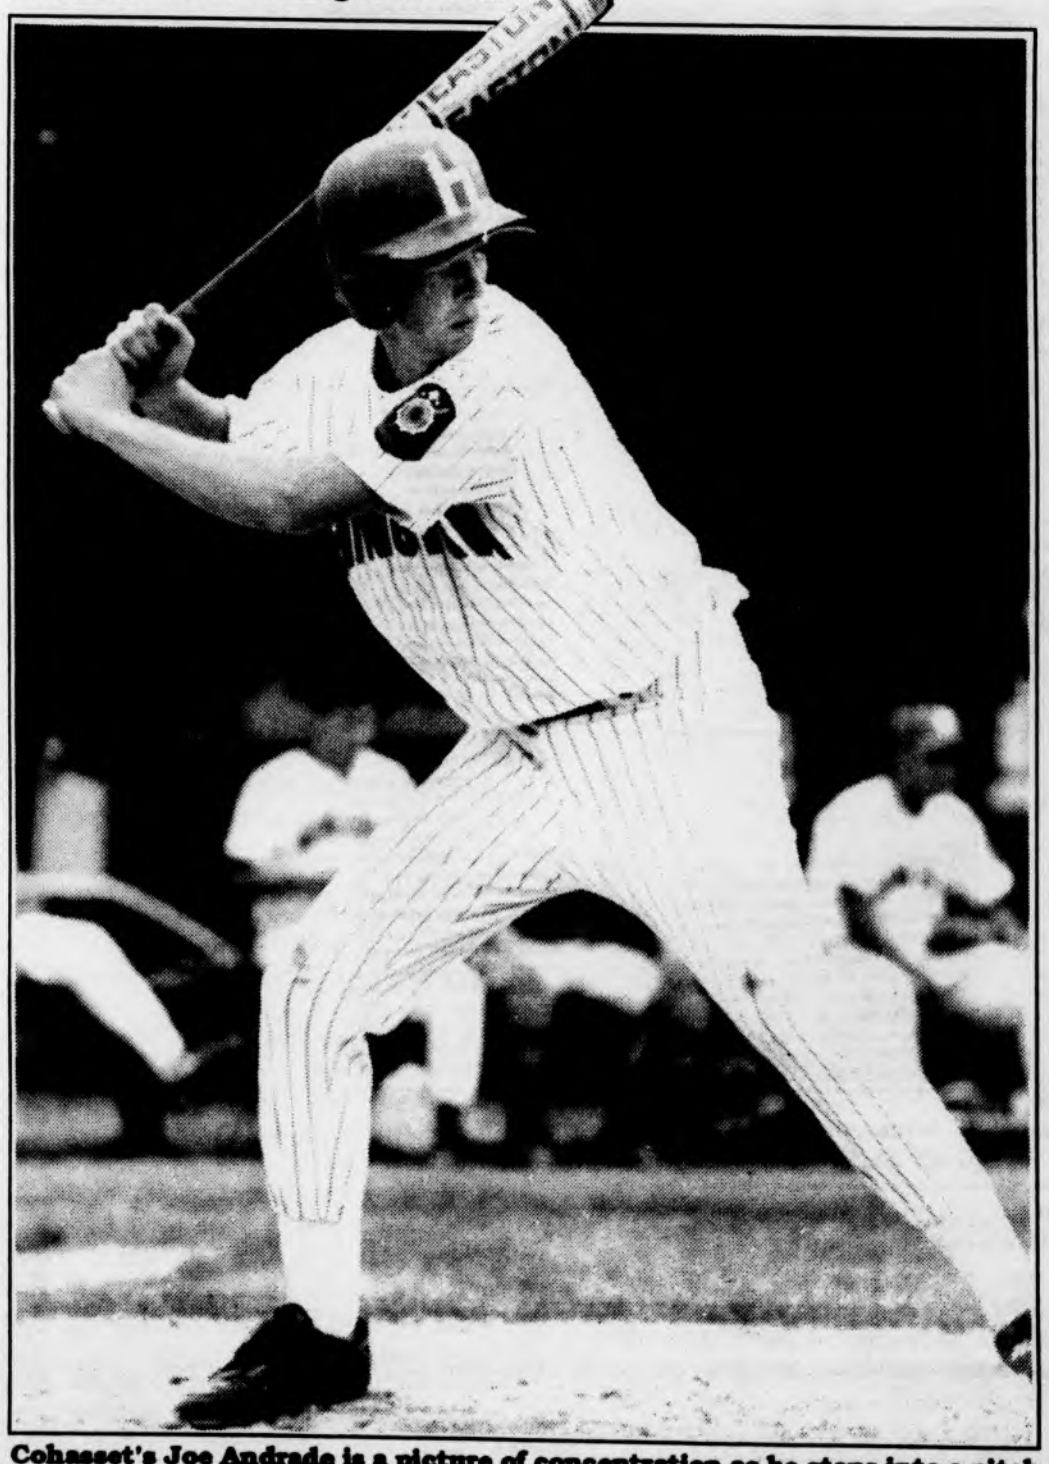
"We'll see how we do," Freeman said. "It'll be curious."

When suggested he may be one of the team leaders the younger wrestlers turn to for advice or a word or two of encouragement, Freeman said he would be more than up for the task of directing the wrestlers still wet behind the ears, even if he isn't selected as a team captain.

"I like it being looked up to," he said. "If they (the younger wrestlers) have any questions, I'll help them out. It doesn't bother me, captain or not."

Freeman has a goal of winning the New England Championship Meet by his senior year. He finished second in the All-State Meet in the winter, but didn't place in the New Englands.

Odds are good Freeman will reach that goal.



Cohasset's Joe Andrade is a picture of concentration as he steps into a pitch during a recent Hingham American Legion game. Andrade then comes around to core on a base hit. The second baseman was the squad's second leading hitter with a .340 average. Hingham finished 9-9, not enough to qualify them for post-season play. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Hot weather results in hot local fishing

By Mark Trask
Special to the Mariner

"We're just south of the 21 (buoy) and there's a big school of bluefish working up here."

"They're boiling all over by the Grampus can."

"The boys are about pooped out. They're just about jumping in the boat. I've never seen nothing like it!" (VHF radio traffic.)

From the Brewsters to Gurnet, from Neponset, Weir and North Rivers to Stellwagen, the reports are excellent. Striper fishing continues at levels unparalleled in recent years. Bluefish schools are poised just off the coast, ready to chase, trap and feed on trapped baitfish. Large sand sharks are surprising some anglers. Pollock schools come and go, providing liveline bait for stripers. Pogies schools are starting to thicken up, concentrated by marauding blues.

To the south, Jeff Adams worked the Browns Bank along the channel to Plymouth Harbor. Swirling fish regularly interrupted the oily flat surface of the heat flattened sea. Using live eels, Jeff cast and drifted baits over the bank, frequently catching stripers in the 30- to 34-inch range.

By the end of the day, two fish were on the scale for the Bigfish Tournament; a bluefish weighing in at nine pounds, six ounces, and a fat striper tallying 24 pounds, 14 ounces.

Eric Sherwin mixed work and play this week at Scituate's First Cliff. Knowing that he was to be painting a house right on the water, he came prepared not only with brush and scraper but his surf rod and bait also. Early in the day he heaved a mackerel chunk into the boulders offshore. Several hours later the telltale whine of the Penn drag punctuated the hot humid air. The smiling painter left the shop scale; the tale of the tape, 43 inches, 24 pounds!

Bob Dauphinee and Glenn Davidson chose the North River as a likely fishing destination and they weren't disappointed in the least. After several hours of chunking pogies more than 50 stripers were taken and released. The largest scaled at 18 pounds, 39 inches. Jack Nameika took the cue and visited Damon's Point at 3 a.m. A 24-pound, 8-ounce, 42-inch linesider gobbled his pogie, thank you!

Bill Jackson has been venturing from his waterfront porch and taking to the ocean to beat the stifling humidity and catch a few stripers. Bill weaves his skiff, the Mug Wump, among the ledges from Egypt to Black Rock in Cohasset, trolling his trademark ruby red surge tube lure dressed with a whole seaworm.

Stripers have been taking the bait regularly but as it began to get real hot the action slowed. Bill was stymied one trip but encouraged by the sight of a good-sized school of bass lazily swimming over a ledge not far under the water. "There were fish 24 inches, 36 inches and a few better than four feet!" Bill connected with a 24-pound, 43-incher the next day.

CASTING ABOUT: Bobby and Brian Healy lost a big one near Hogshead but didn't lose the youngster Bobby plucked from the water. Apparently the youngster fell out of a runaway inflatable at Bassings.

Mike and Sean Cunning decided to learn about stripers the Cousteau way. Snorkling at Cunningham has given them new insights on striper behavior. Aaron Hassan regularly dives at Little Harbor and reports seeing 10 to 12 "monster" stripers working their way upstream recently. Bobby Fisk was pleading with me the other morning. "What do I gotta do, Mark?" The stripers were all in along the Glades at 4:30 a.m. and they wouldn't take the plug. They even batted it out of the water with their tails, according to Fisk. Switch to bait, Bob, I told him. I was afraid you'd say that, was Fisk's reply. Fisk is a true blue plugger.

Other action areas include the Weir River side of World's End, the Black Rock bar, the outside of Brush Island, Lighthouse jetty, Gunrock jetty, South River mouth and Duxbury Beach front south of High Pines.

Let's go fishing!

(For information, call Mark Trask at Trask Tackle, 767 Country Way, North Scituate, 545-4228.)

Land Sharks split two games

The Cohasset Land Sharks lost their first game of the season this week but picked up another win as well.

Errors plagued the Sharks against Canton through the first five innings as they dug themselves an 8-3 hole. Not to be denied however, the Sharks manufactured two runs in the sixth on a couple of walks and stolen bases to make the score 8-5. The Sharks cleaned up their act defensively as Brendan Kinchla closed the door on Canton batters with his nasty breaking ball.

In the Sharks' half of the seventh inning Chris Rolandelli singled, Peter Fahey was hit by a pitch, and Andy Church singled to drive them both home to cut the deficit to just one run. Nick "the Magwy" Welz reached base on a third strike wild pitch, then stole second to set the stage. One out, down one run with runners on second and third, David Leahy grounded to the pitcher and Church streaked for home and plastered the Canton catcher who held onto the ball for the out. Thinking that the ball was knocked free and kicked to the backstop, the Magwy headed for home but was caught in a rundown for the third out and an 8-7 loss.

Scituate entered the tank the following night and the real Sharks re-surfaced for an 18-6 rout. The Magwy pitched extremely well and the whole team was hitting the ball. Rolandelli had three hits (a triple and two singles), Church had two singles and scored three runs, Kinchla had two hits, and Joey Andrade reached base in each of his five at bats in a fantastic team victory over a very talented Scituate squad whose record was 17-3 entering the ballgame.

July 24-25, the Land Sharks will be representing District 8 as division champs in the Big League Eastern Massachusetts Tournament in Danvers. The tournament is a double-elimination format. The winner will compete in Delaware at the Nationals.

Playing Little League is part of most people's lives.

And if the coaches and league directors know what they are doing, it can be enjoyable for all the players.

However, whenever parents and coaches become too Gung Ho, it can ruin what should be a wonderful experience.

This is what appears to be happening in Hingham.

The Mariner has received several letters from angry parents about how the Little League all-star teams are selected in the town.

Without getting into too much detail, some letters say the all-star teams are chosen by age or favoritism and not by ability.

However, other letters say the parents are only offering sour grapes because their child was not selected to the team.

Choosing all-star teams or a traveling team is always tough because very young and fragile children are going to be hurt along the way. There is no way around it when you have to tell a player he or she did not make a team.

However, sports are about letting people play to determine who is the best.

Age, size, race and politics should not matter.

Whoever is the best deserves to win and deserves to be on the team.

That is called the merit system and that's what the selection process for Little League all-star teams should be.

Children have their whole lives to learn about those other things like politics and favoritism.

Hopefully, cooler heads will prevail in Hingham and some sort of policy can be issued about all-star selections.

One coach wrote recently that it is "our philosophy, however, that since it is the 12-year-olds last chance to participate that they should be given priority." He went on to tell a "heartwarming story" of a player he once coached who still remembers his all-star thrill several years later.

Our "philosophy" is that an all-star team is an all-star team. Period. Sure, if the statistics of the two players are comparable a coach should opt for the older player. But there have been cases, not necessarily in Hingham, where the player with, far and away the best statistics, has been left off the team completely. And four teammates were picked in front of him.

And what about a possible injury. Whose to say a deserving 11 year old isn't going to become injured. Young players do not only play baseball, but they are also involved in soccer, basketball, t[illegible], you name it. An injury could keep a 12 year old from competing all season without an all-star selection to his credit. We've seen it happen when we played Little League ball — among other things.

Coaches, too, have their second thoughts and they face a team that picks the best players in the league, not necessarily the good ones who have paid their dues over the years. Longevity doesn't win titles, talent does.

This problem should be nipped in the bud before it blossoms into a full-scale mess.

Let the children play ball and have

Taylor fans 13 to win

It is said that necessity is the mother of invention. When the sponges were used up, catcher Ben Smoot resorted to Dr. Scholl's molefoam to deal with the impact of Greg Taylor's overwhelming fastball.

Taylor struck out 13 Braintree American batters while allowing just one hit. He also walloped two home runs to lead Cohasset to a 10-0 victory over a much heralded and previously unbeaten Braintree American team. Pre-game prognosticators have given Braintree American the edge because of its home field advantage. Cohasset supporters eliminated any such advantage when they turned out in large numbers to support the team. The 8 p.m. start time permitted other Cohasset teams, playing earlier games, to come to the field. Coach Bill Baird's 12-year-old team was there to root on their classmates and friends and there was Jay Caron's 10-year-old team watching the two Gregs, Taylor and Bilton, hit back-to-back home runs, while they dreamed of their own home runs to come.

Cohasset pounded out 10 hits, ran the bases aggressively and played error-free baseball, while continuing to stun tournament participants with tremendous displays of team power and speed.

Cohasset has averaged more than nine runs a game while giving up zero runs, and yielding only two hits in total.

By the time this article is printed, Cohasset will have played Rockland in another battle of unbeaten teams. A report on that game next week.

Baseball camp starts this week

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters age five through 18 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide a baseball camp, which will be held this at Miliken Field.

Two camp programs are available to youngsters as follows: full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; camp for age seven and over and a half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.; camp is available for five and six year olds.

The week-long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, July 2.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has provided baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for three years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for Baseball Camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall, daily, Monday through Saturday.

Edward Taylor golf tournament, August 16

Hingham Youth Hockey Association holds its annual fund-raiser, the Edward G. Taylor Memorial Golf Tournament, August 16, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Cost for golf cart, greens fees and dinner is $85 per person; dinner only is $25. Tee-off time with a shot-gun start is 12:30 p.m. It's a best-ball tourney.

"We're hoping for a sell-out," says HYH president Charlie Hayes. Hayes said the event is the organization's way of honoring Mr. Taylor and his contribution to youth hockey on the South Shore.

Taylor, who served as president of the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham for 16 years, passed away in 1991.

"Our program is larger than ever before and that has a lot to do with the contribution to youth hockey that Mr. Taylor made," Hayes said. "We have 250 kids in our program from Mites to Bantams."

Individual and businesses can sponsor tees and greens. South Shore Imports has offered a car to be awarded for a hole-in-one. A set of new clubs and a trip to an exotic location are other prizes, Hayes said.

For information, please call Hayes after 7 p.m., 749-8092.

Healthcare Question #96

Do I need to see a doctor about my stomachache?

24 hours a day, 365 days a year, the registered nurses at ASK-A-NURSE® are on call to answer all sorts of healthcare questions. They can assess symptoms, help you decide what to do about them and even recommend appropriate doctors.

So next time you're wondering what to do, call ASK-A-NURSE.
It doesn't hurt to ask.

Rock concert coming

The Hingham Community Center will sponsor a live concert at the center, 70 South Street, Hingham, tomorrow, Friday, July 23.

"Fun in the Kitchen" will be the featured band. "Fun in the Kitchen" played at the Cohasset High School benefit Rock and Row concert and on the Cohasset Common during the recent South Shore Art Festival. Special guest band "Plaid on Plaid" is also appearing. Doors open at 7 p.m. Admission is $3 payable at the door. The concert will be over at 10 p.m. Call 749-9786 for more information.

Danish carillonneur performs

Peter Langberg, City Carillonneur of Løgumkloster, Denmark, will give the fifth concert in the series of summer carillon recitals on the 57-bell carillon of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset Sunday, July 25, at 6 p.m.

He will perform original carillon works by Andreas Schmid, Roy Hamlin Johnson, and Matthias Van den Gheyn; transcriptions from the music of Chopin, Handel, Mozart, and Scriabin; and arrangements of North American folk songs. His program will also include a group called "American Music from Three Centuries", which will include selections by Scott Joplin and Leroy Anderson. Mr. Langberg is the founder and director of the School for Church Music in Løgumkloster, and a concert organist. This is his tenth concert tour of North America since 1973.

Printed programs will be provided on Cohasset Common and in the courtyard behind St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue. The event will take place rain or shine (if raining, listen from parked cars), and the public is invited to bring picnic suppers, blankets, and lawn chairs. Following the recital a brief tower tour is available to those interested in viewing the carillon keyboard. For further information, please phone the church at 383-1083, or the Cohasset Carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at 508-475-2599.

Historical walking tours

The Cohasset Historical Society will present two summer season walking tours of Cohasset's historic areas and sites. The first, scheduled for Sunday afternoon, August 8, will be a walk relating to the town's long and unique maritime history. Meeting at 2:30 p.m. at the Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset center, the tour will traverse Elm Street, once known as Ship Cove Lane, to Cohasset Harbor.

At the harbor, itself once a center of a thriving fishing and shipbuilding industry, the tour will follow the "Captain's Walk" along the historic south edge of the harbor, past the stone wharves once a center of activity for the town's mackerel fleets, to Government Island, where the second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was first assembled before being transported, block by block, to the offshore ledge for final assembly.

Society Curator David Wadsworth will guide the tour and will point out specific sites relating to the seafaring history of Cohasset. The history of the ill-fated first and the successful second Minot's Ledge Lighthouses will be noted, as well as the stonecutting activities that took place on Government Island during the 1850's. Along the course of the walk, features of the Cohasset Historical Commission's Captain's Walk will be emphasized.

The second of the Society's two summer walking tours will be presented Sunday, Sept. 19, and will feature a tour of historic Cohasset Common and the center village. The tour will meet at 2:30 p.m. at Meetinghouse Pond on the Common. Cohasset Common, often described as one of the best New England Town Commons, is an original part of the town's undivided common land dating from earliest Colonial time. Some of the towns finest early homes, the oldest dating from 1713, and most historic public buildings, including the 1747 Meetinghouse, can be found around its perimeter, and diverse architectural styles are visible and demonstrate the evolving architectural eras of early New England.

Cohasset's center village shows 18th and 19th century houses converted into shops and stores, the oldest of which, a Colonial inn, dates from 1704.

There is no charge for the two walking tours, and donations would be accepted. The Society's telephone number is 383-6930.

Hundreds pay tribute to local theater giant

Actors from the Boston Children's Theater performed "Hansel and Gretel," in a memorial tribute to Jeanne Armin of Cohasset, a leader of South Shore group theater. Children performed on Cohasset Common after the memorial service. (Alan Chapman staff photo)

"Our voices may speak with grief today, but behind that grief there is the sound of love," noted Edward T. Atkinson, minister of the First Parish of Cohasset. He addressed nearly 200 friends and family of Jeanne Nelson Armin last week at a memorial service held on the Cohasset Common in her honor.

Mrs. Armin was an actress and director of many South Shore area community theater groups. Her loving impact is still felt in the theater arts community She passed away Dec. 16, 1992 after a long illness.

> Jeanne probably would have said something to the effect of 'Cut the B.S., I wasn't that good," laughed Donald Armin, husband of the late Jeanne Armin.

In a fitting tribute to her dedication to the local arts as well as the Boston Children's Theatre, children from that theater performed excerpts from two of the first plays that Jeanne directed for the Boston theatre group, "Pinnochio" and "Hansel and Gretel" after the memorial service.

"It all went so very well" said Donald Armin, her husband of 29 years in an interview after the celebration. "This is something that Jeanne would have really loved to have seen."

The unique idea to help celebrate Jeanne's life with the help of the young actors was an idea of family friend Pat Gleason of the Children's Theatre, said Armin, who thought that it was a perfect way to celebrate his wife's accomplishments in the theatre.

"The idea really just came from out of the blue" remembered Armin. "We were sitting around the trying to figure a way to emphasize all of the wonderful contributions that she had made in her life."

Armin was involved with the theatre for nearly 45 years working all around the Northeast region as a stage manager, set designer as well as an actress on

Water ban lifted, odd-even watering system installed

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

The outside watering ban that the Massachusetts-American Water Company initiated last week to its customers in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull ended.

The ban was instituted July 19 after nearly 100 customers in Hingham and Hull, along with several dozen customers in North Cohasset, turned on water faucets the day before that yielded nothing.

Massachusetts-American Water Company operations manager Eileen Comain said the ban was necessary to replenish the empty water storage tanks which service those customers.

The majority of Cohasset residents receive their water from the Cohasset Water Department. John C. Pereira, lab director for the department, said the 7,100 residents serviced by the town's water department have experienced no shortages.

"We are currently not experiencing any adverse conditions with regard to the drought," Pereira said. "We don't foresee a problem for the entire summer."

However, residents who receive their water from the Massachusetts-American Water Company are being asked to adapt to an every-other day outside water use system.

Most Cohasset residents supplied by Massachusetts-American reside on Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue and part of Hull Street.

A press release distributed by the water company explains the every-other day outside watering system.

"Consumers are now permitted to use water outside on an odd-even system. Properties on the even numbered side of a street are permitted to use water outside on even numbered days; properties on the odd numbered side of a street are permitted to use water on odd numbered days," the press release states.

Comain said the odd-even system attempts to address

Buttonwood Books expands to Hingham

In an era when most businesses are downsizing, or closing altogether, Buttonwood Books & Toys of Cohasset is expanding.

The latest expansion of the store, located in Cushing Plaza on Route 3A, is into adjoining Hingham.

Owners Betsey Detwiler and her daughter-in-law Katherine Detwiler plan to open a children's book and toy store in Hingham.

"Kathy and I are very excited," Detwiler said. "We have a lot of Hingham customers who are excited, too."

The pair will open in the former Hingham Water Company building on South Street. Betsey Detwiler said she and her husband Robert, with their son Andrew and daughter-in-law Katherine will purchase the two-story building.

Detwiler said her son Jonathan, who owns Buttonwood Renovations, will reconstruct the available space to fit the needs of the children's store.

"We are very nepotistic," Detwiler laughed.

With no retail experience, the Detwilers opened Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset in 1989. The store's success forced an expansion in 1991.

"Initially we had 2,800 feet," Detwiler said. "We expanded into the store next door and were up to 4,000 feet."

Detwiler said the Hingham store, tentatively called Buttonwood for Kids, will cater exclusively to school-aged children, unlike the Cohasset store,which carries books for all ages, toys and stationary.

"We will have children's books and toys and will expand into computers," Detwiler said.

American Dream comes true for new business owner

By David Wolcott
Mariner staff

After two years of negotiations, local resident Bill Cavanaro has purchased his own "American Dream" in the newly opened Cohasset Collision Center on the Scituate- Cohasset town line.

"I took the business over from Spensley Chevrolet July 1 after two years of off-and-on negotiations" said the happy new owner. "They were looking to downsize their retail business and it seemed to be the right time for me to own my own personal little piece of the American Dream."

Handicapped parking

The Board of Library Trustees are recommending to selectmen that a reserved handicapped parking space be designated on South Main Street next to the driveway exit.

After reading the Americans with Disabilities Act Access Guidelines, the board believes the town is required to reserve a space even though there are only seven off-street parking spaces.

Trustees believe an on-street reserved space will create reasonable access to ramps on the north side of the driveway to the front door and on the south side of the driveway to the lower level.

The space would give immediate access to the sidewalk or the driveway, accessing both ramps.

The board recommends the space be large enough for a van and the space should be painted appropriately to discourage illegal parking. "Driveway" would be painted in front of the ramp to prevent parking.

Firemen's Muster schedule

Glen Pratt, president of The Community Center of Cohasset, has notified the selectmen's office about the upcoming schedule of The Firemen's Muster, Aug. 14. The lineup includes a pancake breakfast on the Common, 8 to 10 a.m; a parade from the Common to Milliken Field, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. and the muster competition from noon to 5 p.m.

The muster's food vendor is Second Congregation Church. A dunk dank, operated by the Fire Dept, is also planned.

Government Island update

The state Historical Commission has notified selectmen that the Government Island Historic District will be considered for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

This register is the federal government's official list of historic properties worthy of preservation.

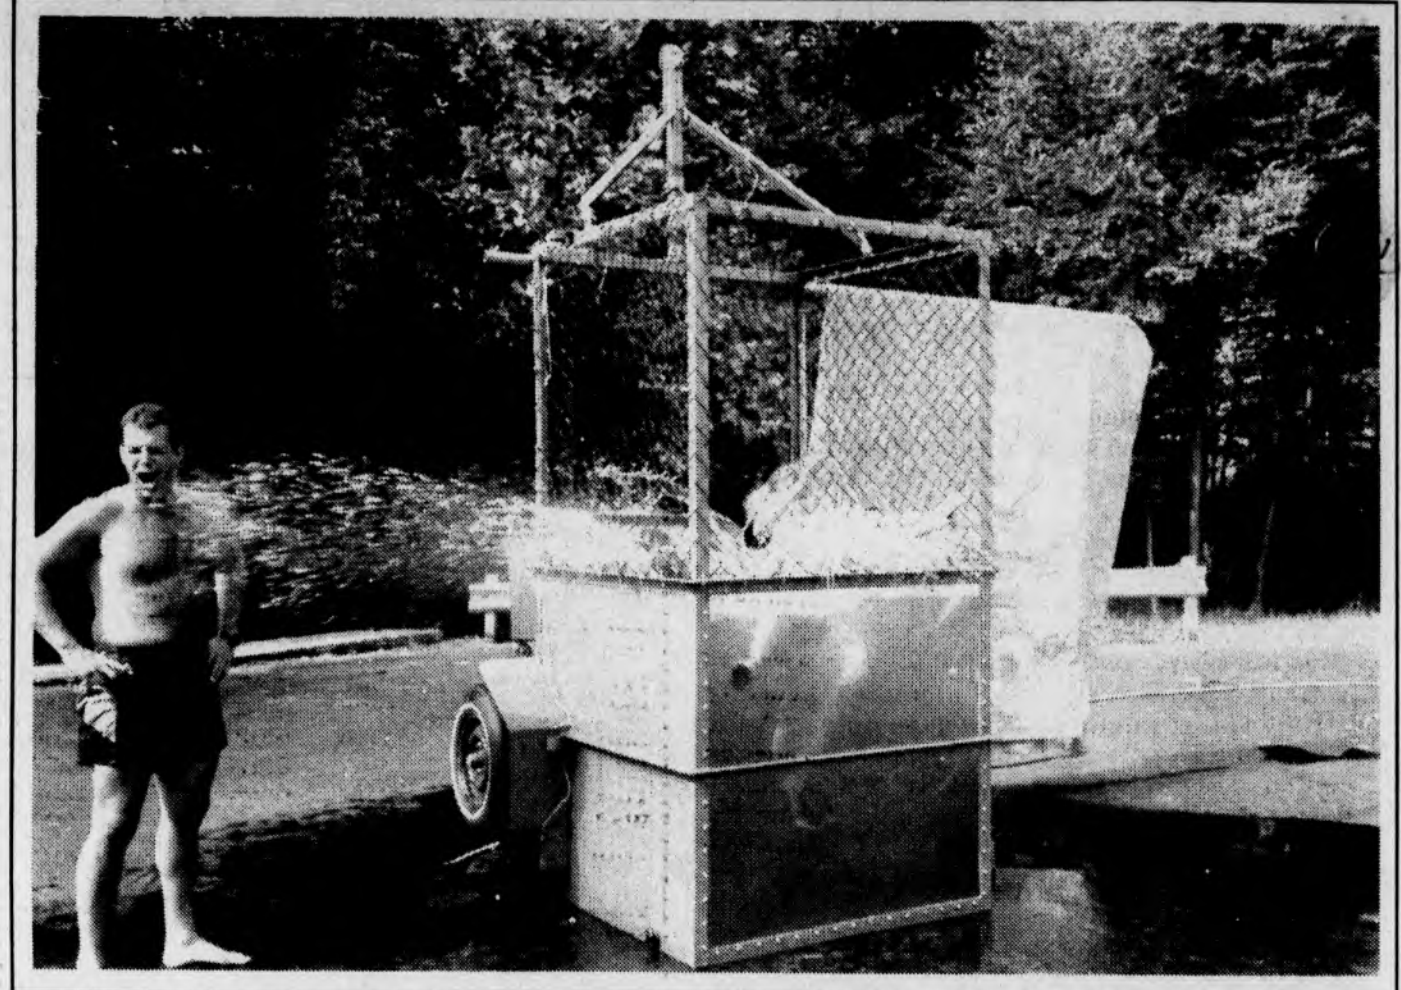
Listing of the district would recognize the community's historic importance and assure protective review of federal projects that might adversely impact the character of the district.

If the district is listed in the historic register, federal investment tax credits may apply.

If a property is listed in the register, the owner may do anything with the property unless state or federal money, permits or licensing is used or unless some other regional and or local ordinance is in effect.

The nomination will be heard publicly Sept. 8 at the White Church Community Center in Deerfield at 1 p.m.

A copy of the Government Island application is available for review at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.



Tim Connerty feels the splash of the Jimmy Fund dunking booth set up at Verc Mobil on Rte. 3A Saturday. Organized by Jackie Tanguay, manager of Verc Mobil, and assisted by Heidi McGlone, Shandell Jones (dressed as a clown) and Connerty, the drive raised $85 for the Jimmy Fund. Food was sold from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and children were able to use the Moonwalk-Starwalk equipment. The dunking tank also was popular.

'Burn the mortgage'

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, has launched a fundraising campaign to help pay off its mortgage. The non-profit art and educational organization, serving all of the South Shore, hopes to raise $10,000 by Aug. 30 to meet the balance of a $25,000 challenge grant.

The grant, and matching donations, will reduce the mortgage balance to less than $35,000 from an original balance of $330,000. Art Center members and friends will be asked to strike a match in a "Burn the Mortgage" mailing to be sent this week.

The Art Center was founded in 1954 by a group of artists and members of the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

To receive information on becoming a member or contributing to the campaign, please call 383-9548.

More recycling needed

In a report to the Board of Health, Recycling Committee chairman Arthur Lehr said that it has been found that residents in some cases are still mixing in recyclable material with regular trash at the transfer station.

"We have found such things as glass, grass clippings as well as plastic within the trailer," Lehr said. "This is something that the attendants are going to have to pay attention to in order to see what is going into the trailers."

He also reported to the board that his committee discussed the hanging of new signs on the recycling trailers because some signs were destroyed and nearly unreadable and that others were hand-painted.

Engineers at work

Cohasset selectmen have requested the services of the Norfolk County Engineering Department.

The Norfolk County Commission, comprised of Chairman William P. O'Donnell (Norwood), Bruce D. Olsen (Stoughton) and John M. Gillis (Quincy), voted to authorize the Engineering Dept. to establish grades on a portion of Sohier Street in preparation of paving.

Work should commence in the next few weeks. Inconvenience to the motoring public will be kept to a minimum.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

CONDO BOUNDS OF OWNERSHIP

QUESTION: Just what is a condominium and what would be my bounds of ownership in relation to the other inhabitants if I purchase one?

ANSWER: Condominiums is a latin word meaning, "own together" and is a form of ownership. It is much the same as owning your own home except the structure in which your unit is located, the hallways, facilities and the grounds are owned in common. In short, you won the interior space within the walls of your unit.

Everything else is owned in common with the others and the expense of maintaining the "common elements" is shared by all.

occasion before settling in on her home turf of Massachusetts and serving for 20 years on the board of the Boston Children's Theatre. She also was one of the first stage directors for the group when the stagemobile began operation in 1955.

She also donated a large amount of her free time to other art endeavors around the South Shore region during her later years.

"Having the Children's Theatre stagemobile here was kind of touching tribute to Jeanne" said Armin. "All of the children involved gave up an afternoon where they could have done other things to help pay tribute to my wife. It was a beautiful offering" .

Friends and family packed the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common on a postcard-perfect Sunday afternoon to not just say goodbye to their friend Jeanne Armin, but also to pay tribute to the life she had lived.

Rev. Atkinson went on to tell the assembled group within the nearly 250 year old Meeting House that, " There is a sadness to this farewell, as one might protest that her death came early. There was still life to be lived, places to see, stories to be told, experiences to be shared.

"All who embrace life must also be willing to accept that it must end" Atkinson continued. "Jeanne is safe now, safe at rest with our God."

Also speaking about their memories of Jeanne at the ceremony was Jack Mendelssohn, a former minister of the Arlington Street Church of Boston, which is where Don and Jeanne first met and were eventually married.

"I remember so vividly in my mind the vision of Jeanne and Don the way they looked on their wedding day almost 30 years ago", he said, " and in that way Jeanne will always have a kind of immortality with me.

"She is unseen here today, but her presence in definitely felt."

He continued that, "Today I have one piece of advise for Donald Armin: look back and savor your time with Jeanne, and let those times be the wings of hope and aspiration that you use to move on to the future."

Also speaking about Jeanne at the memorial service was her niece, Perl Chickering, who characterized Jeanne as an "honest and loving person."

She told the audience that "my most fond memories of Jeanne are of just being with her in a playful and simple way. She had the ability to see the gold within people, and would make that person show it.

"She really did live her life, and she let the people around her see her as she actually was. She gave from her heart, and knew when it was time to let go and move onto the next adventure."

Looking back upon the whole day, Donald Armin said that there was not a doubt that this was something that Jeanne would have loved to be a part of, although he added that she probably would have been a little embarrassed by all of the attention.

"The only thing that she might have commented on was all the adulation that she received during the ceremony. Jeanne probably would have said something to the effect of 'Cut the B.S., I wasn't that good," laughed Armin.

"I would always try to tell her how talented she was, but she would always say that she still had a long ways to go. She was always striving for something more and to try and better something that she had already done."

Donations for scholarships for children interested in the theatre have been started to honor the memory of Jeanne Nelson Armin are being accepted by the Boston Children's Theatre, 93 Mass Ave. Boston, MA 02115, as well as at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

American Dream comes true . . .

Cars and car repair has always been a hobby-lifestyle for Cavanaro, 36, who said that he has been underneath cars "since the tender age of eight."

Cavanaro, along with his wife and their two young children, have lived in Cohasset for the past four years. Cavanaro, before purchasing the business, worked for Spensley Chevrolet in town since 1985.

"I started in the car repair business right after I graduated from Weymouth High in 1975, and it's just grown from there" said Cavanaro.

One of the places that he stopped along his way to the Cohasset Collision Center, where he employs eight people, was with the MAACO car repair organization. At the Somerville facility , Cavanaro managed the center and set company records that still stand today for the most vehicles painted by a franchised store.

After joining the Spensley family in 1985, Bill found around early 1991 that the organization was being hit by tougher economic times and was looking to downsize its' operation. He saw this as the chance to finally be able to own his own business.

"It was always a dream of mine to be able to do it, and I feel fortunate that I was able to reach my goal of owning my own business", he said happily.

"I coming into this with the attitude that I am here for the long haul, and that my fortune is not going to be made overnight. I think that attitude will help me succeed in this business."

He continued that "On our street sign it says 'A Total Commitment To Excellence', and that is the basis on which I operate this company.

"This type of automotive business has not always had the best reputation with the public and that is one thing that I am working to try and change."

Cavanaro said that he is trying to bring his part of the automotive business into the 1990's in trying to give his customers an honest price for their needs.

"The backyard image of the auto repair shop with the German Shepherd sitting in the corner of the office and all the help being covered in motor oil from head to toe is something that we are trying to avoid at all costs," emphasized Cavanaro.

"The public only wants one thing when they deal with this type of business; they want a quality job done of course, but I think that they also really want to be taken care of.

"Customers need to be recognized as the thing that keeps any business going, and they deserve to have a quality job done at a quality price, which is the foundation on which I run this business."

Business has been very brisk so far for the new organization, with Cavanaro saying that the residents of Cohasset, as well as the businesses of the town, have accepted the Cohasset Collision Center with open arms.

"Fortunately, through my work with Spensley Chevrolet I got to know a good number of people with the town, and I feel that I have been accepted as a part of the community", he said.

Outside of the business, Bill's interests mostly lie in spending time with his young family, as well as enjoying one of Cohasset's main attractions; the ocean.

"I spend alot of time scuba diving near the Lighthouse", said Cavanaro, "and I also am involved with a rowing team within the town, but most of my free time is spent being with my wife and kids, which I enjoy doing very much."

Looking at the difference in owning a business and being an employee, Bill said that he worries about cash flow a little more than he used to, but that nothing else really has changed from his prior position.

"There is not a big difference from the way that things were being run before I took over as owner", said Cavanaro, "with the exception that you get a little more nervous when the bills start to form a pile on the desk.

"It's a nice feeling to be able to control your own destiny at least in a small way, but it is a little more of a rollercoaster ride at time" he continued. "You can be up one day when all the bills are paid and you can see a profit but all that can be changed by the next days mail."

Water ban lifted, odd-even watering system installed

the most common cause of storage tank depletion: simultaneous use.

"It helps spread demand," she explained. "People get home from work around 4:30, start cooking dinner using water and turn on the lawn sprinklers. So if we can get only half to turn the sprinklers on on the same [illegible] theoretically that evens out demand."

Comain said the lack of water customers experienced two weeks ago resulted from enormous simultaneous use of the system.

Water company manager Eugene Babin said the same type of simultaneous drain on the system occured during the last game in the 1986 World Series.

"Everyone got up at the end and must have flushed," he said.

Comain said Hingham currently does not suffer from a lack of water supply.

"Ground water levels now are normal, however if we continue onwards into the summer without rain, groundwater levels will continue to decline," she said.

Rainfall this summer, on average, is one-third lower than last summer, Comain said.

At Massachusetts-American Water Company offices in Hingham, which is an official rainfall measurement site for the Department of Environmental Management, 3.55 inches of rain fell between May 1 and July 26. During May, June and July last year, 10.23 inches of rain fell in the area.

Comain said in an effort to encourage water conservation during times of high usage, Massachusetts-American Water encourages a more efficient lawn sprinkling system.

"Lawns generally require only an inch of water per week," Comain said. "It is best to water lawns once or twice a week — not a little each day."

She explained that deep root growth is encouraged by watering lawns once or twice a week. Deep root growth, Comain said, allows grass to obtain water from the deeper soil which is less subject to dryness.

"If you water everyday, the grass will be green, but it is like it is addicted to the water" and the roots stay near the surface, she said. "So if you go away for three or four days, the grass will immediately turn brown because the roots are at the surface and that soil will be dry."

Comain added that residents should also allow their lawns to grow more between cuttings, because taller grass needs less water.

The Massachusetts-American Water Company encourages customers to pick up free booklets on water conservation at the company's 75 Terry Drive.

Name: Torin Sweeney.

Occupation: Coordinator, Cohasset Summer Recreation Program ages 8 to 12.

Best day of your life: Last February, when then-high school senior Nathan Fiore won the state wrestling championship and I was his coach.

Most embarrassing moment: Last night when I was waitering at the Cape Cod Melody Tent. I served this man and he looked really familiar, so I said, "Don't I know you?" and I meant personally know him. He said he was Pat Sullivan, the former owner of the Patriots. I was really, really embarrassed.

Goal: To see peace on earth in my lifetime.

Favorite season: Summer.

Best vacation: Spring break 1983.

Favorite holiday: New Year's Eve.

Pet Peeve: Laziness.

Favorite book: "Pet Cemetery," by Stephen King.

Favorite movie: "Biloxi Blues."

Biggest worry: That as technology advances, the human element of schools, specifically teachers, will be diminished.

Favorite place: Utopia.

Still life paintings shown

From July 29 to Sept. 8, the Artist's Son Gallery will be presenting "Private Choices: Still Life Paintings by Debra Claffey, Jan Dolan, Kevin Lawlor, Ellen Merritt, June Milliken, Dianne Panarelli Miller, Gene Paletta and Ruta Smilskalns."

This group show presents representational work by emerging and established New England artists.

In painting a still life, each of these eight artists has made the choice to work within the tradition of representational imagery and to create a unique still life setting.

Traditionally, the still life lacks any open story line, unlike the literary or historical associations made with viewing landscape, genre, portraiture or figure painting. Still life paintings are independent of all such non-visual associations. Compositional elements — form, color, light, shadow — are important.

These elements within a still life must be appreciated almost as abstractions unto themselves, not simply as a collection of fruits, flowers, glasses, pots, pieces of fabric or other privately selected objects.

An artist approaches a still life subject without preconceived ideas or notions: the sole aim is to translate the isolated objects from reality into picture. Yet it is possible to be profoundly moved by an arrangement of peonies, painterly vases or merely lemons on a tablecloth. The still life paintings presented in "Private Choices" provide this visual opportunity.

Historically, the still life appeared in the 17th century, free of ulterior motifs, where individual objects were enjoyed for pure visual enchantment. During the 18th century, the still life was less absorbed in exploring the individual objects than in creating an integrated ensemble. At the turn of the 20th Century, the still life offered an opportunity to interpret the world through its geometric qualities. Artists were free to express natural objects in shape and density.

Continuing in this tradition,"Private Choices: Still Life Paintings by Claffey, Dolan, Lawlor, Merritt, Milliken, Paletta, Panarelli Miller, and Smilkskalns" presents contemporary work that is still life painting in its best and broadest traditional sense: it is delectable food for the eye.

The opening reception for "Private Choices: Still Life Paintings by Debra Claffey, Jan Dolan, Kevin Lawlor, Ellen Merritt, June Milliken, Dianne Panarelli Miller, Gene Paletta and Ruta Smilskalns" will be held Thursday evening, July 29, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The artists will attend.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A selection of "Private Choices," "Tea Pot and Oranges," by Kevin Lawlor, painted in 1991.

Drama club plans season

Members of the C.D.C. met to discuss the 1993-1994 season at a recent board meeting held at the home of Lynn Eisenhauer.

Attending the meeting were outgoing President Gayl Varallo, Angie Walsh, Dwight Dibona, Joe Rota, Betty Grant, Mike Nakashima, Stephanie Pedago, Lisa Pratt and Deborah Carlton.

The general topic of discussion was the need to outreach to all C.D.C. members for involvement in all aspects of theater.

If there is anyone out there reading this who has the urge and motivation to direct, produce, work backstage or become involved with community theater, the group urges you to join.

Please call our membership committee: Anita Aherne 545-1549. There is more to theater than being on stage!

The next scheduled C.D.C. board meeting will be held at the home of Joe Rota, Monday, Aug. 9, at 7 p.m.

Special friend

If you haven't heard of the Puzzle Club at the library Monday and Tuesday nights, you're in for a treat. Brothers and sisters and kids of all ages are filling the children's room to solve the mystery puzzles.

Legends Under The Boards, The Stolen Jewels, and Missing Links are some of the titles.

Mrs. Murphy, the librarian at the Deer Hill School, has organized this exciting activity for the past two summers with increasing popularity.

Last summer there were about a dozen puzzle-solvers. Monday night, there were over 30 children downstairs in the library.

Mrs. Murphy organized this fun activity because her students at the Deer Hill School were anxious to continue their book discussions in the summer. She decided on the mystery puzzles as a form of discussion and a fun activity as well. Puzzle-solvers are given a mystery to read.

To solve the mystery they must complete the puzzle. Before the puzzle is completed the puzzle group must secretly write down their puzzle solution. After the puzzle is completed, group members share their secret answers. Prizes are given for all who participate.

Mrs. Murphy is a whirlwind of activity from seven to nine each Monday and Tuesday night. She oversees puzzle solutions, gives prizes, helps everybody select books from the children's room, issues new puzzles, directs volunteers, and even selects books on tape for little siblings at home. She takes great pride in the puzzle-solving activity and the enthusiasm the children share for puzzle solving, but for selecting additional reading books as well.

Mrs. Murphy epitomizes the dedicated teacher who loves children and wants them to enjoy reading no matter what their ability, a true friend of children, and a true friend of the library.

around town

❑ We are all proud of Julienne R. Guemere, daughter of Kathleen Guemere of Cohasset and Larry Guemere of Boston. Julienne, a freshman majoring in music education, has been named to the spring term dean's list at Hartwick College.

Great work, Julienne!

❑ Hats off to Clive Alastair Muir of 481 Jerusalem Road. He has been named to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute's Dean's list for the spring semester. As a senior majoring in computer science, that is quite a feat!!!

❑ News from Colby College, and its all good! Brian P. Pompeo, son of Hap and Leah, was named to the Dean's list for the spring semester. Brian is an American studies major and a full-time hockey player for Colby, isn't that newsworthy? Plus, he is well known by many Cohasset children, he is part of the recreation dept. camp.

A successful gent from our own town, isn't that nice?!!

❑ Laurie B. Bronstein, a member of the 1996 class at Colby College also makes the news for making the dean's list for the spring semester at Colby College. Laurie is the daughter of Barry and Judith Bronstein and you can bet that they are extremely proud of her. Both of you worked hard for this achievement, and we are proud of your efforts...keep it up, you'll be glad that you did.

❑ If you need a tax lawyer, call Andrea Tebbetts that is! Andrea graduated from Harvard in 1971, had her "baby" (who is at Derby as a wonderful student), then went to BC Law School, where she graduated from last May. Andrea was the one who was sworn in at Fanuell Hall recently, so if you were there you know why there was such a crowd!! Andrea has been hired by the Justice Dept, and her grandfather Walter O'Mayer and Don and Ellen Woolf (her parents) couldn't be prouder!!

❑ One more name to fame makes it in Cohasset! Stephen M. Pozatek, son of Zig and Ellie, has attained Dean's List status at Middlebury College for the Spring Semester. Everyone is proud of you Stephen. Keep up the good work!

South Shore Hospital's Cohasset Committe recently invited members of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomer's Club and other newcomers to tour South Shore Hospital in South Weymouth. Pictured here are Cohasset residents Shirley Marten, Cohasset Committee member and event organizer, Anne Sexton and Dr. Louis Herlin.

❑ Matthew Drinkwater, son of Marifrances McIntosh and Gary Drinkwater, graduated from Trinity College in Hartford recently. He received a bachelor's degree with honors in psychology. He received honors in general scholarship and earned faculty honors for the spring semester. Matthew was also elected Phi Beta Kappa; Pi Gamma Mu, a national social science honor society; and Psi Chi, a national honor society founded for the purpose of advancing the science of psychology. On Honors Day in May he was awarded the Psychology Prize for outstanding scholarship.

❑ News from the University of Vermont regarding the dean's list and four of Cohasset's own "made the grade." Edward E. Chase, School of Natural Resources; Jill Lang Hamilton, College of Arts and Sciences; Melissa Ellen McCarthy, College of Arts and Sciences; and Christine Alicia Rooney, School of Nursing.

❑ Middlebury College sends word about Nicole C. Greco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R Greco. She attained dean's list status for the spring term. Kristin Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John D Martin Jr. has been named a College Scholar, the highest recognition for academic achievement, for the spring term. Great job, ladies.

❑ A warm welcome to Brian Emmett Bolze, the son of Alicia and Stephen Bolz, and grandson of Doris and Bob Ready and Marlene and Ray Bolze. Brian was born July 8 and weighed in at 7 lbs. 12 ozs. We'll bet that his big brother Michael will help Mom take great care of him.

❑ Everyone knows John Small and his love for trucks. Recently he went to the Pennsylvania four-wheel truck show, the four-wheel drive Jamboree Summer Nationals. There were 2,000 trucks and he won first truck! John never expected that, considering all of the trucks which were entered. He received a nice plaque, which brings him up to at least 80 trophies!! Congratulations John.

❑ Martha and Paul Flanagan are having a busy summer, and loving every minute of it! That's due to Casey Brent Flanagan, born June 26 and weighing in at 7 lbs. 10 ozs. Congrats to you all!

For Both of You...

If you are caring for a loved one at home, you know that the constant attention is difficult for both of you. The concept of respite care for a week's vacation or a brief time off is not an abandonment of your commitment. Rather, occasional respite care allows you to refresh yourself and gives your loved one continuing care and exposure to many different activities. At Elihu White, our intimate Terrace Wing offers the ultimate in accommodations–well appointed private rooms, excellent dining, and a professional staff that is highly qualified and extremely attentive. Call John Harvey, Director of Admissions and let him explain the various options available in temporary respite care at Elihu White, one of the South Shore's premier healthcare centers.

Katharine Lee Bates

July 22, 1993, marked the 100th anniversary of Katharine Lee Bates' writing of "America, the Beautiful," a song often suggested as a new national anthem.

Although she never lived on the South Shore, her roots here are deep, as the earliest Bateses settled in Hingham in the mid-1600s and later made their living in Scituate and elsewhere.

She was born in Falmouth and lived most of her life in Wellesley Hills. After graduating from Wellesley College in 1880, she taught English literature at Wellesley and subsequently became a professor and teaching Latin, algebra and English.

In her poem she celebrated the rich heritage of America and he people after she traveled to Pike's Peak in Colorado.

Recently, U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Cohasset, offered a joint resolution in Congress, authorizing President Clinton to proclaim 1993 as "America-the-Beautiful Year."

"The need is already present . . . to rededicate the nation's energies to those qualities and ideals expressed and celebrated in the hymn and to reassert the responsibilities of free people to the proper stewardship of their land and to the nurturing of the lives of their fellow Americans," Studds proclaimed.

From July 22 to Aug. 12, her birth date 133 years ago, Falmouth is staging a unique festival to commemorate her unique contributions to American life. Herewith is her poem:

America, the Beautiful

O beautiful for spacious skies,
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
Above the fruited plain.
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown they good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

O beautiful for pilgrim feet,
Whose stern impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat
Across the wilderness.
America! America!
God mend thine ev'ry flaw,
confirm thy soul in self-control,
Thy liberty in law!

O beautiful for heroes proved in liberating strife,
Who more than self their country loved,
And mercy more than life.
America! America!
May God thy gold refine
Till all success be nobleness
And ev'ry gain divine!

O beautiful for patriot dream
That sees beyond the years
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears.
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown they good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

New teen center being considered

letters

(The following letter was sent to selectmen)

Dear Selectmen:

Our corporation was formed to operate and fund a teen center for this community. Originally, we were the organizers of what was known as the "Teen Depot."

Due to a series of events, the "Teen Depot" has been closed since last December, while we redefined the concept and looked for operational alternatives.

Our search for alternate space for the teen center has led us to the "Independence Building."

This building represents a good alternative to the space previously given to us by the community center. While it is smaller than the original area, it has other advantages, such as dedicated use.

Both the CYR directors and members of the teen board have looked at the building and we are interested in discussing an arrangement for its use as a teen center with you.

We recognize that a lawsuit is currently in the courts over the use of the building and that certain improvements, such as heat, would have to be made.

There may be other issues that you feel are equally important.

At this point, we are interested in meeting with you only to discuss the idea, learn of your concerns, and determine if the plan is workable.

We would appreciate being included on your Aug. 2 agenda in order to begin that process. Please let me know if that would be possible.

Keith F. Knowles, President

Friends rally around Marshfield family in need

By Mia Snow
Mariner correspondent

The courageous Sequeira family is facing the future together, with help from their many friends and neighbors. The family includes: (l to r) Virginia, holding 16-month-old Alexander, Ashley,3, Randy, and Heather, 9.

When Randy Sequeira came home from work every night, he would joyfully scoop up his one-year-old son, Alexander, carry him upstairs, stand him on the bed, and while Randy changed clothes they would "discuss" their day.

But two months ago, during this nightly routine, Alexander was suddenly hunched over on the bed and began shaking violently; his legs collapsed under him and he was not able to get himself up. This happened on a Friday night and over the weekend Alexander experienced a few more spasm-like episodes, prompting his pediatrician to admit him to the New England Medical Center.

Five days of probing and testing with MR19, EMGs, X-rays and a muscle biopsy concluded that Alexander had a form of spinal muscular atrophy, a progressive disease of the neuromuscular system.

The disease, Randy said, affects the central nervous system by inhibiting the ability of nerves from the brain and spine to transmit the correct message to the peripheral nerves, which make muscles function.

"In other words, it means that the muscles waste away and no longer work the way they should," explained Randy. Both he and his wife, Virginia, are carriers of the gene that causes the disease, although neither of them were aware of it and there was no family history.

In Alexander's case, which has been diagnosed as Type II spinal muscular atrophy, his leg muscles are no longer able to support his body. Although he looks like a healthy, typical toddler at 16 months — and is already speaking in short sentences, his father proudly reports — he can now only move his feet, not his legs, and he can't sit up without support.

"When he was seven or eight months old he would fly around the house in his walker, chasing his sisters," said Randy, adding that Alexander was crawling by the age of six months. Just before his first birthday he had a hernia operation, and after that they noticed he seemed to have slowed down and wasn't moving as much.

Virginia said that now her son crawls by dragging his legs behind himself. "But he's not at all a lazy baby and he has a happy disposition," she said. He Just gets frustrated and tires easily."

The Sequeiras grew up in Marshfield and Virginia is the daughter of the late William H. Keyes, who was a member of the Marshfield Police Department for 29 years. They now live in Plymouth, and in addition to Alexander they have two daughters, Heather, 9, and Ashley, 3.

Recently, Ashley has also been showing some symptoms of spinal muscular atrophy. Her father said she is limping, cannot climb stairs, and falls frequently, and next week she will endure the same battery of tests as Alexander in order to determine if she also has the disease.

It seems a tremendous burden for such a young couple, but the Sequeiras do not have to face this struggle alone. Overwhelming support from a large family, friends and co-workers is helping the Sequeiras to cope with the present and to face the future one day at a time. Recognizing the strength in numbers, Judith Harris of Duxbury — a former employer of Randy's and friend of the family — mobilized this group to help the Sequeiras with more than just emotional support.

"Randy is a very special person," said Harris. "He is extremely giving and whenever anyone needs something he's there for the — he's the problem solver. He's not had a lot of advantages in his life, but he's very smart and he makes the most of everything he has."

The first organizational meeting of the "Friends of Randy and Virginia Sequeira" took place recently at Harris' home. Their goal is to raise $25,000 to help offset medical expenses for Alexander as they arise. Although the Sequeiras have adequate health insurance at the moment, additional expenses, like electric wheelchairs, braces and adapting the house to make it accessible, are not covered.

Harris, who is the president of Dining Smart, said that George Williams, a business associate of hers and owner of the Barnside restaurant in Hanover, helped her to come up with a plan for a benefit auction and raffle, which will be held at the Barnside August 15. Williams, she said, has also made a major contribution to the fund.

Additional donations are being sought from local businesses and individuals for auction items, whether it be services, tickets or personal goods.

Dickinson Direct Mail of Braintree, Randy's employer, is picking up the tab for all the direct mail services for the event, as well as production of the program which will be available at the auction. Harris also said that Bennett's Tire Co. of Duxbury and the Marshfield Police Department have promised help with the fund drive.

While Harris admits that she set the wheels in motion, she also sees now that she has to step back and let the family take over. After that first meeting, she said, "There was so much energy and caring and skills in that room that it became a powerful tool. These people were suffering alone and didn't know what to do with their grief." She said once they were given some direction, the Sequeira family was able to channel their grief into something positive, and that working toward this benefit will be a healing process for them all.

There is, however, no treatment and no cure for Alexander's disease. It causes weakness and eventual deterioration of the voluntary muscles, but does not affect the involuntary muscles, like the heart. Physical therapy helps to keep the muscles working as long as possible by stretching them and preventing them from tightening up. Because respiratory failure is a common complication of this disease, they will have to be trained in chest-physiotherapy treatment to help keep Alexander's lungs clear.

"The scariest thing," Randy said, "is that there is no prognosis. The doctors can quote statistics and talk about the progression of the disease, but there's also such a great range in how severely an individual is affected by it.

"All we want right now is to provide Alexander with as normal an environment as possible and to give him every opportunity to be independent," said Randy. "Right now he doesn't mind being carried around, but in a year or so he'll want to do more by himself."

To make a donation for the auction or to buy tickets, call Marion Killion, 617-871-5746.

Annual tennis tourney raises $3,000

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The players couldn't have asked for a better weekend for tennis. Hingham's Stephen Murray and Bonny Curtin of Weymouth had no need to.

The pair outlasted the 64 teams who battled in private courts throughout town to win the overall title in Sunday's Cohasset Benefit Tennis Tournament finals at the Cox Estate on Cohasset Harbor.

With moderate temperatures and a forgiving sea breeze blowing from the harbor, Murray, a sophomore at Boston College, and Curtin, defeated the team of Tony Alessi of Weymouth and James Madison University student Jody Craybas of Rhode Island in the "A" Draw division.

The team of Bill Norton and Louise Durante placed first in the "B" Draw.

Joy Pratt, co-chairman of the event, estimated $3,000 was raised in donations. Proceeds from the fourth-annual tournament are donated to the Children's Hospital. Nearly $15,000 has been raised in the tourney's four years.

Pratt said a certain area of the hospital is "earmarked" each year and donations go toward it. This year, monies went toward the Children's Hospital AIDS Program (CHAP), the largest pediatric AIDS program in the state. CHAP currently follows 89 HIV-infected children and provides an array of services to children and their families who have had their lives changed because of the devastating disease.

This year's tourney was the biggest yet. Entries were originally scheduled to close on June 19, but because of the influx of entries, officials were forced to close them two weeks earlier.

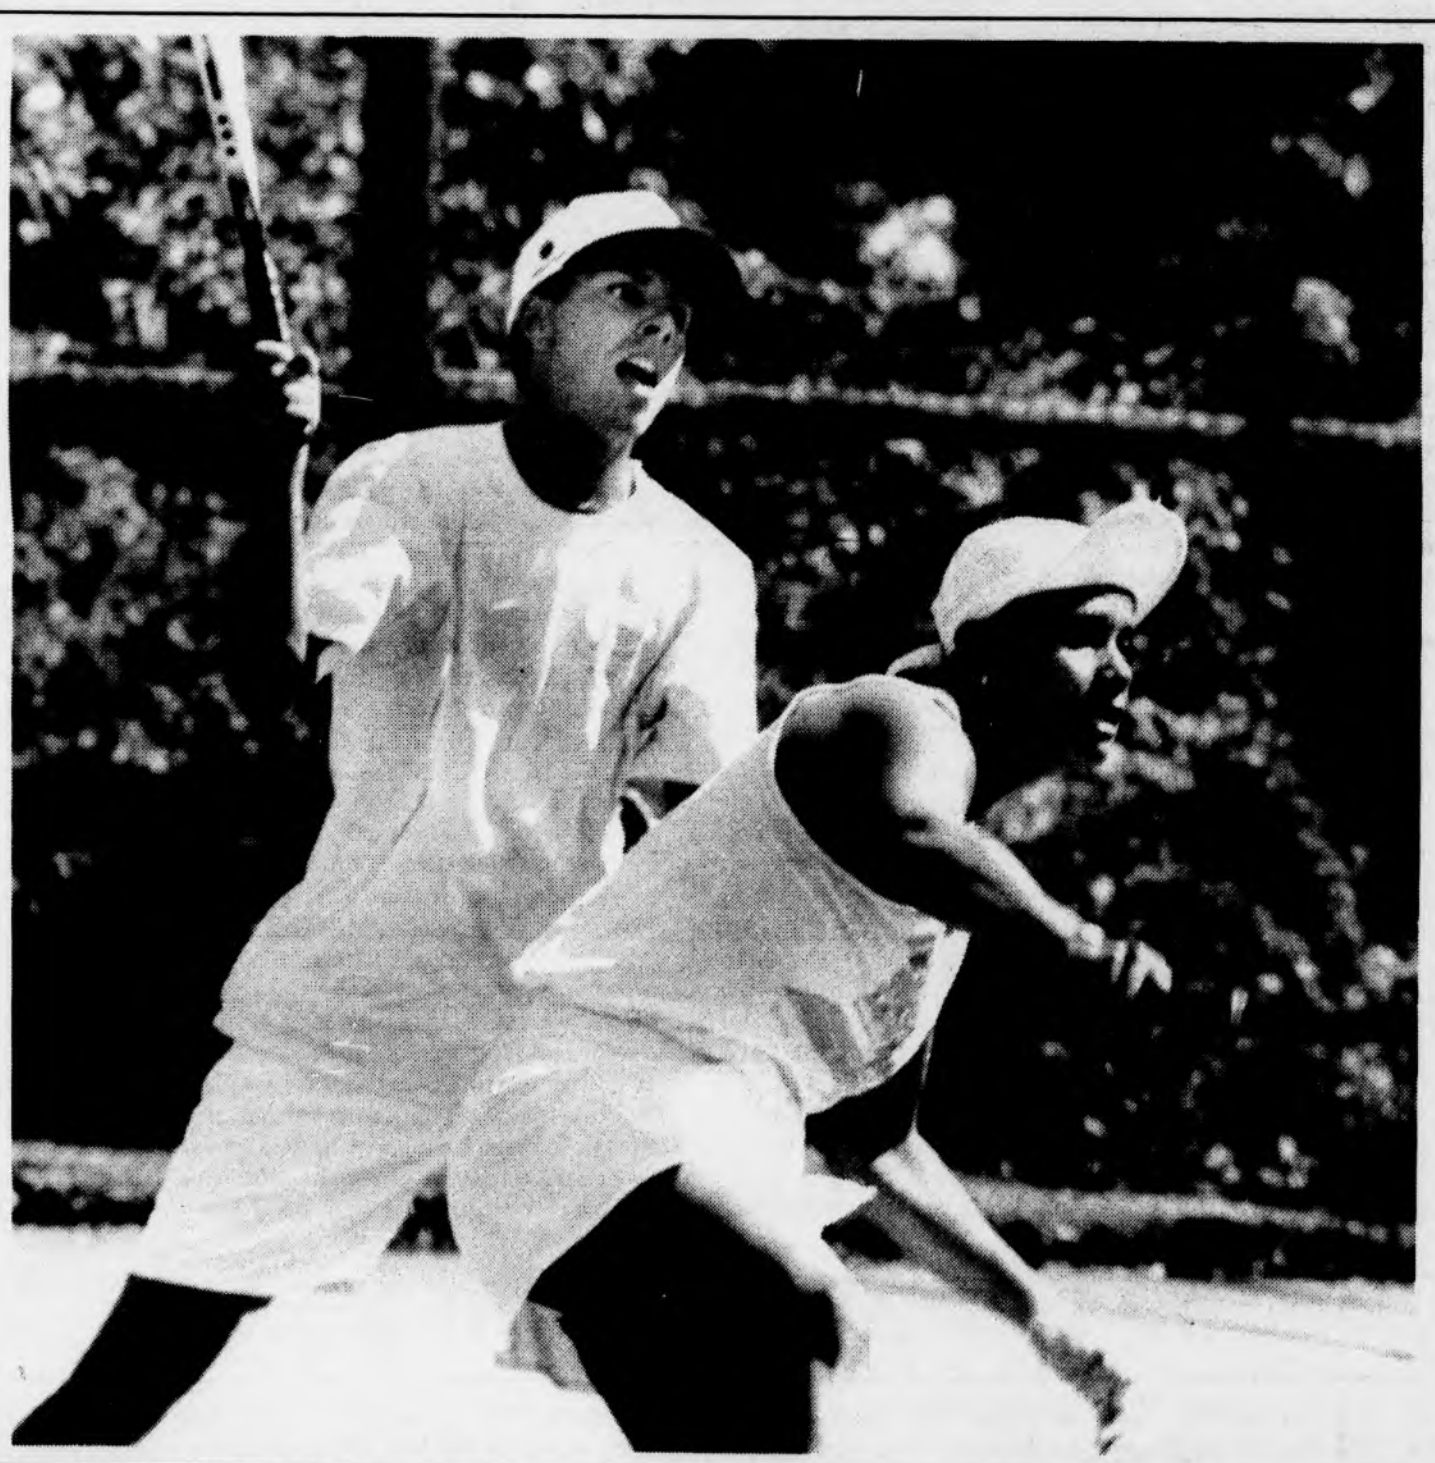
"It was great," said Pratt. "We had an enormous turnout for the tourney. Word of mouth has really helped. A lot of the same players were back.

"Spectators too. We get people who don't play but come back to watch."

The players' ages ranged from 19 to 65.

Pratt said there may be some changes in next year's tourney.

"We've toyed with the idea of having a black-tie dinner the night before the tournament to get the spectators involved."



Cohasset Benefit Tennis Tournament winners Stephen Murray and Bonny Curtin both keep their eyes on the ball during their semifinal match on Sunday.

Joe Reardon

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Former Cohasset High basketball player Bryan Edwards, arguably the best high school player ever from the South Shore, is now battling to make the NBA.

However, as reported in the Sunday Boston Globe, the 6' 1" guard, who is Massachusetts leading high school scorer, is finding it tough to make the big show for the Washington Bullets.

He is one of the many players trying out at NBA rookie camps over the summer.

However, Bullet general manager John Nash said Edwards did not have pro talent yet and needed to work on his game.

"He's just not good enough," Nash said. "Who knows? If he goes into the CBA for a couple years, maybe he'll get good enough. But he's not right now."

In all likelihood, the chances are slim that Edwards will end up on an NBA roster over the next few years.

Edwards, a METCO student, played varsity basketball as an eighth grader at Cohasset.

In fact, one of the Extra Points crew played against him in high school and saw his talent up close and personal.

Edwards, a slashing driver with a nice outside shot, was a great high school player.

But he did not have a stellar college career.

He played at Boston College for two years before he battled with coach Jim O'Brien over his role on the team. He wanted to be the go-to guy.

He eventually transferred to James Madison where he had two pretty decent season.

The point we're making is that Edwards, while an outstanding player, is not a one-in-a-million player.

And that's what it takes to be in the NBA.

Consider the math.

There are 26 NBA teams with 12 roster spots available on each.

That means 312 players make the pros each year.

There are roughly 250 million people in America.

In addition, many European nations are producing quality basketball players.

So if the NBA is in your plans, think for a second. Can you beat about one million people in a one-on-one game?

Sargent makes transition from gymnast to coach

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Gymnastics coach Ruthann Sargent isn't so concerned with what her young athletes can accomplish in a week, or even in a season for that matter. The former Cohasset High School star has been involved with the sport long enough to know quality gymnasts are not made overnight. Like newborns, they must be weaned and nurtured before they make the step toward serious competition. Sargent looks more towards their development and potential a couple of years down the line.

It's safe to say that patience is one of Sargent's strong suits, and an essential one as mentor of both the CHS and Cohasset Community Center teams.

"Progression and safety go hand-in-hand," said Sargent, as she took time out from her busy coaching schedule. "If you follow it, the kids will have a nice backbone for the future. Some other schools will just chuck you through. When you see them (gymnasts), they're usually all taped up because of injuries and doing things they're not ready for. Safety is number one."

Sargent has been teaching at the community center for 14 years. Prior to that, she was the CHS team captain and MVP for an unprecedented four straight years from 1975-79. Sargent remembers the team going undefeated in the South Shore League her sophomore year after dropping every meet the previous season. And there was a fierce rivalry building as well.

"Hanover was our big rival," Sargent said. "Back then Scituate was not in the South Shore League."

Rather than go away to school following graduation from CHS, Sargent decided to attend Massasoit Community College to pursue a secretarial degree. By staying local, Sargent explained she would be able to continue training at Kathy Corrigan's Gym and become a certified instructor, while receiving a college education at the same time.

"At least this way I could teach gymnastics and have a secretarial degree to fall back on," she said. "I knew I wanted to be a coach and stay active in the sport."

Sargent is currently meet-director certified, as well as being certified in first aid and CPR.

When Sargent began coaching at the community center it was a shell of what it is today. The corridor was used as a runway for the horse and the equipment was makeshift and inadequate. Given the conditions, Sargent believed the highest ranking a gymnast would receive would be a five (out of 10).

Today, thanks largely to the help of Community Center President Glenn Pratt, new equipment has been purchased and a mind-boggling 300 gymnastics students, at all levels, work out at the center each week. Along with Sargent there are five other staff instructors needed to handle the teaching load.

"It's unbelievable," she said of the center and its gymnastics turnout. "I thought the furthest we'd ever come is a level-five gymnast. Now it's just booming and I think it's going to get better because the interest is just phenomenal.

"It has come a long way."

Although she also runs the gymnastics program at Derby Academy in Hingham, Sargent's summers are a working vacation compared to the winter months when the gymnastics seasson is in full throttle.

Sargent took over the varsity gymnastics job from Andrea Polardi — one of her high schoo coaches — in 1985. Tack on her coaching at the community center, along with a full SSL schedule and 10— to 11—hour days are commonplace.

Sargent will be making another big step come August when she weds Tom Ardizzoni. She doesn't believe her busy schedule will put a strain on their relationship, however.

"Because I've gone out with Tom for so long," Sargent said, "he's used to it. There's always something going on."

Since becoming the high school coach, Sargent has made it a point to absorb as much information concerning gymnastics as she can. She has attended a number of workshops and symposiums and will be off to the U.S. Gymnastics Training Center at Mount Holyoke to teach, the week before her marriage. Fourteen members of the Cohasset Gymnastics team are also attending.

She considers the week-long stay in Western Mass., an invaluable chance to pick up more knowledge about coaching and other aspects of the sport.

"It will be great training as well as a great learning experience," Sargent said.

While Sargent's name is synonymous with gymnastics in Cohasset, she has also been noticed well beyond the South Shore. An article on Sargent was featured in a 1991 edition of International Gymnastics Magazine, one of the premier periodicals of the sport.

Sargent has a number of immediate goals for this winter's season. The biggest is beating perennial SSL Champion Scituate.

"They have been first for several years in a row," she said. "It would be nice for us to beat them. I don't know if it will happen."

While Cohasset is returning several young, talented gymnasts, Scituate is losing a handful of veterans. But because the Sailors' program has such a strong following, Scituate also has a regiment of youngsters coming back.

Sargent would also like to see Cohasset qualify for the South Sectionals and have some girls selected to the SSL All-Star team. Tara Gallagher was picked for the team this past winter. Erica Hettstrom looks to be the dominant gymnast for the Skippers next season and the team's best all-star bet.

Sargent has good reason to be optimistic of the winter season. The Skippers finished a strong third in the SSL behind Scituate and Carver last winter. She can envision the team moving up at least one notch, possibly two if everything falls into place the way she thinks it could.

"We want to be first or second," Sargent said.

At the league meet, the squad was distinguished with the Sportsmanship Award. For her part, Sargent was voted as SSL Coach of the Year. She also serves as the league representative to the State Gymnastics Committee.

As far as long-range goals go, Sargent would like to become a highly-rated gymnastics official and eventually open and operate her own gymnastics studio.

"That would be a goal somewhere down the road," she said.

Sargent believes the team can improve further in the coming seasons, but, just as quickly, stresses it is important for the girls to "stay in the gym" during the off-season and dedicate themselves to training on a year-round basis. Unfortunately, she said, other sports often get in the way of gymnastics and some girls never reach their true potential.

Sargent, though, is one of those rare individuals who can honestly say she is totally fulfilled by her job and working with the kids.

"They're great," she said. "We have girls that are three-years-old all the way through college. I really enjoy working at the high-school level because it's more challenging. You're sitting at the edge of your chair.

"You develop a special friendship with them. I can honestly say I love going to work every day."

Cohasset loses heartbreaker

Seventeen towns entered the Williamsport District 8 Tournament. After close to a month of competition, only Cohasset, Braintree American, and Rockland were still playing on the final weekend of tournament play.

Cohasset fell to Braintree American 2-1 in a heart-wrenching loss. The Cohasset bats were stifled by curve balls, knuckle balls, and off-speed pitches that were "Taylor" made to foil a Cohasset attack that had clobbered Braintree American 10-0 earlier in the tournament. Cohasset had four hits, two by third baseman Alex Schwein whose double brought home Cohasset's only run. Greg Taylor pitched another outstanding game, allowing just three hits.

Rockland then beat Braintree American 5-0 to finish the tournament undefeated and will represent District 8 in the upcoming single-elimination playoffs among the 16 districts in Massachusetts.

The Cohasset team sends its thanks to all of you who supported and encouraged the team's effort during this Williamsport segment of its summer play.

Cohasset will play its first home game of the summer season Thursday night, July 29, against Scituate.

Messina to play in golf marathon

Tony Messina Jr. of Hingham will attempt to play 100 holes of golf Aug. 10 to help raise funds for The Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund, which is considered the state's official golf charity.

Messina will be representing the Cohasset Golf Club in the Ouimet Fund's first "Golf Marathon" at Stow Acres Country Club in Stow, Massachusetts. Representatives of golf clubs from across the state will join Messina in his attempt to play 100 holes to raise funds for the Ouimet programs and celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of legendary golfer Francis Ouimet.

Up to 40 clubs are expected to send a player to the golf marathon. Stow Acres' South Course, considered the top daily-fee course in Massachusetts, will be closed from dawn until evening that day, so the players will be able to play continually and at a rapid pace. The players will be supported by a "Club Captain" who will solicit individual pledges ranging from 25 or 50 cents to $1 to $5 per hole. Many clubs are hoping to have as much as $75 per hole pledged, so the player is able to raise significant dollars for the Ouimet Fund.

Corporate support in the form of prizes and incentives is also being solicited.

Special sponsorship brochures and sign-up posters have been developed to facilitate fundraising. Contributions are tax-deductible. Pledgers will be "invoiced" after the event when the number of played holes is recorded.

Contact the Ouimet Fund at (617) 891-6400 for further information.

Those are your odds if you want a career in the NBA.

Those same odds exist for future pro players in other sports like hockey, football or baseball as well.

Young athletes at the high school and junior high level have better chances becoming lawyers, doctors, engineers or architects than they have of becoming pro players.

Consider that the next time any of you high school heroes out there want to blow off your English homework to shoot some baskets.

We're not saying to give up sports entirely, but young players and parents should be realistic about the role of youth, high school and college sports.

Stay in school and become a superstar in the classroom.

Not everyone can be like Mike.

"We would have done a full service bookstore, but Bookport already exists," Detwiler said, refering to Hingham's established downtown bookstore.

The Hingham store will operate on the first floor of the building and occupy approximately 1,800 feet. The store should be open by October, Detwiler said.

The second floor will be rented for office space. "It will contain single-room offices and office suites," she said. There is 3,000 feet available on the second floor, she added.

Detwiler said the decision to expand into Hingham, as opposed to another community, was influenced by her established customer base.

"It's a matter of wanting to expand to that area," she said. Detwiler said she wanted to move to Hingham because many of Buttonwood's regular customers are from Hingham. She said she already buys at shows with them in mind.

"You get to know what your customers want, like a retailer that sees a dress a customer wants."

She added that she is excited about working in Hingham Square because of the proximity of other shops.

"We are excited about going into Hingham Square and using the great stores there ourselves," Detwiler said. "And we are glad about being really accessible."

The possibility that the train might be resurrected through downtown Hingham was not a factor in choosing the expansion site, Detwiler said.

"The train is a possibility, but you can't wait around forever," Detwiler said. "I figure if it goes through, it goes through. I don't think it would be harmful to the store," she said.

Buttonwood in Cohasset employs approximately 20 part-time workers. Detwiler said while she will [illegible] hiring additional help for the Hingham store, she w[illegible] not sure how many would be needed.

"We have a very hard-working and dedicated staff, and we keep that in mind when hiring," she said.

IRS reaches accord with With Richards

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

With Richards is without riches.

The 235 Hull Street restaurant was closed for three days last week by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) for non-payment of taxes.

Manager Gerard Colucci said the restaurant was working out a payment schedule with the IRS when it was closed July 27, 28, and 29.

"We were closed for a small amount of tax debt," Colucci said. He declined to state how much was owed, but said it was "tens of thousands of dollars."

He said the restaurant paid a portion of its back taxes while closed, and reached an agreement with the IRS to pay the remainder in monthly installments.

However, Colucci said the restaurant's financial problems are not yet behind it.

"We are in the process of refinancing for close to half a million dollars and buying out the old debt," he said.

The "R's" now include Reform

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

With a simple pen stroke on June 18, Gov. William Weld signed into law the Education Reform Act of 1993.

The Act, debated and changed in the House and Senate for many months, now dictates specifically some of the procedures and powers local schools and school committees must obey.

The only hiring the school committee will take part in now is for the position of superintendent.

As listed in a recent report produced by the Educational Law Practice Group of Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, "The statutory provision stating that school committees will have 'general charge' of their schools has been repealed."

Superintendents from both Hingham and Cohasset feel the new procedures put more responsibility on their shoulders but say they are learning while the Act is being implemented.

Gary Baker, supt. of Hingham Public Schools said, "the law is extremely comprehensive and involves an

Blending the past with the future in Central Cemetery

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

With grave markers dating back to the early 1700s Cohasset Central Cemetery has a past.

But what its trustees want the public to know is that it has a future as well.

Nestled between Joy Place and Little Harbor, the terraced Cohasset Central Cemetery is among the loveliest spots in town. Hundreds of Cohasset's oldest families have plots at the private cemetery.

Cemetery president Mary Jane McArthur and a small band of volunteers are in the midst of developing an inventory of all the gravestones in the cemetery.

They have a sense of urgency in their work.

The marble stones, popular in the mid-19th century, are being eaten away by acid rain. Some of the stones like the Phineas Pratt Memorial are almost unreadable. Pratt was the first of the Cohasset Pratts and is ancestor to many of the town's current Pratts.

Marble, which could be elaborately carved, followed the slate stones and was succeeded by granite which is more resilient.

"We are trying to preserve the stones, it is part of our history," McArthur notes about the inventory.

The project includes taking a photograph of each stone and filling out a form indicating the motif, border, carving, orientation, dimensions, material,

She started swimming as an eight year old at Quincy's YMCA pool, but it wasn't long before Cohasset native Annie Henry became bored with the sport.

But she was hardly bored with being in the water.

By the time she was 10, Henry began taking lessons in synchronized swimming under the watchful eye of her mother, and coach, Carol.

"It seemed more interesting than swimming back and forth, said Henry, now 21, during a recent phone interview from her apartment in Santa Clara, California. She had just returned from a four-hour practice and had another in the evening.

"I like the variety and music of it. It's not like being a swimmer who does the freestyle for 10 or 11 years."

Cohasset's week

Viking film update

Plans are apparently moving forward for the filming of several movie scenes of a Viking saga off Cohasset's rocky coast.

Karen Stark, location manager for Lara Classics, Inc., informed selectmen that she is making arrangements with police concerning crew parking and staging areas.

The production company plans to use the beach and rock islands between Jerusalem and Nichols Rds. and the causeway on Atlantic Avenue near the beach the last week of August or first week of September.

Set about 1,000 years ago, the movie Killian's Chronicles is the story of an Irish slave who escapes from a Viking ship. Killian is befriended by the local Indians and falls in love with a young Indian maiden.

Stark said that the staging and crew parking area would be at the Sandy Beach parking lot. She added the crew is also trying to park production vehicles on private property adjacent to the filming locations.

Lara Classics initially approached selectmen about a month ago. The film with a $300,000 budget will be for general release.

The town-owned Independence Building shown here could be the site of a teen center. Selectmen encouraged Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc. to investigate using the South Main Street building as a new teen center. Keith Knowles said Monday the group wanted input from selectmen to see if "the plan is workable." Knowles said the building is appealing because the kids could have sole use of it. The Teen Depot (the former teen center) was housed in rooms also used for classes conducted by the Cohasset Community Center. Selectmen told the group to return with a complete overview of the proposed project.

Name: Patti Morse.

Occupation: Owner, ALT 24 (an alterations and tailoring business on Hull Street.)

Best day of your life: The moment my daughter's doctor told me she would survive after being in surgery for 13 hours to remove a brain tumor.

Most embarrassing moment: I do the fittings for a lot of brides and bridesmaids, so I'm invited to a lot of weddings. I had been eating and drinking at one of these functions for nearly an hour, when they announced the bride and groom — and I realized I didn't know them. I left and went to the wedding underway in the next room, where I should have been the whole time.

Goal: To retire in three years and take a 12-month trip across the country with my husband.

Favorite season: Fall.

Worst vacation: Last year I went to Lake Winnipesaukee for a week — it rained everyday.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Pet Peeve: Rude Boston drivers.

Favorite book: "The Bridges of Madison County," by Robert James Waller.

Favorite movie: "Gone With the Wind." I've seen the movie seven times.

Biggest worry: Poor health.

Favorite place: Negril, Jamaica.

Favorite junk-food: Whitman's Sampler. Not just one chocolate, but the whole box.

bedding and more.

On each form the condition of the stone is noted and the inscription is copied exactly.

"We're about 1/2 done," McArthur says. "We haven't started the old slates."

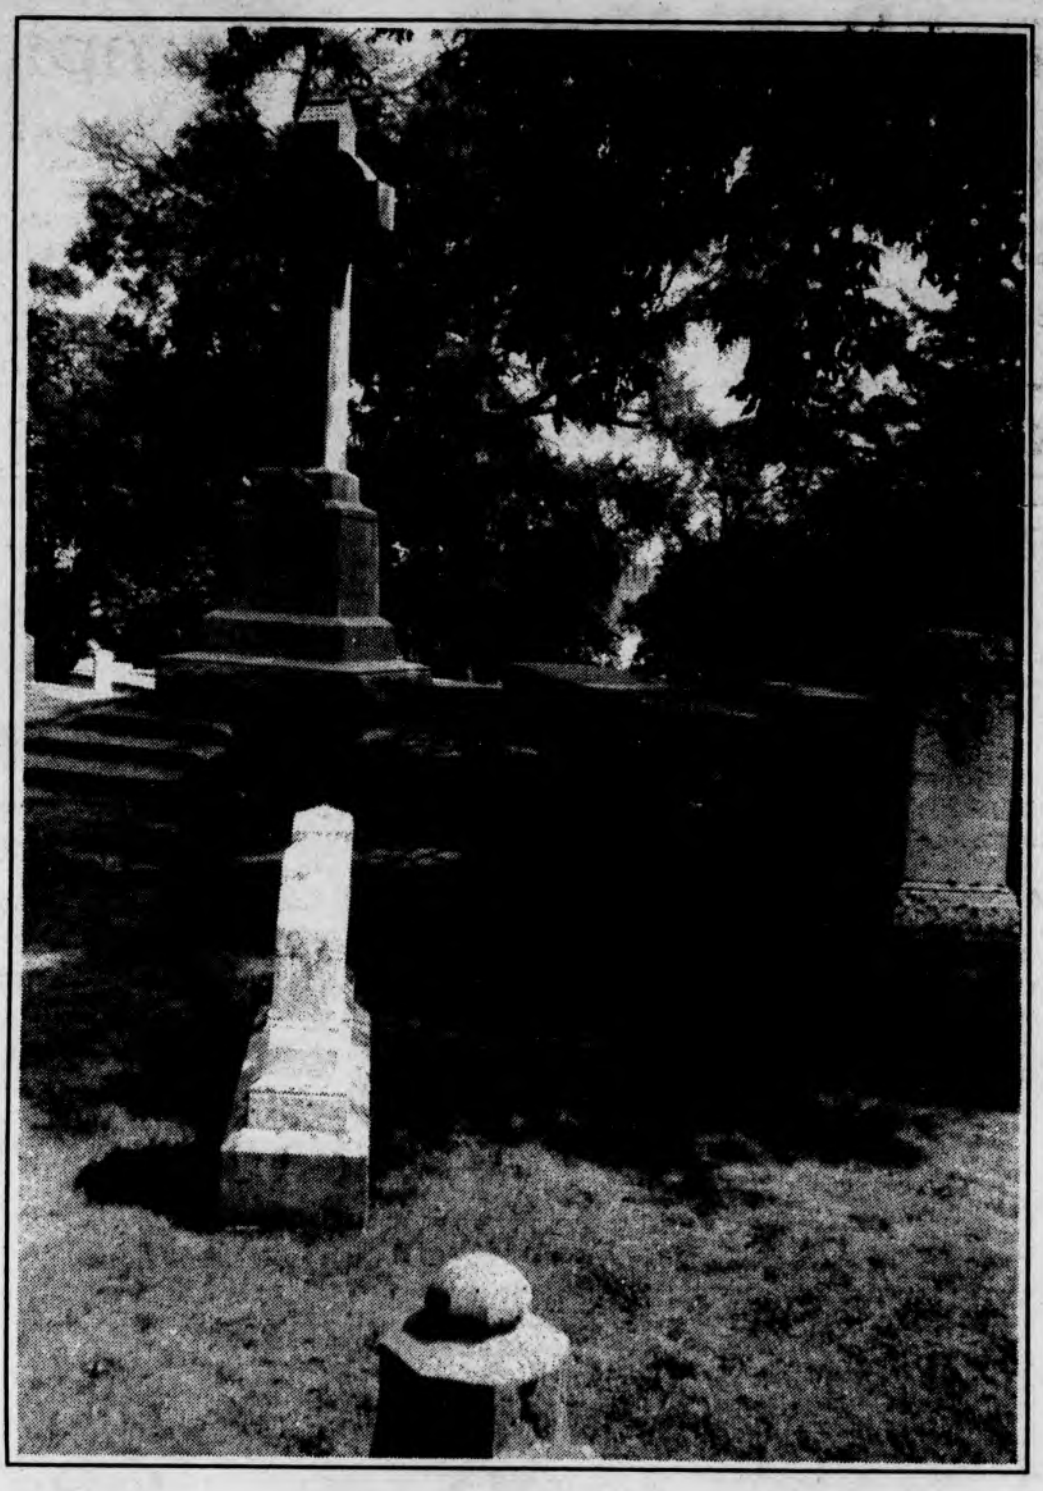
Once the inventory is established, the trustees hope to have a pamphlet published detailing the family histories of the people buried in the cemetery. They foresee the pamphlet as a historical resource to the town and to genealogists from across the country.

During a recent round-trip tour of the cemetery McArthur and local historian David Wadsworth, who serves on the board of trustees, pointed out some of the oldest names in town like Pratt, Tower, Lincoln and Bates.

Congressional Medal of Honor holder, Sgt. Levi Gaylord, a Civil War veteran, is buried there as well as actors like the Victorian tragedian Lawrence Barrett and fellow actor Stuart Robson, who has a unique rough cut stone.

The stone work is as interesting as the names. Angels, weeping willows, and skulls are depicted on the early slate stones. The marble stones led themselves to three-dimensional and more elaborate carvings.

Membership in the cemetery association is restricted to those who have family plots or vaults in the columbaria. Eighteen are elected to the cemetery governing board from the 250 members, McArthur explained.



The Edward E. Tower Columbarium, at right, winds around behind the Celtic Cross at Cohasset's Central Cemetery.

Columbaria space is available in cemetery

While cemetery president Mary Jane McArthur says there are no more lots for sale, the cemetery is offering spaces for cremation urns in two columbaria.

The Edward E. Tower columbarium near the Celtic Cross and the Prescott T. Cumner columbarium off Joy Place are constructed as low garden walls of seamface granite, capped with individual bluestones. Tower was a former treasurer and superintendent of the cemetery and and Cumner was a long-time member of the board of trustees.

She said that local clergy and funeral homes have received the cemetery brochure which explains that the vaults are available for purchase.

The columbaria are specially designed to blend in with the 18th century graveyard.

Route 3A site is contemplated for new cemetery

Nearly 10 acres of town-owned land off Route 3A could become the site of a new town-owned cemetery.

Members of the cemetery study committee told selectmen Monday that when complete the four-phase project could contain 2,354 graves.

"It's a good return for the size of property," said cemetery engineer Brewster W. Fuller.

The cost of phase I which would contain 272 graves would be about $38,000.

Committee president Glenn Pratt explained that there are left-over monies in an article for cemetery development approved by the 1989 Town Meeting to cover Phase I costs.

The land, formerly controlled by the housing authority, was deeded back to selectmen when it didn't pass percolation tests.

Pratt and Fuller suggested to save the cost of building a culvert across wetlands, the entrance to the cemetery could be off Red Fox Lane, a private access road to a subdivision for three houses. Selectmen could obtain an easement or seek relief through eminent domain proceedings.

But selectmen said they would prefer spending extra money to have the entrance and signs off Rte. 3A and not off a residential street.

Pratt said there is about $40,000 left in an old town meeting article to develop a cemetery off Pleasant Street. That project has been put on hold because the committee could not come up with an alternative access that made good economic sense, he said. The cemetery study committee would like to go to special town meeting this fall with the current proposal for the cemetery off Rte. 3A, he added.

Selectmen suggested the study committee get input from the conservation commission.

Road clearing okay'ed

Selectmen authorized the clearing of Black Rock road only to the point necessary for the passage of safety vehicles at their meeting Monday.

Brush and tree limbs have apparently grown into the narrow roadway.

Acting Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said that from a public safety standpoint any effort to widen the road would help the fire department to operate effectively in an emergency situation.

Art works wanted

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke will work with the South Shore Art Center to see if revolving art exhibits could be obtained for town hall.

Goedecke noted that the walls of the selectmen's office in particular were bare and because the room gets a lot of use by the public adding work of local artists to the walls might be a nice addition.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle stressed that the art work should not be advertised for sale.

"I don't want to set up a sales office here," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said adding art work to the walls "is an excellent idea."

Bill payment okay'ed

Selectmen authorized payment of the following bills:

• $982 to Brewster W. Fuller Assoc. for professional consulting services in relation to the preliminary design of a new cemetery from March 1 through June 30, 1993. The money for this purpose was appropriated in an article approved by town meeting in 1989.

• $4,000 for M.D.I., Inc. of Oswego, Oregon for travel expenses to conduct surveys and interviews regarding the fire department regionalization study. Cohasset is administering the municipal incentive grant for the study. The bill will be paid with grant monies, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

GOP workers named

At the requested of Juliette D. Guild, chairman of the Cohasset Town Committee, selectmen approved the appointment of the following citizens for election workers: Dominic M. Baccari, Carol Beggan, Maria R. Pape, Margaret Stoughton, Grace Tuckerman, Margaret Bates, Ruth Pratt, R. Murray Campbell, Katerine Lincoln, Betty Lou Pearce, Janet MacLure, John Mullet, and Margaret Chapin.

Sergeant exam called

At the request of Police Chief Brian W. Noonan selectmen will call for a police sergent's exam through Civil Service.

Noonan said with the recent appointment of John Conte to the position of sergeant, the current list (of potential sergents) has been exhausted.

"Many members of the department have shown interest in taking the exam." Noonan said.

Marjorie Murphy

If you haven't heard of the Puzzle Club at the library Monday and Tuesday nights, you're in for a treat. Brothers and sisters and kids of all ages are filling the children's room to solve the mystery puzzles.

special friend

Legends Under The Boards, The Stolen Jewels, and Missing Links are some of the titles.

Mrs. Murphy, the librarian at the Deer Hill School, has organized this exciting activity for the past two summers with increasing popularity.

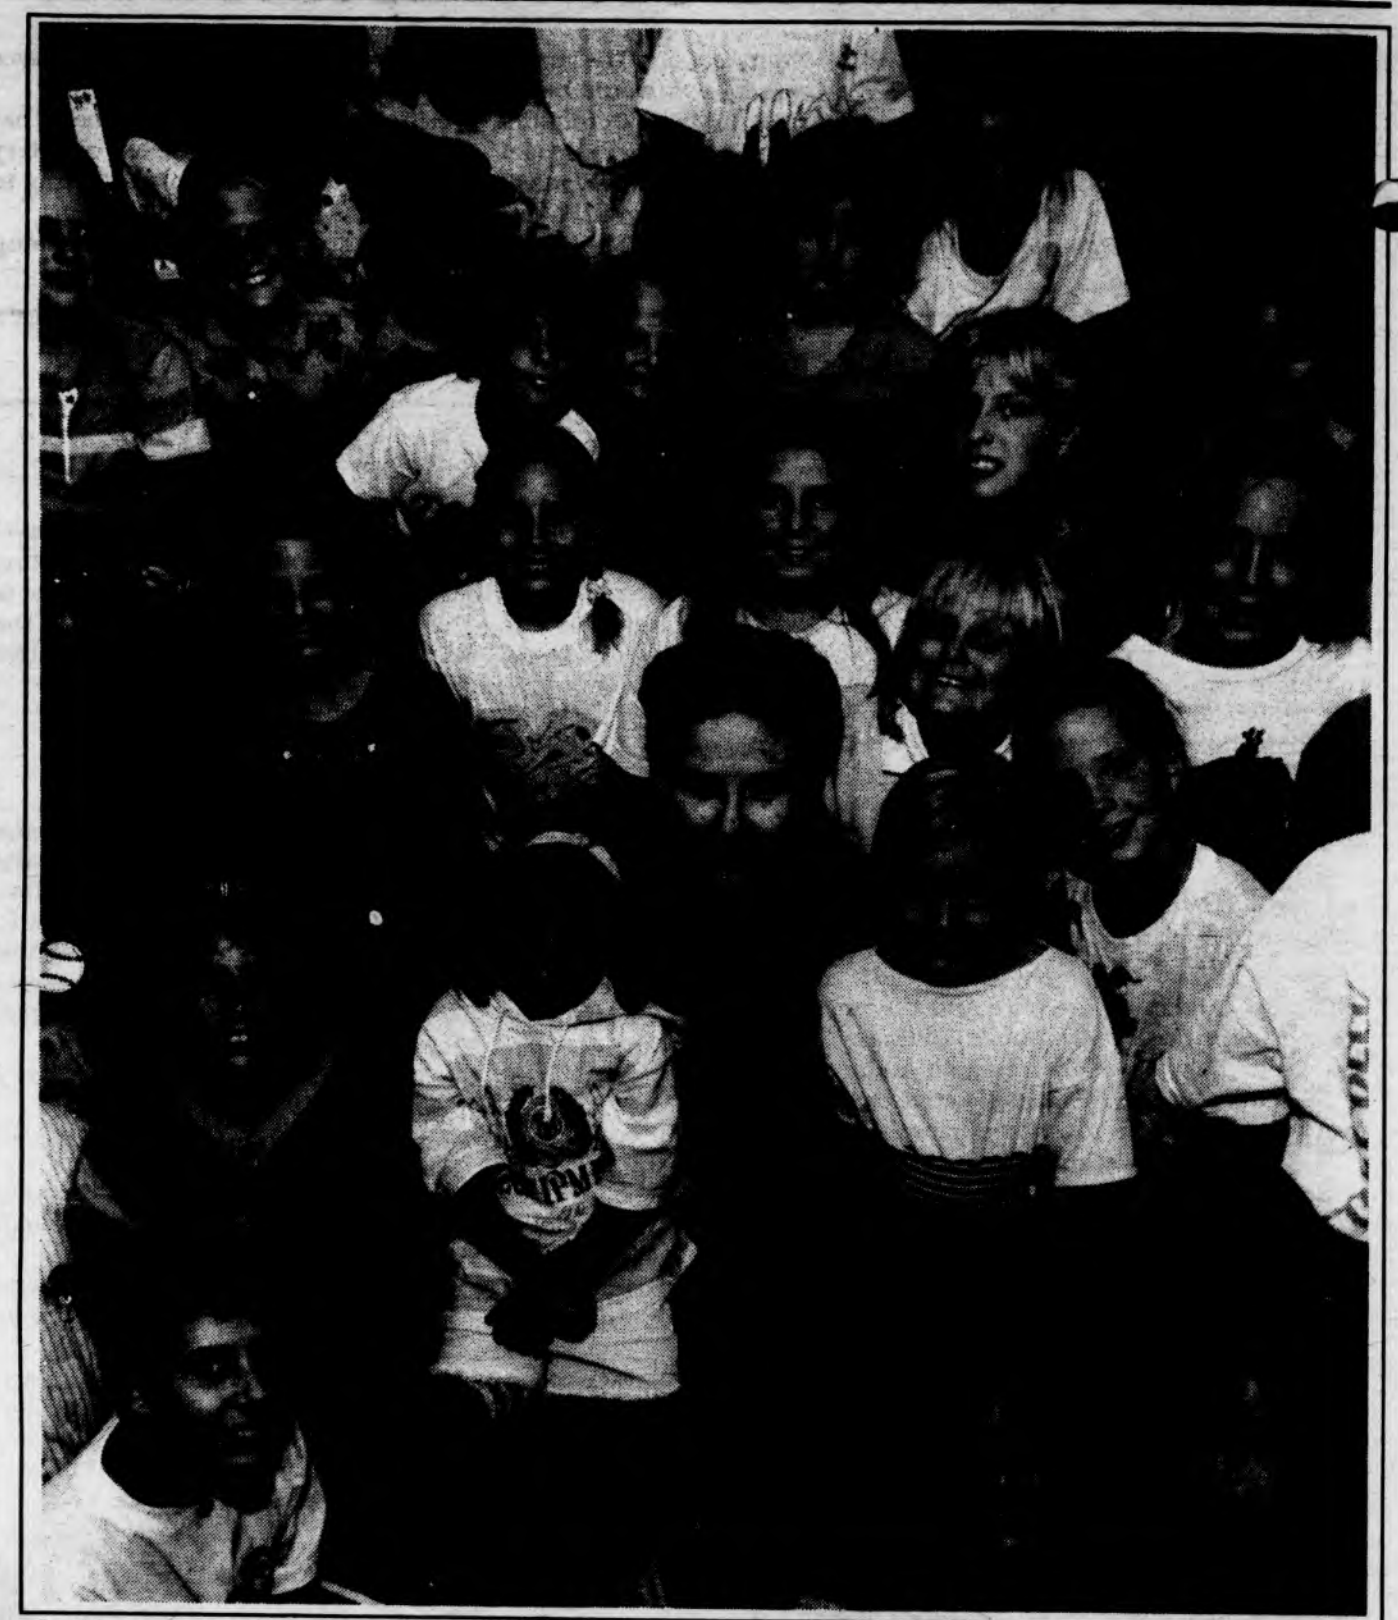
Last summer there were about a dozen puzzle-solvers. Monday night, there were over 30 children downstairs in the library.

Mrs. Murphy organized this fun activity because her students at the Deer Hill School were anxious to continue their book discussions in the summer. She decided on the mystery puzzles as a form of discussion and a fun activity as well. Puzzle-solvers are given a mystery to read.

To solve the mystery they must complete the puzzle. Before the puzzle is completed the puzzle group must secretly write down their puzzle solution. After the puzzle is completed, group members share their secret answers. Prizes are given for all who participate.

Mrs. Murphy is a whirlwind of activity from seven to nine each Monday and Tuesday night. She oversees puzzle solutions, gives prizes, helps everybody select books from the children's room, issues new puzzles, directs volunteers, and even selects books on tape for little siblings at home. She takes great pride in the puzzle-solving activity and the enthusiasm the children share for puzzle solving, but for selecting additional reading books as well.

Mrs. Murphy epitomizes the dedicated teacher who loves children and wants them to enjoy reading no matter what their ability, a true friend of children, and a true friend of the library.



The library's puzzle lady is Marjorie Murphy. Here she is surrounded by lots of young Cohasset folk who have caught puzzle-itis! (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Library parking debated

There will be no handicapped parking for the library on South Main Street.

Safety Officer Clifton B. Jones said he, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan, Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield, and Building Inspector Robert Egan are in agreement that a handicapped space on South Main is out of the question.

He explained that under state law, handicapped parking should be as close as possible to the entrance of the building or walkway. Due to space dimensions required by law, Jones suggested the last parking spot upon exiting the parking lot of the library be designated a HP spot.

Jones said after discussing the matter with Library Director Richard Hayes, Hayes said he would withdraw the proposal for a spot on S. Main Street and submit a new request to the board of library trustees. Parking at the library is a premium because there are only seven parking places in the library driveway.

Newest cop comes with top credentials

By Mary Ford

While college gave Richard G. Abbadessa the theory behind police work — it was the streets of Hull that prepared him for a career.

But after four summers, the 23-year-old Old Coach Road resident will turn in his Hull uniform after Labor Day to start preparing for his next challenge: becoming a full-time Cohasset police officer.

The recent graduate of UMass Lowell with a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice was chosen out of field of four interviewed for the patrolman's opening Monday night.

It's the second time the clean cut, good looking Abbadessa appeared before selectmen in recent months.

Two long-time police officers retired recently: Officer Carmelo Conte and former Chief Joseph Kealey. In the spring selectmen interviewed Abbadessa and three others for first vacancy. They hired Jeffrey Treanor, who was the top scorer on the Civil Service exam on the local preference list provided.

Monday night, selectmen also interviewed Glenn A. Davis, Christopher C. Pratt and Jesse E. Richards for the second opening. They voted unanimously to appoint Abbadessa, the top scorer on the new list.

Abbadessa, a 1988 Cohasset High School graduate, isn't fazed by the fact that as a police officer he could find himself dealing with friends and former classmates in less than favorable circumstances.

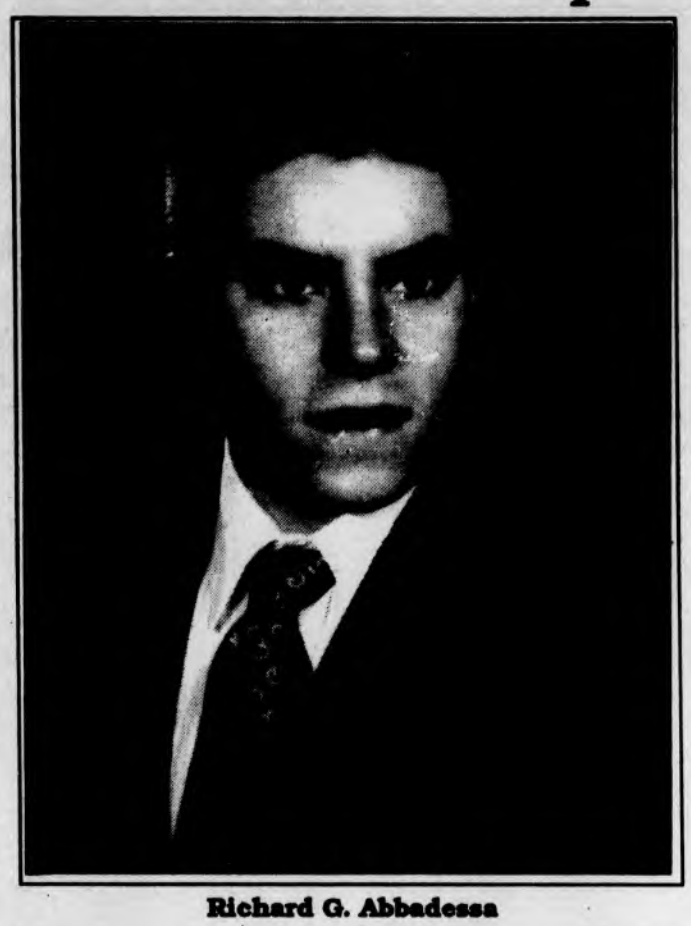
"Arresting people is part of the job, it's nothing personal — you just do it," he says.

"If I find a minor with alcohol — will I arrest him? Yeah. But will I think he's jerk for the rest of his life? No," Abbadessa says emphatically.

His work in Hull has convinced him that substance abuse and cars don't mix.

"Drugs and drinking and driving are a bad idea," he says.

Abbadessa realizes as a rookie he might be assigned to the midnight to 8 a.m. shift. It's nothing he's not used to. He's currently working the graveyard shift in Hull. Partnered with a career officer, Abbadessa has seen the underside of life.



Richard G. Abbadessa

He explained that heroin is a big problem in Hull and domestic violence is another.

"I've seen some beauties," he says about domestic violence incidents.

Abbadessa is scheduled to start for the police academy Oct. 4. The training lasts 17 weeks, so Abbadessa should be on patrol in town around Feb. 1.

In the meantime, Abbadessa is staying in shape. He visits Bay State gym in Cushing Plaza to lift weights. There he's run into fellow rookie Treanor, whom he's knows from high school and who is enrolled in the current police academy class.

And when Abbadessa starts at the police academy in October, he'll be litterally following in his father's footsteps. His father Sgt. Richard B. Abbadessa has been with the CPD for two decades.

Board changes noted

Monday selectmen accepted the resignations of Thomas L. O'Brien of the Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Committee and those of Elaine Burke Davis and Sandra S. Kent of the Drug and Alcohol Committee.

In her letter of resignation, Davis said "It's been a great three years."

Kent wrote in her letter, "After serving three years I feel it is time for a new member with fresh enthusiasm and creative ideas."

O'Brien explained that he is now on the planning board and has to step down from the refuse planning board due to time constraints.

Selectmen appointed Diane Erlandson-Perkinson, Michael P. Palimeri, and William McAuliffe to the Drug and Alcohol Committee.

Selectmen noted there are now two vacancies on the Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Committee. Any citizens interested in serving should contact the town moderator through the town clerk's office.

The reappointment of Mark G. DeGiacomo to the zoning board of appeals won unanimous approval by selectmen Monday.

Muster licenses okay'ed

Organizers of the fireman's muster set for August 14 successfully obtained licenses for food and entertainment.

Selectmen approved the license applications for food and entertainment during their board meeting Monday.

The muster kicks off with a pancake breakfast on the Common followed by a parade, dunk tank, and fireman's muster at Milliken Field.

Glenn Pratt told the board that 12 vendors have signed up so far. Vendor tables will be set up at Milliken Field, he said.

❑ More news from Trinity College, this time about Kristin Maki, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Maki, who graduated in May with a bachelor's degree in psychology. She was also elected to Pi Gamma Mu, a national social science honor society; and Psi Chi, a national honor society founded for the purpose of advancing the science of psychology.

❑ Hats off to Richard Lydon Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Campbell, who graduated from Vanderbilt University School of Engineering with a Bachelor of Science degree. Let us know your plans, Richard!

❑ Remember David Walsh? Well, he has been named as the recipient of the Retail Deposit Quality Financial Service Award by the Bank of Braintree. David started as a teller in August of 1990. This year he was promoted to the post of customer service representative. In this capacity he was responsible for assisting customers and opening accounts. He is currently enrolled in Boston's New England Banking Institute, where he is studying accounting. The Bank of Braintree's President lauded David and his efforts; his key word for him was "professional." Criteria used in selecting David for the award included: productivity, attitude, cooperation, work ethic, conscientiousness, as well as overall contributions to the bank. Congratulations, David!!

❑ Hats off to Tara P. Volungis who was recently named to the dean's list at Boston University for the spring semester.

❑ Danielle Nohe also makes news from Notre Dame Academy. She made first honors for the fourth marking period, and you know that everyone is pleased about that!

❑ Frank Willshire should be proud of himself, too. He was named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Stonehill College. Keep up the good work, Frank.

❑ More bright news — Peter M. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter W. Smith, qualified for the dean's list at Babson College, and we congratulate him!

❑ Mary Erin Monaghan, daughter of Mary P. Monaghan, was awarded a diploma from Denison University. She was an English (literature) major at Denison, and earned a bachelor of arts degree. A member of the Student Activities Committee, she was also involved with the rugby club and performed in numerous student/faculty dance concerts. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority. Applause to you!!

❑ The Knowles family certainly is a happy one. Greg is home from South America! After enjoying a brief stay in our lovely town, Greg is going to Japan for one year, so be sure to say hello to him! Keep in touch, Greg, we'd love to hear about your experiences there!

❑ Normally it isn't news when you go to McDonald's, we all go all of the time...but, when you go to the McDonald's in Moscow, that is an experience. Ask Martha and Arne Gjesteby; that is where they were recently. Hope to hear more about your travels through Russia, Martha and Arne; don't forget to tell us about them.

❑ Had a nice chat with Francis Mitchell the other day. As you probably know, he just recently retired. That means he has time to do other things, and he is taking advantage of that! Recently he met with John McCue (from Milton, Mass.) and Ronald Hanson (from Reedsport, Oregon), men he hadn't seen since December of 1945, when they were in Sai Pen and Tiniah during World War II. Imagine what a great reunion that must have been, and the stories that were related! Hope you had a great time, guys!

❑ Hats off to Matthew R. Beggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Beggan of Sankey Road fame. Matthew recently earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from Saint Anselm College where he majored in history.

Best of luck to you in the business world, Matthew, we know that you will do well.

❑ A name from the past! Saw Rose Maloney the other night, she looked grand! She and hubbie, John (former superintendent for Cohasset School system) are summering in Mashpee and her children, Jack and Diane, are running First Quality Rehab in Hollywood, Florida.

Everybody is happy, and all is well with them all. Good!

❑ That is all the news for this week. Be sure you let us know yours!

He is the son of the late Mr. Steele and Dr. and Mrs. William Corriveau of Cohasset.

The ceremony was performed by Betty Brown, justice of the peace. The 225 guests were transported to Children's Island on the cruise ship "Hanna Glover."

Emily Rembe of Albuquerque served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were sister of the bride, Kate Cairns, of Alexandria, Virginia; Kirsten Kimball Kapteyn of Ashburnham, Mass.; Margaret Paige of Charlestown, Mass.; and Elizabeth Blodgett Smith of San Francisco.

Flower girls were Callie and Gracie Steele of Cohasset, Sarah Fischer of Marblehead, and Christine Turner of Hopkinton, New Hampshire.

The groom's brother Matthew Steele served as best man. users were Peter Begley of Boston; the bride's brother W. James Cairns, Jr. of Boulder, Colorado; Thomas Cromwell of Boston; Josh Epstein of New York; Steven Karzmer of Boston; Edward Porter of Cambridge, Mass.; the groom's brother Daniel Steele of Hingham; and the groom's nephew Samuel Steele of Cohasset.

The bride graduated from The Pingree School and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. She was formerly employed by Sun Life of Canada as an investments analyst.

The groom is a graduate of Wilbraham Academy, Amherst College, and New York University Law School.

He is an attorney with Goodwin, Procter and Hoar, and is currently working as a legal advisor to the government of the Czech Republic.

The couple will reside in Prague, Czech Republic.

Nancy Donahue

Donahue/de Moor

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donahue of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Marshall to Paul de Moor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hendrick de Moor of Worcester.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Boston College. She is employed as a marketing representative at IPEC, Inc. in Rhode Island.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Vassar College. He is employed at Scudder, Stevens and Clark in Boston.

A February 1994 wedding is planned.

Mrs. Jennifer Hamner (Watts) Rodiger

Rodiger/Watts

Jennifer Hamner Watts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Burghall Watts Jr. of Cohasset, was married to Albert Amory Rodiger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Rodiger Jr. of New Canaan, Connecticut and Kennebunkport, Maine.

The Reverend E. Clifford Cutler performed the ceremony at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset, Saturday, May 8.

Mrs. Rodiger graduated from Simmons College in Boston. She is employed as an aide to Massachusetts Senator Lucile Hicks in Boston.

Her father is a vice president for the investment services division of the Shawmut National Corporation in Boston.

The bride's mother is associated with the Cohasset realty office of Hunneman and Co./Coldwell Banker.

The bride's gown was designed and sewn by her mother with a skirt of silk taffeta and a bodice and sleeves of organdy with hand applied Alencon lace with pearls.

Mr. Rodiger graduated from the New Canaan Country School and is an alumnus of Middlesex School in Concord.

He earned his bachelor's degree at Boston University followed by a master's degree in city and regional planning.

He is employed as a program manager in affordable housing for the Massachusetts Secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development in Boston.

His father, a retired management consultant, was formerly secretary and treasurer of Case & Co., Inc., Stamford, Conn.

Round-trip tour

If you haven't visited Cohasset's Central Cemetery at Joy Place then you're really missing something.

It's a fine example of a Colonial burying ground that's expanded over two centuries to encompass a living history of the town's families.

Names like Tower, Pratt, Bates, Lincoln and many more adorn the stones which are often works of art themselves.

The work of Colonial stone carvers was distinctly their own. But most followed trends of the time. The early stones depict skulls and crossbones which often included wings, depicting the soul's flight.

Portraiture followed. Early gravestones can include carved faces of men in wigs and the women with kerchiefs tied under their chins.

A small but enthusiastic group of local volunteers are making sure that none of the designs and inscriptions on the older markers are lost forever by the effects of time and pollution.

They are busy compiling a treasure trove of Cohasset history by developing an inventory of every stone in the cemetery. The inventory details the type of stone, condition, dimensions and the inscription copied exactly.

As cemetery president Mary Jane McArthur explained some of the stones must be brushed gently with a soft, dry paint brush to bring out the writing which has been worn away.

Once the inventory is compiled the group plans to write and publish a pamphlet detailing the history of the families buried there. They foresee it as a valuable resource to the town and to geneaologists.

During a recent round-trip tour Mrs. McArthur and local historian David Wadsworth pointed out the range of headstones and how acid rain has taken a heavy toll especially on marble markers which were popular in the mid-19th century.

According to the Massachusetts Historical Commission:

Massachusetts burial grounds are exceptional. Scattered throughout the countryside, historic cemeteries function as art, historical record, religious symbol and contemplative space...all in a form accessible to the public. Nonetheless, our appreciation and protection of burial grounds remains generally at a low level.

Cohasset can certainly thank the officers, directors and members of Cohasset Central Cemetery for caring about this important piece of the town's history.

If you haven't yet — take a round-trip tour of a cemetery. Books on the history of stone markers and their significance are available at local libraries.

Police should re-think tactics

letters

To the Editor:

In reference to an article written concerning beach hours being restricted, I would like to address some serious misconceptions.

Firstly, the Chief of Police in our town seems to believe that currently Sandy Beach is a hot-bed of illegal activity during evening hours, which it is not. As a frequent beach-goer I can tell you that when people choose to consume alcohol they will do it where ever and when ever they please.

In addition, 99 percent of my friends do not come to the beach to drink. Sandy Beach is simply a place where people can meet on any given night, find a parking spot and not have to worry about bothering anyone. It is my belief that a place to meet safely, and have fun is very important, especially for young people.

Furthermore, why are the Cohasset Police so worried about the cost of increased police patrols at the beach? Is it not the job of the police department to generally circulate throughout the town? Is this cost complaint coming from the same police department that just received new patrol cars with onboard computers and special guns so rare that only one other town in the country has them?

I cannot honestly say that in the past beach privileges have not been abused. However, completely shutting down one of our town's most treasured natural resources, so that no one can enjoy it is absolutely ridiculous. Why can't the police simply have unannounced spot checks like everywhere else in the town?

Secondly, people who come to the beach at night do not belong in one stereotyped grouping; rowdy, high school-aged drunks, as has been implied, but instead include both the young and the old. Some come to see friends, some come to walk the dog, and others come to enjoy the surf regardless of who else is there.

People of the town, don't let the Cohasset Police Department shut down our town's most beautiful beach! The solution does not lie in restricting beach hours, but instead in the re-thinking of current police tactics.

Story on Jeanne Armin appreciated

To the Editor:

This is to let you know how pleased/surprised/impressed/warmed I was to discover (yesterday) the very well-written front-page article (by David Walcott) on my wife's Jeanne Nelson Armin) memorial service in the July 29th edition of your paper. The article captured, very deftly, the general love/thrust of the service's intent and the background for the Boston Children's Theatre presentation after the service. (Note: The photo selected was/is great!)

A number of my friends and town acquaintances have commented on the "nice job" done in the coverage presented in the article. Thanks! (Note: I'm about to xerox some 50-60 copies of the article to send to close friends and relatives — a pleasant task, to be sure!)

A final note: The obituary you printed in the Cohasset Mariner shortly after my wife's death in December of 1992 is another item I'd like to thank you for! Perhaps there's a bit of "ego" involved here, for you saw fit to print, almost word-for-word, the copy I submitted to the funeral director of Richardson Funeral Home. Again, a "late" thanks.

Habitat house update

South Shore Habitat for Humanity (SSHH) announces the completion of its latest home, 43 Elm Street. The Home Dedication Celebration will take place Saturday, Aug. 7, at 10 a.m.

Formerly a town-owned office building, the Bates Building was donated by the people of Cohasset to SSHH for renovation into a two-family modern condominium. The Bates Building is now a place for Linda Kearns and her two children, and for Peter and Tracy Madge and their three children to call home, and to build a foundation in the community.

SSHH is an ecumenical, non-profit Christian Housing Ministry. Established in 1985, SSHH has joined in partnership with people in need to build simple, decent housing.

Please join us as we welcome these two great families into their homes and thank the hundreds of volunteers and the many contributors who have made this project a reality.

Elm Street beautification project on hold

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Although selectmen had considered at a prior meeting to authorize partial clearing of the town property along Elm Street across from the Cohasset Savings Bank, they tabled the project Monday.

The Village Renaissance Committee expressed an interest in beautifying the area and exposing its ledge which is now hidden by overgrowth.

John F. Hartshorne, at the request of the Renaissance group, appeared before the board in June to seek approval to remove some of the saplings in the 13,500-square foot lot.

He said the granite outcroppings there are a unique and distinguishing feature of Cohasset, worthy of enhancement when possible.

After hearing abutters' concerns about noise buffer and erosion, Selectman Jane O. Goedecke proposed limited improvements to the area at the board's meeting July 19.

She explained there is a foundation to a blacksmith's shop (to the right of and behind the park bench) which should be uncovered and the plaque detailing it reinstalled. Plantings are needed around the telephone company green box and the clearing the small, dead growth, high grasses and debris would bring out the ledge a little bit.

Goedecke said she was concerned that uncovering the entire ledge might bring out "graffiti artists."

But Monday, Goedecke, who had been in touch with local historian David Wadsworth, said it wasn't clear if the "foundation" was a blacksmith's shop after all. Evidence shows a blacksmith shop was in the area at one time but the "foundation" which remains might be a retaining wall.

"And I also have come to realize that as you approach it by foot the part we're considering clearing would be blocked by a maple tree," Goedecke explained.

She added that perhaps clearing this area shouldn't take precedence over others in town.

"I don't think at this point this needs our priority," she said.

Goedecke said the project hasn't won over the public.

"There's been significant negative reaction and not an outpouring of support," she said.

Depending on the ongoing investigation into the history of the "foundation," the board did not nix the project altogether.

"At this point I'd like to continue to table the motion," Goedecke said.

Chief and teens to have powwow August 18

By David Wolcott
Mariner correspondent

Acting upon a recent request from selectmen, members of the Drug and Alcohol Committee gave their opinions about Police Chief Brian W. Noonan's request that the town's beach be closed at 8 p.m. instead of 11 p.m.at their latest meeting.

Chief Noonan is seeking the early closing to try and put a stop to the under-age drinking problems that occur at the beach.

Since the closing time is part of the town by-laws, Noonan would have to seek the change as an amendment to the warrant of the October Town Meeting.

Although no official votes were taken by the group, individual members seemed to agree with the suggested earlier closing in the interest of public safety.

Committee member Linda McCarthy did suggest that the beach closing be held at 9 instead of 8 p.m. though, saying that the people who enjoy using the beach usually do so before nightfall.

Chairperson Ellie Waal called the issue "controversial", but conceded that in the interest of safety and liability issues that the proposed earlier closing of the beach was warranted.

"I look at this issue as an extension of the 'Safe Homes' project", said Waal. "Sometimes the beach is seen as a something like a giant unsupervised teenage party, and for that reason I think that we should close the beach earlier." Safe Homes is a program in which parents sign a pledge not to allow unsupervised parties in their homes.

Recently appointed member Mark Palmieri agreed with Waal, but added that he was afraid that the town would be "just pushing the kids parties around to different places in town."

Keith Knowles also agreed with the earlier closing time, saying that "our committee should have a simple answer to this request. This committee should be in favor of any action that will lead to responsible actions for this town."

He added that, "we should support the chief in this and any other matter that will help him enforce the laws of this state. It will also bring a greater focus on substance use and abuse in this."

The full committee will meet with the Chief Noonan at the next meeting August 18, and will take a formal vote on the matter then.

Along with the chief, local youths will be invited to the meeting to discuss the earlier beach closing issue.

School reform

awful lot of other changes that probably everyone should begin to be aware of."

He contends that even though the school committee has been removed from the hiring responsibilities he will continue to present decisions on hiring and termination to them for their thoughts.

In Cohasset Supt. Stephen Hart agrees.

"I thing it's probably to everyone's advantage to have the school committee still be very aware of what's happening," he said.

Both administrators said the committee is still very necessary because of the role they play in setting school policies and reviewing school budgets.

At this point the Act is in its infancy and both men agree time is necessary before they can fully evaluate their new powers.

"There's a great deal of unanswered questions," Hart said.

One of them being how the new provisions will affect the day to day operations of a system like Cohasset's or Hingham's.

Colucci said the refinancing project should mark the end of the poor business performance which has plagued With Richards for the past several years.

"The business has been coming into financial difficulties for the past five years," he said.

Those difficulties landed the restaurant in bankruptcy court last year. The restaurant emerged from Chapter 11 March 3, 1993. Chapter 11 is the section of the United States Bankruptcy Code that allows debtors to reorganize their debt in order to keep the business operating.

Colucci said the current difficulties with the IRS are the residual effects of the bankruptcy case. The refinancing is also part of the bankruptcy case, he said.

With Richards has been a Hull Street fixture for the past 17 years. In 1988, Yong Ducette bought the restaurant from then-owner Richard Stilphen. Stilphen owns the Hingham Bay Club restaurant, as well as Isaac's Restaurant in Plymouth.

"Yong ran into financial hardship, most directly related to the economy," Colucci said.

The Mariner was unable to reach Ducette by press time.

Under the proposed terms of the current refinancing, ownership of With Richard's may change again, Colucci said.

"Yong will still be the owner, but she could be joined by someone else," he explained.

Ducette also owns another restaurant, the Liberty Pole Diner in Boston, Colucci said. "It does well. It has nothing to do with what is going on at With Richards," he said.

Colucci said the downturn in the economy has been accompanied by a proliferation of restaurants in the local area.

"Take a look at the number of restaurants here," he said. "We are one of the most concentrated areas for restaurants with one of the lowest populations."

Colucci said as a result of the bankruptcy case, With Richards has streamlined its operations. "We have modified our hours of operation to intensify our efforts," he said.

Several months ago With Richards stopped serving lunches in order to concentrate on dinners, Colucci said. "We are open from 2p.m. to 1 a.m. (in the lounge) and serve food from 4 to 10 p.m."

Colucci said the business is getting back on sure footing.

"The evening after we were closed was our best evening of the summer," he said. The temporary IRS closure did not adversely impact sales, he said.

"Business is back to normal."

With Richards encountered one last stumbling block to its Friday reopening, however. Cohasset Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik inspected the restaurant on its reopening day.

Godzik said he discovered a refrigerator that wasn't working properly." They had to throw some food out ," he explained.

Godzik said the violation did not warrant a fine.

Senior volunteers thanked

Treasurer/collector Elizabeth B. Ripley thanked volunteers from the Senior Center and their coordinator Kathy Bryanton for stuffing, sealing, and counting more than 3,000 real estate and personal property tax bills.

Ripley said the help translated in a saving of $427.68 (equivalent dollar value of volunteer time = 54 hours times 'D' minimum rate of $7.92).

She said their latest effort begins the fifth year that seniors have helped the teasurer/collector's office.

"We appreciated their spirit and their sense of dedication to the community," Ripley said.

Repair payment okay'ed

The town will spend $463.82 to Executone for unanticipated repairs to the town hall phone system. Damage to the telephone lines occurred during a lightning strike on July 8.

Bilton relaxes after decimating age group

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Twelve-year-old Greg Bilton doesn't plan on doing too much with the rest his summer, "just hanging out" as he puts it.

Bilton, though, is hardly loafing around. He's just taking a well-deserved breather after winning the New England Age-Group Swimming Championship for 11-12 year olds at Harvard University's Blodgett Pool.

Interestingly enought, the first-place plaque wasn't even the most impressive aspect of Bilton's performance, compared to his finishing times in every event. The eighth-grader-to-be took at least two seconds off his personal best in all nine individual events he entered. And as if that wasn't enough, he teamed together with other members of his club, the Mass Bay Marlins, to set two New England records in three races.

The New England Championship was not his first. Bilton won as an eight-year-old and took first in the short course in March. Bilton admits he was leery of his chances to win, even though he knew he was as prepared as he ever has been for a meet.

"My coach (Dave Palumbo) asked me if I had a shot at doing it and I said 'yes'," Bilton said. "But there were a lot kids so I didn't think I'd do that well."

With the competition tight — three swimmers tied for second — Bilton swam as hard as he ever has. He made a pact with himself before the meet that his immediate future in the sport hinged on how well he performed.

"I told myself if I didn't do what I watnted at the meet I was going to take the year off and do high-school sports."

That doesn't look as though it will materialize, however. Bilton finished first in the 50- and 100-meter breastroke and fly, second in the individual medley, fourth in the 100 freestyle and fifths in the 100 backstroke and 200 free.

Bilton credits resting for the meet, rather than training through it, for his strong performance.

"You work really hard for a while then you taper so you don't waste it," he said. "I knew I was in first place going into the last day and my best events were in front of me."

Bilton picked up two firsts and a third to seal a six-point victory.

The work leading up to the meet paid of well for him, but he admits there was nothing easy about the training schedule Palumbo had written out. Bilton was in the pool five days a week for 2—1/2 hours at a time. With the varied races he was entered in, Bilton had to mix long-distance swims with sprint work. In addition, he incorporated a lot of stretching, along with running the steep stairs that lead to the upper seats of Harvard's football stadium.

The year has been the most consistent for Bilton since he started swimming as an eight year old for the Cohasset Swim Team. When he was 11 Bilton took the summer off completely and played Cohasset Little League. He joined the Harvard-based Marlins a year later and Swimmer grabs gold in Olympic Festival . . .

Henry said.

It's easy to see Henry made the right choice as to what sport to pursue.

The Santa Clara University student and member of the Santa Clara Aquamaids earned a gold medal as the West team won the overall title in the synchronized swimming section of the United States Olympic Festival in San Antonio, Texas. She just missed out on a medal in the duet competition with a fourth-place finish, but rebounded well to nail down third in the field of 40 in the figures division. Henry was 2/10ths of a point out of second and just 1 from the gold.

The team title was somewhat of a surprise to Henry. Reporters handicapping the finishes didn't figure the West squad would offer the North much of a challenge for the gold, coming into the meet. But Henry says the team was primed for the mid-summer competition.

"I wasn't sure we were going to win because the North was favored so heavily in the team competition," she said. The West beat them though and pulled of an upset of seven-tenths of a point."

The Olympic Festival meet came on the heels of last year's Olympic Trials qualifier in Pasadena, California. Henry had a strong showing at the trials. Paired with Aquamaid teammate Jill Schlichting, she finished ninth in the duet competition, after cracking the top-15 in the solo event.

Henry, though, says there is no comparison in the level of competition in the meets.

"The Olympic Trials was the more difficult meet," she said. "You're swimming against the best of the best. They're just different levels of competition.

Synchronized swimmer Annie Henry shows the grace and concentration — both above and underwater — needed to be a national-calibre swimmer.

"We had nothing to lose. The two who represented us (U.S.) in the '88 Olympics (Karen and Sarah Josephson) were there so they were shoo-ins.

The Josephsons took home a silver medal in the '88 Seoul Olympics and moved up to the top step of the platform last summer in Barcelona for the gold to lead a U.S. sweep.

"We have the best synchronized swimmers in the world right now," Henry said.

Henry is shooting for the second national team next year, but admits she has contemplated retiring after nine solid years training for the sport she grew to love as a young girl. A psychology major at the university, she is interested in earning her masters degree in sports psychology.

"If I retire from swimming," Henry said, "my heart will go into that. Of course if I keep swimming I'd like to be at the '96 Olympics (in Atlanta)."

For six months of the year, during the height of her competitive season, Henry's training schedule is nothing short of intense. She has double sessions, six days a week for 6-8 hours a day. "And that's just in the pool," Henry said. Nautilus and dry-land routines are also incorporated into her schedule, giving her little free time. Henry doesn't begin studying until 9 p.m., and is up until well past midnight completing the following day's assignments.

Henry moved to Arizona with her mother between the seventh and eighth grade in 1985, when she was 13 years old. Carol Henry is a former synchronized swimmer herself and currently is a zone judge and a member of the national figure committee. She continued to coach Henry in Arizona.

"She's been in the sport forever," said Henry. "I'm not sure she competes anymore, but I'm sure she gets in the pool and floats around."

Carol moved home to Cohasset when her daughter entered college. Annie makes it home for two weeks at Christmas and two more in August. Last summer, though, she had the time to return to her hometown for seven weeks.

Although Henry considers herself a Californian, and enjoys the lifestyle and the fact there is no snow, Cohasset still holds a special place in her heart.

"I'm used to the West Coast more than the East Coast now," she said. "I love it back there though. I really do. I haven't seen a fall back home in nine years."

As for her major, Henry regards sports psychology as an "up and coming career." But there are other reasons she is attracted to the field.

"I think it's because I moved away from home so young," she said. "I made a lot of important decisions at a young age and one of them was to leave my family for my sport."

Cohasset All-stars take four straight

Cohasset won four straight this week, beating Scituate and Quincy twice each. Powered by Denis Rooney's grand-slam home run, Cohasset pounded Scituate last Tuesday, 10-1. Steve Baker, Justin Golden and Jim O'Sullivan combined pitching efforts to hold Scituate to one run. O'Sullivan and Kyle Bunstein also made spectacular catches in center field.

Bunstein and Greg Taylor both had home runs in the Thursday rematch with Scituate to lead Cohasset's 13-run attack. Cohasset struck early with leadoff hits by Justin Golden and Mark Equi and just kept hitting to produce its highest run total of the summer season. The final score was 13-9.

Saturday, a highly regarded Quincy team was overpowered by Greg Taylor's pitching as he struck out 15. Cohasset fielders had an easy go of it until a Quincy power hitter slammed one deep to center field. Mike "Never Say Die" Rossie hustled over from left field and played the ball perfectly as it careened off the flag pole. Rossi then relayed the ball in to a nail a Quincy runner at the plate, ending any potential threat they hoped to muster against Taylor. Cohasset won, 6-1, but suffered a major loss in the second inning when catcher Ben Smoot left the game with a broken thumb. So much for Dr. Scholl's molefoam.

Cohasset played its best game of the season in the rematch with Quincy the following day. The team demonstrated tremendous character. In a see-saw battle through six innings, Cohasset clawed its way back from a deficit to tie the score three times. Ted Goff had two hits and reached base three out of four times at bat. Mark Equi, Matt Lewis, and Denis Rooney all had extra base hits. Rooney scored the winning run in extra innings on a dramatic game ending hit by Kyle Bunstein. Cohasset's infield at times looked like a pin ball machine as hit balls rocketed off of feet, shins, and thighs, always with the same result: a spectacular play and a put out at first. Eric Hanian was sensational at first base. He stretched, contorted, twisted and twirled to make every play. Denis Rooney had fans cheering with two fantastic catches in right field. The final score was 7-6.

New 'step' workout schedule at town hall

The new schedule for Step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall:

"Fatburner"/intro (beginners to intermediate), Monday and Wednesday nights, 5 to 6 p.m.

"Fatburner"/Power Step (intermediate to advanced), Tuesday and Thursday nights at 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10 session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Edward G. Taylor Memorial Golf Tournament, August 16

Hingham Youth Hockey Association holds its annual fund-raiser, the Edward G. Taylor Memorial Golf Tournament, August 16, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Cost for golf cart, greens fees and dinner is $85 per person; dinner only is $25. Tee-off time with a shot-gun start is 12:30 p.m. It's a best-ball tourney.

"We're hoping for a sell-out," says HYH president Charlie Hayes. Hayes said the event is the organization's way of honoring Mr. Taylor and his contribution to youth hockey on the South Shore.

Taylor, who served as president of the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham for 16 years, passed away in 1991.

"Our program is larger than ever before and that has a lot to do with the contribution to youth hockey that Mr. Taylor made," Hayes said. "We have 250 kids in our program from Mites to Bantams."

Individual and businesses can sponsor tees and greens. South Shore Imports has offered a car to be awarded for a hole-in-one. A set of new clubs and a trip to an exotic location are other prizes, Hayes said.

For information, please call Hayes after 7 p.m., 749-8092.

Camp was success

Ideal weather greeted 98 area youngsters attending the Cohasset Recreation Commission's annual summer instructional baseball camp for five to 18 year-olds that was held June 28 through July 2 at Miliken Field, according to Commission Director Jack Worley, who reports it was a resounding success.

"We offered a half-day schedule for youngsters five and six years of age again this year to accommodate the ever growing number of parents who want to get their youngsters involved in an organized program at an earlier age," Worley explained. "We had 55 youngsters in that age group this year and the half-day schedule seemed to be just right for them.

"This was our fifth baseball camp in as many summers and the fourth year that the SSBC has run the program," Jack continued. "We started out with 30 campers the first year and have continued to grow each and every year since, which is quite an accomplishment given the economy of the past few years. I think it's a tribute to Frank Niles and his staff who are very well organized and have a great rapport with the youngsters. All of the parents seemed to be very pleased with the conduct and content of this year's camp," Worley concluded, "so we look forward to holding it again next year."

Chi Kung event

Visiting Tai Chi and Chi Kung master Wei Lun Huang has been scheduled in a return visit for two workshops focusing on Chi Kung (internal energy practice). The Chi Kung workshop, for which no previous experience is necessary, will be held Friday, Sept. 10, from 7 to 9 p.m. The cost is $50. This workshop is beginner level and open to the public.

Sept. 11 and 12, Master Huang will teach part one of the rare Liu He Ba Fa form, which blends the distinguishing features of China's three internal treasures, Hsing I, Ba Gua, and Tai Chi. Previous martial arts experience is recommended. The cost is $145. Pre-registration is recommended. For further information, call John Loupos at WLA in Cohasset, 383-6822.

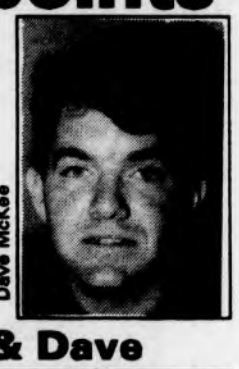
Joe Reardon



Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

A paragraph in last week's feature story on Cohasset High School gymnastics coach Ruthann Sargent seems to have caused quite a stir that has its author baffled.

Sargent said in the story she would like to see some of her girls selected to the South Shore League All-Star team. Those were Sargent's words. The author then added as a point of reference that Tara Gallagher was the only Cohasset gymnast to make the All-Star squad last season. He then said "Erica Hettstrom looks to be the dominant gymnast for the Skippers next season and the team's best all-star bet."

These were not Sargent's words but the opinion of the writer. Sargent ended up taking a lot of heat from a parent of another girl on the team who disagreed with the opinion, believing she said this during the interview. He pointed out to Sargent that Hettstrom seems to get more attention in the paper from the writer than the other girls on the team, all of whom train and compete very hard and are all dedicated to the sport. The authore is in total agreement that the girls are committed.

But by saying Hettstrom looked to be the "best all-star bet" in no way implied that none of the other girls have a chance to be selected to the squad. That was never mentioned in the story. The author stand's by his opinion, because it is just that, an opinion. We're allowed to have them, just as much as you are to disagree with them. If that weren't the case, Eddie Andelman, Jimmy Myers and sports columnists around the country would be out a job.

Of course, opinions do change and the author may have another during the high school gymnastics season. Things may change in that span of time, particularly among a group of young gymnasts who are improving in leaps and bounds through Sargent's Cohasset Community Center team.

As for giving Hettstrom more attention in the paper than the other girls, that is false. True, the author did do a feature story on Hettstrom, but he also featured Kara Protulis, Gallagher, and now, Sargent. The particular gymnast, along with the rest of the Skippers' squad, had their meet results printed in the Mariner on a weekly basis. And whose to say she won't have a feature story written on her next season? Not this author. The contrary is a stronger possibility.

So dad, don't worry, you're daughter has not gone unnoticed by any means.

Bilton . . .

has improved drastically since.

Competition aside, Bilton enjoys the other perks of swim meets.

"It's really fun, getting to travel throughout New England," he said. "I've made a lot of friends. As long as I keep doing well, I'm going to stay with it."

Bilton should stop and remember what happened the last time he made a pact with himself. You can bet he won't be drying off for good any time soon.

Booze at Sandy Beach is still problematic

Following Det. Frederick Grassie's report on a Sandy Beach vendor's violation of the town's anti-public drinking by-law, selectmen revoked the vendor's license Monday.

Grassie detailed the police investigation which included photographs of Paul O'Leary with beer at Sandy Beach. O'Leary had a permit to sell hot-dogs in the beach parking lot.

Grassie said he and Officer Lisa Matos observed O'Leary remove four cans of beer from his car and open a bottle of Michelob, July 26. The police confiscated the empty beer can they saw O'Leary throw into the trash as evidence. Grassie said the investigation followed complaints about O'Leary drinking and possibly selling alcohol. Grassie said police had no proof that O'Leary sold any beer.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said police gave O'Leary a warning two weeks prior to charging him with public drinking.

In another matter, police arrested three minors for possession of alcohol at the beach Friday night.

Arrested were 18-year olds John Murphy Jr., 20 Old Pasture Rd.; James Yess, 445 King Street; and Daniel DeMichele, 264 Jerusalem Rd.

Police said the youths had three cases of beer in their possession. They were arraigned on the charges Monday and fined $50 each.

Chief Noonan said in another incident last week police responded to a tip that kids were drinking at the beach. Upon arrival the perpetrators had scattered, police said. No arrests were made and police poured out the remaining alcohol.

Historical walking tours

The Cohasset Historical Society will present two summer season walking tours of Cohasset's historic areas and sites. The first, scheduled for Sunday afternoon, August 8, will be a walk relating to the town's long and unique maritime history. Meeting at 2:30 p.m. at the Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset center, the tour will traverse Elm Street, once known as Ship Cove Lane, to Cohasset Harbor.

The second of the Society's two summer walking tours will be presented Sunday, Sept. 19, and will feature a tour of historic Cohasset Common and the center village. The tour will meet at 2:30 p.m. at Meetinghouse Pond on the Common. Cohasset Common, often described as one of the best New England Town Commons, is an original part of the town's undivided common land dating from earliest Colonial time.

There is no charge for the two walking tours, and donations would be accepted. The Society's telephone number is 383-6930.

Cohasset bells played

A concert on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon will be presented Sunday evening, Aug. 8, by Karel Keldermans, Carillonneur of the Rees Memorial Carillon in Springfield, Ill. Mr. Keldermans will play a varied program of interest to all listeners, consisting of original music for carillon, transcriptions of works for other musical media, and familiar melodies arranged for carillon.

The recital will begin at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. (617) 383-1803 weekdays, or the church carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at (508) 475-2599, or Mrs. Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, at (617) 383-9599.

GOP recruits women

Senator Lucile P. Hicks of Wayland and the Glade in Scituate will kick off a new group, "The Thursd Caucus," which will enlist, instruct and assis Republican women candidates Thursday, August 12, at 6:30 p.m. at the home of Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset.

To join as a charter member and to attend the buffet all interested women should call Laura DeLuse of Hanover, 871-1523; Jean Muir of Cohasset, 383-1850; Doris Stalker of Duxbury, 934-6864; Joanne Montouris Nikitas of Plymouth, 508-746-8995; Judy Lawton of Norwood, 762-8715; Julie Maguire of Hingham, 749-7423; or Polly Logan, 383-0031.

Kids' talent show

The Company Theatre will be holding its Second Annual Children's Talent Show August 18 at 7 p.m. Each act will be coached during the day of August 17 and 18 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The cost is $25 per child. Each act is responsible for its costumes and music, and a pianist will be available. Registrations will be accepted until August 16. The Talent Show will be performed on the evening of August 18 at 7 p.m. Admission is $7.

Habitat helps bring Cohasset families home

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Determination and hard work were the common denominators that made Saturday's dedication of the Bates Building possible.

Over the past ten months, an army of volunteers has turned the structure into two units of affordable housing which were sold to two Cohasset families.

In less than two weeks Lynda Kearns and her children Jennifer and Nicholas Barnes and the Madge family consisting of Tracy and Peter and their kids Justin, Michelle, and Kaley will call 43 Elm St. home.

Kearns and the Madges worked side-by-side with the volunteers to make their dream of home ownership a reality. The condominium units were sold to the two families for about $50,000 each.

"This is a very exciting day," Kearns said holding back tears.

"My goal for the past four years has been to provide a home for my family, one I can afford," she said.

Kearns, who is divorced, works full-time as an office manager for the Massachusetts Environmental Police in Hingham. Kearns had been living in town with relatives.

Peter Madge, who grew up in Cohasset, is a lobsterman and his wife Tracy works as a cook in a Marshfield restaurant.

"Thank you for the opportunity to be able to live like real people and for the chance to grow again as a family, for this chance we will be forever grateful," Peter Madge told the gathering.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit organization propelled by volunteers, provides homes for families

Family fun on parade for Fireman's Muster event

Revisit America's childhood with a fun-filled 1880's-style day of food, antique fire apparatus, parade, clowns, dunk tanks, horses, fireman's hand pump muster, music for all ages and much more.

The festivities begin Saturday with a firehouse pancake breakfast on historic Cohasset common. Children of all ages can enjoy delicious Old New England pancakes in the warm reflection of the duck pond by the old meeting house.

At 10:30 a.m. a nostalgic parade of muscle-powered hand tub pumpers and other magnificent civil war era fire fighting apparatus will kick off from Cohasset common. Members of the New England states veteran Fireman's League will proudly display dozens of beautiful and painstakingly restored tub pumpers as they parade through quaint Cohasset Village on their trek toward the big showdown ... the pumping competition at the high school field.

This is an officially sanctioned competition with motivated teams going all out for the prestigious Minot's Light trophy and generous cash prizes. The trophy is dedicated to Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson, two young South Shore lighthouse keepers who in the Captain's Walk targets town's seafaring past

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Everyone knows Cohasset is a maritime town but for a glimpse at its rich seafaring history — a walking tour is just the ticket.

About 30 people including locals from Cohasset and others from far away places like California and Florida joined historical society curator David Wadsworth for the "Captain's Walk" Sunday.

The tour began in the historical society's Maritime Museum in the village and then proceeded up Ship Cove's Lane, now known as Elm Street, winding its way through the harbor and finishing up at Government Island.

All along the way the group was treated to fascinating particulars about some of Cohasset's early settlers and shipbuilders.

Walkers also discovered that many of the town's homes and shops had several incarnations. Cohasset Hardware was once the old Bates tin shop established by Samuel Bates in 1849. And the fire and police station now stand where the old Osgood School once was.

The building on Summer Street next to Legion Hall was once the headquarters of the Minot's Ledge Portuguese Benevolent Society which was

South Shore bike club has something for everyone

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Four years ago the founding fathers of the South Shore Bicycle Club scheduled a meeting for interested riders in the office at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

One of the founders, Marty Grassi of Marshfield, didn't expect much — if any — of a turnout.

A late-fall Northeaster was blowing through the South Shore and Grassi had trouble making it to the meeting himself. But what transpired when he finally arrived made him decide that, yes, a bike club on the South Shore was in demand and people were serious enough to discuss it.

Seventy-five people braved the storm to hear what Grassi and fellow-founder Steve Long's thoughts were on the bicycle club.

"If we had that many people on a night like that, I knew we had to start a club," said Grassi. "It was a nasty day."

That stormy evening now seems like a far away memory. The year-round club boasts 500 memberships, made up mainly of riders who enjoy cycling the quiet roads along the coast and further inland.

The major appeal, Grassi said, is the flexibility and variety of the club. There are rides of varied distances, at all levels of expertise. Because it is not a competitive club, riders can go at their own pace, taking in the scenery, and an occasional yard sale along the way. They don't have to worry about falling behind or feeling self-conscious.

"It's for people who enjoy riding their bike," said Grassi, "not for competition."

Club members meet at different locations each weekend for a ride through several South Shore towns. Riders are given maps and each course is marked for the bikers to follow.

The courses are as varied as the members of the group. One tour coming up is a loop-within-a-loop ride of 20 and 40 miles through Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield. Another tour will take members from North Scituate Village to Hull Gut. Riders can choose a 25- or 40-mile course on that day.

School signups set

The Cohasset Public Schools will hold registration for all new students entering the system from 9 am. to noon daily during the following dates: Tuesday, Aug. 24, through Thurs., Aug. 26.

You are urged to phone for an appointment to assist us in making the registration as smooth as possible.

Joseph Osgood School	Gr. K-3	383-6117

Engineers at work

The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset has requested the services of the Norfolk County Engineering Department.

The Norfolk County Commission comprised of Chairman William P. O'Donnell (Norwood), Bruce D. Olsen (Stoughton) and John M. Gillis (Quincy) voted to authorize a survey of traffic characteristics on various locations of Pond Street in Cohasset.

Work should commence in the next few weeks.

There will be no inconvenience to the motoring public as data is accumulated from pneumatic impulses in small rubber hoses across the highway which are then transformed by computer into usable tabulated printouts of the results.

Math computer lab

The school committee awarded a contract for a new math computer lab to NPC Corporation of Newton Center. With a bid of $40,149, NPC Corp. was the lowest of five bidders.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the schools already have NPC equipment and have always found NPC to be very responsive to service and maintenance needs.

The proposed system was reviewed by representatives of the math department and the Merrimack Valley Educational Center, a professional consultant, and was found to be satisfactory. Hart said about 75 percent of the cost of the new system will be paid for with a grant.

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Church presents Linda Kearns and her two children Jennifer and Nicholas Barnes with a Bible during the dedication ceremony at the Bates Building Saturday. More than 100 people took park in the ceremony which welcomed the Kearns family to their new home.

Habitat helps bring two families home . . .

who are frozen out of the home market because of income. To qualify for the housing a family must have a minimum income of $15,000 and, depending on family size, no more than about $28,000 in annual income. The organization guidelines require that families provide 500 hours in "sweat equity" toward their home.

Homes are sold at no profit and financed through low-interest mortgages. Payments on the mortgages are "recycled" as an on-going fund to help build more Habitat homes, which are built through donated labor. Some materials are donated and others are obtained at cost.

The organization formed in 1985 in Massachusetts and has 850 affiliates around the world.

The stage was set for the sale of the Bates Building, a town-owned building, to Habitat after town meeting passed a resolution endorsing the idea.

Habitat "purchased" the property from the town for $1 and began work renovating and converting the building last fall.

Habitat president Michael Keneally said the transformation of the building was "phenomenal."

Peter Madge accepts a Bible from the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's during the dedication ceremony at the Bates Building. The Elm Street location is now home for the Madges and Linda Kearns and her children. (Staff photos/J. Paul MacDonald)

Linda Kearns gets a hug from her nephew. Kearns and her kids will occupy the downstairs condominium. The Madges have the upstairs unit.

He said people from all walks of life ranging from engineers, electricians and architects to boy scouts and retirees joined in the effort.

Keneally said the need for affordable housing knows no boundaries.

"Even in a town as affluent as Cohasset the need for affordable housing is great," he said.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the dedication was an exciting day for Cohasset.

"This proves that Cohasset is not only a beautiful place to live but that it is a beautiful place emotionally as a caring group of people.

"..Thanks to Habitat for allowing us to be of service," she said.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said her Jewish father taught her the importance of the Ten Commandments, especially "love thy neighbor as thyself," she said.

"This is a great, great example," she said.

South Shore Habitat refurbishes existing structures or builds new homes. In 1992 the organization completed its first newly constructed home in Weymouth. Habitat renovations projects have been completed in Brockton, Carver, East Bridgewater, Kingston, Randolph and Marshfield. This year the organization begins construction of two new single family homes using land donated by the towns of Abington and Braintree. And the group also hopes to construct a new home on town donated land in Hingham in 1994.

Walk targets town's seafaring past . . .

'disincorporated' in 1946. The society's membership consisted of pure-blooded Azorian families who made their living in the fishing industry.

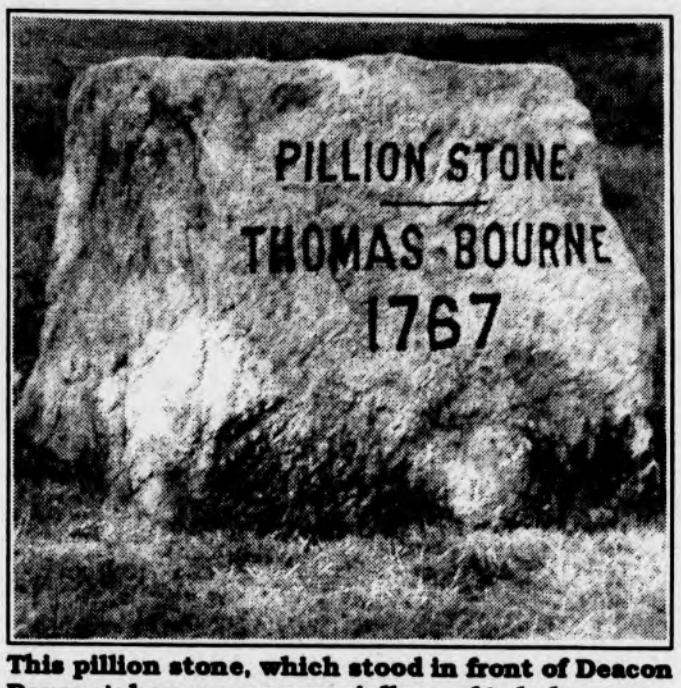
And Legion Hall was once the U.S. Customs House Port of Cohasset.

Where Kimball's now stands there once were a hmash of buildings including tin works, a pillow- ffing factory and a Chinese laundry.

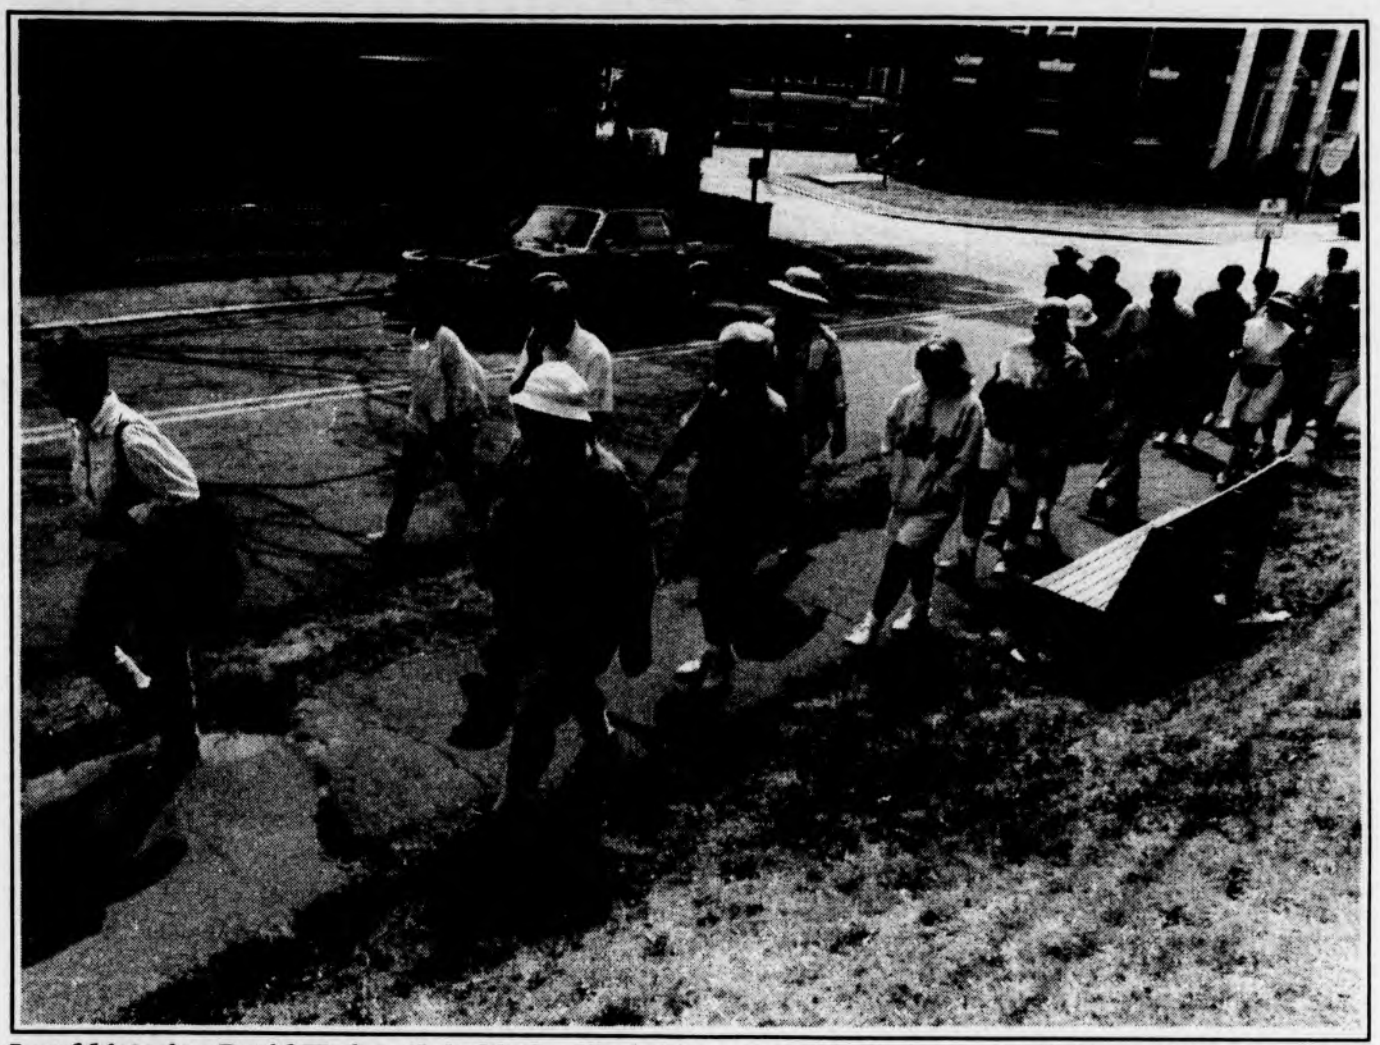
"There was nothing aesthetic about Cohasset Harbor 1-1/2 centuries ago," Wadsworth noted. "It was a working harbor — first, last and foremost."

Not only did the town's buildings have prior lives — but so did the town.

When Capt. John Smith came ashore in 1614, the area was considered North Virginia. He skirmished with the Algonquin Indians who called the area Quonahasset, meaning long, rocky place. 'Konohasset' as it was later spelled by settlers became part of East Hingham. The settlement broke away from Hingham in the early 1700s when it formed its own parish.



This pillion stone, which stood in front of Deacon Bourne's house, was especially used to help women riders mount the extra saddle on a horse. It is one of many historical points of interest along Elm St. (Staff photo/Mary Ford)



Local historian David Wadworth in his familiar white cap and half-glasses leads the walking tour along Ship Cove's Lane (now called Elm St.) Sunday. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Along the walk Wadsworth expounded on innumerable points of interest.

For those who would like to follow the 'Captain's Walk' without a formal tour maps are available at the Maritime Museum in the village which is open afternoons through the summer.

The second of the Historical Society's two summer walking tours gets underway at 2:30 p.m., Sunday Sept. 19 and will feature a tour of historic Cohasset Common and the center village. The tour will meet at 2:30 p.m. at the duck pond on the Common. There is no charge for the walking tour. For more information, please call 383-6930.

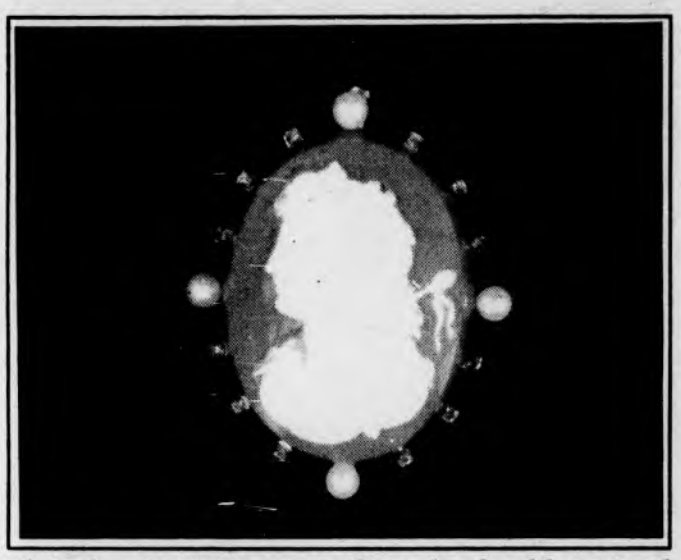
Estate jewelry captures charm of by-gone eras

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

You don't have to take Mark Cirone's word that estate or "used" jewelry is as beautiful now as it was many years ago.

You can see for yourself today through Saturday at Cohasset Jewelers in Tedeschi Plaza.

The annual "Estate Jewelry Event" runs from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. today and tomorrow and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.



Victorian @ 1880 cameo brooch of gold, natural pearl and diamonds.

Featured are one-of-a-kind rings, bracelets, brooches, earrings and more with prices starting at about $300.

This is the eighth annual estate jewelry sale hosted by the store, says co-owner Cirone.

But this year for the first time the jewelry store has teamed up with wholesaler Malcolm Logan, a Cohasset native, whose international jewelry business is based out of Portland, Maine.

Cirone says there's a "huge interest" in estate jewelry in the area.

"I can't get enough good things. I have 25 cards with requests for things I don't have," he says.

And Cirone says the attraction of estate jewelry is simple.

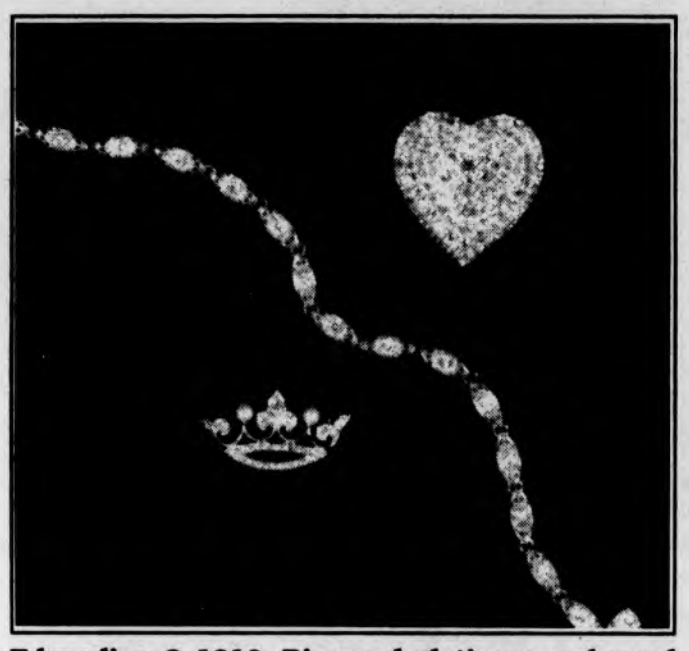
"Dollar for dollar the pieces have great value and they're not made like this anymore unless you go to Tiffany's.

"How many pieces of jewelry made today will last 75 to 100 years?" notes Cirone. "Items were often worn 20-to-40 years — they were made to last."

Most jewelry today is mass produced. That which is hand made is often exorbitantly priced because of labor costs.

The historical and artistic eras of estate jewelry range from 19th century Victorian to Art Deco in the 1920s and 30s and the Retro Art Moderne era of the 1940s.

Logan explains that estate jewelry has escaped the "crazy high" market that other art like paintings,



Edwardian @ 1910. Diamond platinum and pearl crown brooch to commemorate King Edward's coronation. Diamond and platinum filigree bracelet: pavé diamond and platinum heart brooch and locket.

furniture, and glass has attracted.

"It's appreciation has been a slow and steady climb so in a sense (estate jewelry) is still affordable," Logan says.

And because its used, antique and estate jewelry is exempt from the federal excise tax.

Cirone says the "character" of estate jewelry can be appealing.

"It has a uniqueness," he says. "It's like moving into a house that was built in 1689. It has character that something new just doesn't have."

Cirone says he tries to discourage customers from breaking apart an old piece of jewelry — like a brooch with 20 small diamonds — to create something new.

"It's a shame to destroy the craftsmanship," he says.

So he encourages his customers to do one of three things with their old jewelry.

"The best possible thing is to wear it — or give it to someone who's going to wear it — or sell it to me so I can sell it to someone else who'll enjoy it," he says.

❑ The Bill Malloy family has tons of news to share with us this week! Can you believe that Janet and Bill just became grandparents for the seventh time? This time the lucky parents are Bill Malloy Jr. and his wife Dianne. The brand new baby was born July 8, and her name is Kathryn Rose Malloy, who weighed in at 7 lb.s 9 oz. Of course Pearle Blevins of Cape May, NJ, is thrilled also. She is Kathryn's maternal grandmother. So is Auntie Ellen, she will probably have Kathryn on the golf course in an umbrella stroller, just to get her ready!!

We know everyone will love Kathryn to pieces, enjoy her!

And we have some great news about Auntie Ellen! Ellen Malloy was recently in The Women's Golf Association of Mass. Gold Tournament and won the Mildred Gardner Prunaret Cup. It was a three-day match-play tournament at Foxboro Country Club, flights being arranged by handicap. The first round she played Laurajean McDonald from Hatherly and Maureen Ramini from Salem Country Club, two and one; second round with Nancy Black and Melissa Browne of Cohasset Golf Club fame, two up; Finally, with Karen Richardson of Haverill Country Club and Debe Schwedler of Indian Orchard, after 20 holes!

Great going, Ellen, we'll bet you gave Kathryn a set of clubs for her "welcome to the world" present! And, we hope, free golf lessons for life! Continued success in your golfing, and please keep us informed!

❑ Aug. 14 the Fireman's Muster takes place, which includes a pancake breakfast on the common (8-10 a.m.), a parade from the Common to Milliken Field (10:30-11:30 a.m.) and the muster competition from noon to 5 p.m. Tons of food will be there, with the Second Congregational Church as the vendor.

There will be a dunk tank, operated by the Cohasset Fire Dept. Every kiddo will love it. Be sure it is among your summer plans!

Francis Mitchell, left, as we know him today, McCue and Ronald Hansen, who were all members of the same U.S. Army company during WWII, together again after 48 years!

That's Sgt. Francis Mitchell, left, and Sgt. John McCue on Tinian in the Mariana Islands in the South Pacific during World War II.

❑ News from Jessica Jenkins this week. After completing her fourth summer with Johns Hopkins Center for Talented Youth, Jessica is off to spend her junior year in the Abround Leysin American School in Switzerland!

What a great experience, and we surely hope that you will keep us informed of all the things that you experience, Jessica. Keep a daily journal!

❑ Polly Logan is at it again, this time she is part of "The Thursday Caucus", which will enlist, instruct and assist Republican women candidates. The first meeting is tonight (August 12) at 6:30 p.m. at Polly's home at 121 Nichols Road.

Senator Cile Hicks will be a special guest for the kick-off, other special guests will include leading women candidates and potential candidate for Attorney General, former Federal Prosecutor and Boston Attorney, Janis Berry. To join as a charter member call Jean Muir at 383-1850, it sure is a great opportunity to show that women can make a difference!

As Senator Hicks said, "women have been elected at the local, county, state and national levels and have shown they can make a difference in good government and hope Republicans can increase the number of women serving in the General Court as well as in Washington".

There is your challenge! Take a look at what Polly has done over the years, she is incredible!

❑ While we are on the subject of Polly Logan, she just attended the First Annual Conference for a Republican Majority at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington D.C. Mrs Wendell Ford, Polly, Martha Logan, and her niece and husband, Roberta and Jeb Collier, were all there, and had the grand privilege of viewing the exhibit of 80 famous French paintings from the Barnes Foundation of Philadelphia. They also had a special tour of the recently opened home and gardens of Tudor Place, in Georgetown, designed by Dr. William Thornton who did the Capitol for Thomas Peter and his wife, Martha Parke Custis, a granddaughter of Martha Washington. Completed in 1816 the house remained in the family until 1983.

There were a lot of guest speakers, and a lot of issues were discussed, ask Polly all about it! By the way; we are lucky to have such a lady in our town, take the time to tell her so.

❑ Remember the nice reunion that Fran Mitchell let us know about last week? Well, this week Fran was kind enough to share a "before and after" photo with us. Take a look at our loyal patriots in December of 1945 and today! We salute you!

❑ The University of Rhode Island sends news of two Cohassetites that graduated May 23, Christopher G. Froio with a degree in marketing and Jeffrey F. Lydon with a degree in Consumer Affairs. We hope your life in the business world goes smoothly for you both!

❑ Marquis Publishing Company has again announced Ellery Clark has made the 25th edition of Who's Who in the East. A member of the BoSox Club since 1975, this man of many activities just turned 84 and says, "We hope the Red Sox, after 75 years of failure, will become world champions (where they belong), and become the first American League team to go from last to first in successive seasons."

Mr. Clark recently volunteered for heart valve, stress, running and walking tests to further the knowledge of Deaconess Hospital cardiac specialist Geoffrey Topler, of Australia, who is doing a series of tests with prominent senior athletes, of whom Ellery is one. Mr. Clark stated, "with the recent death of Celtic's star Reggie Lewis, the motto of the famous Roxbury Latin School comes to mind, 'Mortui Vivos Docent'." What an inspiration to all of us!

❑ Bruce and Claire Williams were up for a short time, they were here for a family reunion. It is always so nice to see them, t.hey are such a warm pleasant couple! Plus, we have been friends for years and years, so we had a reunion also! Come back soon guys and stay longer!

obituaries

Ruth A. Pratt

Ruth A. (Jagger) Pratt, 87, of Santa Cruz, Calif., formerly of Cohasset, a free lance artist and designer of greeting cards for Rust Craft of Boston for many years, died July 29 in Santa Cruz.

She taught children's art classes in the early years of the South Shore Art Center and designed posters and brochures for many community groups.

She attended Second Congregational Church and was active in many community groups including the Amateur Garden Club, the Community Garden Club, the Social Service League, the Dramatic Club and the Historical Society.

Born in Sanford, Maine, where she graduated from high school, she attended Colby College and the Massachusetts School of Art, and lived in Cohasset 52 years.

Mrs. Pratt lived in Scott's Valley, Calif., from 1988 to 1990, and with her son, Joel S. Pratt, in Solebury, Penn., for two years, before returning to California last year.

She and her husband, Elmer H. Pratt, who died in 1986, were married 53 years.

Mrs. Pratt also leaves a daughter, Cynthia Pensinger of Santa Cruz; two sisters, Lois N. Daughtery of Naples, Fla., and Mildred H. Davies of San Diego, five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Arrangements for a memorial service are being made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Memorial gifts may be made to Second Congregational Church or the Cohasset Historical Society.

around town

❑ How nice it was, there was a benefit for Kathy Conte (who passed away after being hit by a truck last year) and her daughter now has a trust fund in her name. So many people bought tickets to see the Temptations and the Four Tops at the Music Circus, they all care about Melissa so much! We all care so much, it's a tragedy that we can only do our best to help. Our heartfelt thanks to all those who helped, and our hearts go out to Kathy's family.

❑ Colgate University is getting a real prize this fall, Michael Russell. Michael is the son of Michael and Jane Russell, and just graduated from Noble and Greenough School. He achieved high academic distinction for his final semester grades, was awarded the Bramhall-Bridge Purchase Prize for excellence in visual arts, and was selected for faculty commendation as a student who had contributed most to the school. Michael served as cartoonist for The Guardian Newspaper, one of two student-led newspapers at Nobles. He was also on the yearbook staff and that of the school's literary magazine, Calliope. Mike competed with the Nobles Varsity Ski Team as well.

Good luck at Colgate University, Mike, keep us up-to-date on your endeavors there!

❑ Give a hearty welcome to John Gerald O'Donnell, son of Dean and Michael O'Donnell, born July 15 and weighing in at 10 pounds! We know his sister, Catherine, who is 3-1/2 years old, will be a huge help to her brother and Mom. Let us know all about it!

❑ That's the news from here, please let me know about you and yours!

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
HOW MUCH WILL BANK LEND?
QUESTION: My family income is $30,000 a year. How much of a mortgage can I expect a bank to lend me?
ANSWER: If you go by the rule-of-thumb guidelines (25%-28% of gross income), you would normally expect to pay up to a limit of $625 per month on your mortgage. But this is a very rough rule of thumb. You may qualify for more or less depending on other variables.
There is more than your income to consider. What is your past credit history? What amount of debt do you now owe? What is the appraised value of the property? The mortgage decision will be based on the COMBINATION of all the factors.

A school for Caring

The Saturday dedication ceremony of the Bates Building in Cohasset as condominium homes for two families was a time of remembering.

Mary Jeanette Murray recalled that the building was where her mother had gone to school. I remember one night years ago sitting upstairs for a planning board meeting in which the subject of affordable housing was discussed. Two others saw the day as the culmination of 20 years of concern for affordable housing in Cohasset.

Of all the memories, it is that of a school house that has stayed with me. For in a great sense the work that went into renovating the Bates Building was a little school for caring. It was caring that Michael Keneally, President of South Shore Habitat for Humanity, emphasized as he spoke of the efforts of so many in Cohasset to transform the Bates Building into the Kearns' and Madge's home.

The town was schooled in caring as two consecutive town meetings endorsed the use of the Bates Building for affordable housing. Caring residents over three years shepherded the dream of affordable housing taking it first to town clergy, then to the selectmen, to town meeting, and finally seeing it brought to fruition through the auspices of Habitat for Humanity, an ecumenical, non-profit housing ministry "concerned with decent housing for God's people in need."

Thirty-six churches sent work crews to renovate the building, sometimes working in winter cold. First Parish and St. Stephen's sent a combined team, and working hand-in-hand with one another the members of both churches learned much about caring. All together nearly 5,000 volunteer hours were given, not to mention companies that contributed time, materials and equipment, and expertise. Boy Scouts organized the beautiful landscaping of the property. Hundreds of people in so many ways took part in this little school of caring to provide housing for families who needed it.

Lynda Kearns who has purchased one of the condominiums spoke of this day as the culmination of a four year goal to find an affordable home for herself and her children, Jennifer and Nicholas. Her tears were of joy and caring as this goal of hers was fulfilled. Peter Madge who with his wife Tracy purchased the other condominium spoke of providing a normal home for their children Justin, Michelle, and Kaley. They all were full partners in this little school of caring.

Schooled in caring by this project that has brought so many together to make a home for two wonderful families, what is next? It has been one of my sorrows as a priest to see parish families leave town because they could not afford to live here. The number of families who applied for the two units of housing was 30, well in excess of what was available. The need for affordable housing is demonstrable, and the need for care unquestionable. There is much yet to be done.

Whereas many years ago children went to the Bates Building to learn the three R's, today we have gone there to learn a lesson in caring.

Eating disorders can strike anyone

Eating disorders, mainly anorexia nervosa and bulimia, are just beginning to get the public's attention as a major health problem of our society in the 90's. Television, magazines, and movies all flood us with images of people with slender bodies.

The "happy, fulfilled people" are those with thin, trim, well-exercised bodies, while the "fat" people are the miserable, dateless, unsatisfied ones who console themselves with food.

Teenagers seem especially susceptible to this "media blitz" of beautiful bodies, but even pre-teen girls can be affected and develop severe eating disorders. Boys and young men are not immune to the "thin is beautiful" campaign and, especially if involved in sports that require maintaining a certain weight can fall prey to both anorexia and bulimia.

Anorexia is more common in women than men, but it does occur in both sexes. People with anorexia have an intense fear of gaining weight. They think they look fat, or that parts of their bodies look fat even though they appear underweight to others. They usually don't eat much though they are preoccupied with food. They may exercise frequently, even excessively, and seem to be over-controlled and try to be perfect in everything.

Bulimia is characterized by periodic over-eating or "bingeing." Bingeing is eating large amounts of food in a short amount of time. Sometimes self-induced vomiting, laxatives, rigorous dieting, exercise, or fasting are used to counteract the effects of binge eating. People with bulimia may maintain normal weight, may not appear to be underweight, and may be overweight. Sometimes people with anorexia may also have bulimia.

Studies estimate that 20 percent of all young women have abnormal eating disorders severe enough to require treatment. While the majority are women, an increasing number of men have recognized their problem and are getting help. Depending on the study between 15 to 18 percent of people who suffer from eating disorders die from them.

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia can be treated successfully. Families can be helped too. Consultation with trained professionals for both the person with the disorder and his/her family is usually needed to overcome and successfully treat the problem.

If you or anyone you know have symptoms of an eating disorder and you want more information on where to turn for help, you may call Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N., Board of Health nurse at the Social Service League office 383-0771 or 383-0821.

GOP recruits women

Senator Lucile P. Hicks of Wayland and the Glades in Scituate will kick off a new group, "The Thursday Caucus," which will enlist, instruct and assist Republican women candidates Thursday, August 12, at 6:30 p.m. at the home of Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset.

Other special guests will include leading women candidates and potential candidate for Attorney General, former State Prosecutor, Janis Berry, a Boston attorney.

To join as a charter member and to attend the buffet all interested women should call Laura DeLuse of Hanover, 871-1523; Jean Muir of Cohasset, 383-1850; Doris Stalker of Duxbury, 934-6864; Joanne Montouris Nikitas of Plymouth, 508-746-8995; Judy Lawton of Norwood, 762-8715; Julie Maguire of Hingham, 749-7423; Michele Crage Carter of Dover, 508-785-2284 or Polly Logan of Cohasset, 383-0031.

Senator Hicks said women have been elected at the local, county, state and national levels and have shown they can make a difference in good government and hopes Republicans can increase the number of women serving in the General Court as well as in Washington.

Campaign finance reform

Wednesday, Aug. 18, at 7:30 p.m., Common Cause will be hosting a meeting at the Hingham Public Library for all Hingham, Hull and Norwell Common Cause members as well as anyone interested in campaign finance reform.

Sara Greendlinger, Assistant Director for Common Cause Massachusetts, will discuss efforts being made by Common Cause members across the state to diminish the influence of special interests.

Common Cause is seeking volunteers to serve as town coordinators and signature gatherers as Common Cause gears up for its petition drive to collect 100,000 signatures necessary to put a strong campaign finance reform proposal on the ballot. Campaign finance reform will curb the excess influence peddling that dominates Beacon Hill. The efforts of local residents will be crucial for the success of this drive. For further information call Common Cause at 617-426-9600.

Antique quilts help shape future for Cohasset mother

By Joanne Markow
Special to the Mariner

For Penny Redfield of Cohasset, quilts are more than just a sewing hobby, they are a link to the past.

A masters student at Simmons College in Boston, Redfield studies antique quilts in hopes of reviving the lost identities of the women who made them.

"It's a matter of finding the threads that have been c[illegible]dered insignificant and overlooked, and 'sewing' them back together into a piece of fabric that gives life back to these women," she said.

This project is one of several Redfield is working on in an effort to raise people's awareness of women's forgotten achievements. During her research, Redfield came across two album quilts belonging to the Cohasset Historical Society's collection.

"As a piece of local history, they're invaluable because they have all the names of the founding families included on them. A story even evolved from these two quilts that reflected a schism that occurred between the two churches," she said.

"It's really incredible to see how a bunch of rotting fabric could tell so much history. I seem to be able to follow the threads and find the stories, which is exciting," she added.

The more research Redfield does about historical women, the more confidence she gains in shaping her own identity. According to Redfield, it is difficult to balance her roles as mother, student and career woman. But like so many women of the '90s, she thinks it is well worth the effort.

"In my era growing up, the goal was for us to get married and have children and be home. And that worked for a while," she said. But women are asking even more of themselves now. "It's a real juggling act. And it's hard, but it's essential."

Redfield began the juggling roles in the early '80s when she returned to college after being a full-time homemaker and mother for 15 years. She delayed going back to school until her youngest child was in first grade, eventually enrolling in art history courses at Simmons.

Despite the hectic schedule, in 1986 Redfield graduated with distinction from Simmons College with a degree in art history. For the next five years, she continued a challenging schedule balancing full-time jobs with her responsibilities at home.

In 1991, she returned to Simmons to learn more about women's history and to earn a master's degree in liberal studies.

"I chose the liberal studies masters program because of the flexibility it offered, and because I was not terribly focused as to what I wanted to do," she said.

Penny Redfield of Cohasset examines an antique quilt, a masters student at Simmons College in Boston. Redfield studies antique quilts in hopes of reviving the lost identities of the women who made them. (Photo by Joanne Markow)

But as a co-worker once told her, "There are two ways to come back to school. Either you come back with an incredible sense of focus, or you just come back and follow your heart." Redfield chose the second option, saying, "If you love what you take [for classes], everything will fit together."

When Redfield isn't "following threads," she is working as the department assistant and assistant curator in the Art and Music department at Simmons. On weekends, she manages to squeeze in homework since weekdays are so busy. She said, "I just go home and feed everybody, and deal with what crises may have occurred that day."

Her son Benjamin, 16, is living at home, while Sophie, 20, is at the University of Pittsburgh, and Alexandra, 22, is in New York, after graduating from N.Y.U.

Redfield admits there are still days where she is stretched to the limit, but she has managed to balance her schedule. "For a long time I thought I should be able to do it all. I should be making those cookies as well as writing 15 papers and driving carpools. But I can buy cookies now. It's okay."

Simmons College is a private, nonsectarian institution for undergraduate women and graduate men and women. The college was founded at the turn of the century through the will of a Boston businessman who believed that women should be prepared for lifelong careers in the world of work and human affairs. Simmons' excellent reputation has consistently earned the college a place in U.S. News and World Report's annual survey of "America's Best Colleges."

Joanne Markow is a senior at Simmons College concentrating in communications and arts administration.

Community Lights

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society is making an urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

"Many of our volunteer drivers are on vacation at this time and at the same time we have had more than the usual number of calls for rides to daily treatments at hospitals," said Susan McVeigh, Cohasset chair of the Service Committee of the Unit . "We don't want to turn down any requests because many of the patients have no other way to get to their appointments. The treatment programs often require them to go daily for five to seven weeks."

The Service Committee has at times provided as many as 105 free rides in a week, serving eight-to-ten patients a day. Although at peak times there are some 75 drivers available, many are limited as to times and locations in being able to drive.

Volunteers are asked to pledge only one trip per month scheduled at their convenience and are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

"Volunteers invariably find these missions rewarding, the patients are interesting new friends and are tremendously grateful," McVeigh notes.

• Susan DiPesa is still looking for assistance with designing and maintaining the island and the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A. Let's get this Cohasset gateway island looking great! If you can help please leave your name and phone number at the selectmen's officer (383-9900) and Susan will get back to you.

• There are two vacancies on the Regional Refuse Disposal Committee. Interested citizens should contact the town moderator through the town clerk's office by calling 383-9900.

• Anyone, who has trade skills, willing to donate their time and/or simply wants to physically help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Renovation Project, please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505.

• The American Cancer Society needs volunteers to organize walkers, work on logistics, and help along the five-mile route for Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, a walk to benefit the American Cancer Society, Sunday, Sept. 26 on Boston's Esplanade. Call Rita Pastore at 1-800-952-7430.

• Although the following town committees do not currently have openings, any citizen interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office and you will be contacted when an opening comes up: by-law committee, cultural exchange committee, design review board, registrars of voters, public works garage study committee, South Shore Regional School District Committee, computer study committee, conservation commission, water resources protection committee, Straits Pond committee, Wompatuck State Park advisory council, historic commission, recycling committee, cemetery study committee, 911 committee, council on aging, drug and alcohol committee, arts lottery council, housing partnership committee, insurance advisory committee, handicapped commission, Cohasset Common historic district commission, regional refuse disposal planning committee, capital budget committee, public safety study committee, solid waste study committee, solid waste committee, regional school district planning committee, and Title 5 transition committee. All applications will be kept on file in the selectmen's office.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• Compassionate human services professionals and other caring special persons needed to volunteer as facilitators for self-help parents' groups in the Weymouth area. These groups provide support for parents under stress who want to improve their relationships with their children. One evening a week commitment. Training and support provided. Call 337-7916 or 1-800-882-1250.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

paul pratt library corner

— Who was Paul Pratt anyway? —

By John Hartshorne
Special to the Mariner

Almost everybody knows Cohasset's library was built as a memorial to Paul Pratt. But who was Paul Pratt? How did he come to have his name carved in stone over the door?

The record is spare but clearly indicates that our library memorializes, not a person of great wealth, but of humble beginnings, initiative and hard work, careful saving and economical living, and farsighted community spirit.

Paul Pratt was born in Cohasset in 1788. He was a sixth-generation descendent of Phineas Pratt, the first of the name to come to this country from England in 1623 and ancestor of most of the many Pratts who live in this area still. Some time in his teens, Paul Pratt went to Boston to learn the trade of house carpenter and apprenticed under one Joseph Eustis. At 21, he married Anne Eustis, the boss' daughter. For the next 25 years, he lived and worked in Boston, where all of his six children were born, two of whom lived only four years. It was the illness of another child, daughter Harriot [Sic], that brought him back to Cohasset in 1831, when it appears he gave up the house carpentry business and opened a small store on South Main Street. About the year 1848, he built the house he lived in for the rest of his life, and his two daughters for the rest of theirs. It stood — and still stands — at 190 South Main Street.

Paul Pratt was a leading citizen of the town. He was one of the three founders of the Cohasset Savings Bank and was elected its first president in 1845. A member of the school committee for several years, he served in 1838 on a special committee that recommended the establishment of Cohasset's first high school. He was a member of the Unitarian parish and is described by persons who knew him as "...a man without ambition for public office, temperate in his habits, frugal in his living, neat in his appearance, and systematic and straightforward in his dealings." He died in Cohasset Aug. 31, 1853, at age 62.

Paul Pratt left an estate of something less than $20,000 — with, according to persons in a position to know, the expressed desire that if there was any surplus after his direct descendents had been provided for, it should go for a library in Cohasset to be called by his name.

Sarah Sigourney was a founding member of the board of trustees of the library.

Harriot Eustis directed half her estate to maintain the library.

Shrewd investments by the estate's trustees increased the legacy more than fourfold over the succeeding 50 years.

During these years, daughters Sarah Sigourney and Harriot Eustis, both spinsters, lived on in the South Main Street house, frugally and well within their income. Both were interested and active in literary and library affairs, Sarah serving as a trustee of the Cohasset Free Public Library from its founding in 1879 until her death in 1896.

Harriot survived her sister by two years. Loyally carrying out her father's wish, her will directed that half her estate, amounting to $35,000, be given to a seven-member Board of Trustees "...for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a Public Library in the Town of Cohasset, to be known as the Paul Pratt Memorial Library."

In a report to Town Meeting, the committee to select a site for the new library said:

The legacy of thirty-five thousand dollars bequeathed by Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt is the largest sum of money ever left for public benefit in this town, and your committee has endeavored to select a place of becoming dignity for so valuable a gift.

Sites were proposed on the Common and on Ripley Road, but the one selected (the present South Main Street location) was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Thomas Snow. Mr. Snow had just been elected first president of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. His mother, Betsey Pratt Snow, was Paul Pratt's sister.

As an interesting footnote, Samuel Snow's father was born, in 1790, Salvadore Sabate y Morell, at Villaseca, Tarragona, Spain. He is said to have taken the name Snow from the Cohasset-based ship captain who brought him to this country. Later to become a "Master Mariner" himself, he lost his life at sea in 1825.

First-year swim coach teaches the technique for success

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cathy Vaughn was sitting on a wooden bench at the town pool last Thursday afternoon after just having finished refereeing a pick-up water polo game.

As the first-year Cohasset Swim Team coach watched over the new group of kids splashing in the pool, two young members of the swim team approached her and thanked Vaughn for the help she gave them during the season. The two girls then presented their coach with a "Thank You" card, a small back of candy that read "Coach" on the side, and a handsome wreath, decorated with periwinkles.

Vaughn a former Bridgewater State College swimmer was moved by the graciousness of the two girls. But that's not surprising. She completely enjoyed season No. 1 in Cohasset. Fun was too weak a word to describe coaching the 130-member squad. "Awesome" was Vaughn's word of choise.

"At the beginning of the summer it was a change for them," said Vaughn.

What Vaughn saw in her swimmers was a group willing to commit themselves to an exhausting sport, on top of other obligations. Many of the younger kids were involved in Little League and other summer sports. The older kids had jobs, forcing them to plan their workouts in the pool accordingly. There wasn't a day this summer when swim-team members weren't at the pool early in the morning or later at night. Vaughn was impressed with their tenacity.

"Man, they stuck with it and dug down deep. They've done well.

"They're very coachable and trainable. I think people in general like discipline in their lives. I demand a lot from these kids.

"We stressed on them how the sport is individual and to look at how are they doing week-to-week as swimmers."

Vaughn may have demanded a lot from her team, which was 4-1 heading into last Friday's final South Shore League meet against Hanover, but more importantly, she wanted to make sure the kids felt good about themselves and develop a love for the sport the way she has since her high-school days in Pennsylvania.

"No matter what the level or ability of the swimmer, I want them to swim for the rest of their life," she said. "It's such a healthy sport. It's really the fitness aspect of it.

"For as small a town as this is, there's huge depth. There's a large population that swims.

"I like to have kids find comfort with it and not struggle with the sport."

What Cohasset has come up with in Vaughn is a professional coach committed to teach her swimmers the proper stroke techniques and more than willing to help them reach their full potential.

"The hydrodynamics of swimming is what I'm really into," Vaughn said. "In order for these kids to get fast, they have to improve their technique. If they improve their technique, the speed will come."

During the first half of the season, half of each training session concentrated on technique. Work on technique, at any level, never stops and is probably the most important aspect of training for every swimmer. Olympic swimmers, Vaughn says, never stop perfecting their techniques, noting that roughly half of their daily workouts are dedicated to improving their form in the pool.

Vaughn has seen dramatic improvement in several of her swimmers. Three girls who swim in the 8-and-

Bike club has something for everyone

On August 28 the group will put on a "Tour of Ponds and Swimming Holes" day, beginning at Clear Pond Park in Lakeville. The bikers will pass by several popular swimming spots in this quiet, Southeastern Mass., town. The following day a "Show and Go" ride will take place. Members gather at a designated spot and discuss where they want to ride on that particular afternoon. There is no set agenda and riders often break off into different groups to tour separate courses.

The "Rockland Romp" has been scheduled for September 5. The 29-mile course will take riders through the back roads of Rockland, Hanover, Hanson and Halifax. Routes along the South Shore are limitless.

"The rides are there for people who want to do them," Grassi said.

Of course, the best time of year for biking is when the weather turns cooler in the fall. But when the temperature drops even lower during the winter months, many of the members dress accordingly and continue their weekend constitutionals. Grassi said when there is snow on the ground he simply switches over to his mountain bike, which provides better traction over the white stuff. Club members often stop for a cup of coffee and a snack during their rides. They tend to stop more in the winter.

"If it's really cold we stop at a lot of coffee shops," Grassi said with a laugh. Rides during the winter run from 20-30 miles at the most.

Despite the name of the club, the bikers often ride on the North Shore and Western Mass. They are invited by other clubs to bike with them on different routes around the state. Those bikers also take advantage of the beautiful scenery the South Shore has to offer. Many non-members may see a ride that especially appeals to them and tag along with the club for the afternoon.

That's the beauty of the bike club. No one is turned away. Now what can be more appealing than that?

Welcome to the First Annual Extra Points Best and Worst List. (Okay, we know Boston Magazine does the same thing but we checked with author Joe McGuiness and he said we could use other people's idea and not get in too much trouble).

Best South Shore Professional Athlete: Pembroke's Kevin Stevens. He is a two-time 50 goal scorer and helped the Pittsburgh Penguins win the Stanley Cup in '91 and '92. Many consider him one of the best left wings ever to play in the NHL. Plus he is a nice person who plays many local charity golf events during the summer.

Close second: Jeremy Roenick, Chicago Black Hawk center from Marshfield who also scored 50 goals in each of the last two seasons.

Worst South Shore Pro Athlete: Brockton's Marvelous Marvin Hagler. After a glorious career in the ring, he was convicted of punching out a woman a couple years ago. And just last month, he was arrested after he refused to take to take a breathalyzer test. Nice going Marvin. What a role model.

Best South Shore High School Athlete: Silver Lake's Amy King. Not only is she an all-star and dominant player on both the basketball court and the softball field, she is ranked second in her class and recently attended the World Scholar Athlete Games in Newport, Rhode Island.

Worst South Shore High School Athlete: Any student who gets booted off a team for bad grades or bad behavior.

Best South Shore Golf Course Open to Public: Green Harbor in Marshfield. Nice long-distance course with a no-cart rule that makes people actually get some exercise.

Worst South Shore Public Golf Course: President's in Quincy. Too many guys with hairy backs. And if you're not careful you could be chipping from Route 3.

Best South Shore Private Golf Course: We wouldn't know. Check with someone named "Biff" or "Skippy."

Best South Shore Hockey Rink: Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. Nice snack bar and everything is kept neat and clean.

Worst South Shore Hockey Rink: The Rockland Rink. It's more like a shed than a hockey rink. And the food at the snack bar tastes like a hockey puck.

Best Place to Jog or Bike on the South Shore: Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. Great scenery and you can hear the birds chirp as you feel the burn.

Close second: World's End in Hingham.

Worst Place to Jog or Bike on the South Shore: Anywhere on Route 53. You take your life into your hands just getting behind the wheel. Anyone foolish enough to bike or run on that road should be sent to the Pembroke Hospital.

Best Sports Media Personality from the South Shore: Hingham's Sean McDonough. He's young, smart, funny and is a great announcer. Plus he is one of the nicest guys you'll ever meet.

Baseball camp was resounding success

Ideal weather greeted 98 area youngsters attending the Cohasset Recreation Commission's annual summer instructional baseball camp for five to 18 year-olds that was held June 28 through July 2 at Miliken Field, according to Commission Director Jack Worley, who reports it was a resounding success.

"We offered a half-day schedule for youngsters five and six years of age again this year to accommodate the ever growing number of parents who want to get their youngsters involved in an organized program at an earlier age," Worley explained. "We had 55 youngsters in that age group this year and the half-day schedule seemed to be just right for them.

"This was our fifth baseball camp in as many summers and the fourth year that the SSBC has run the program," Jack continued. "We started out with 30 campers the first year and have continued to grow each and every year since, which is quite an accomplishment given the economy of the past few years. I think it's a tribute to Frank Niles and his staff who are very well organized and have a great rapport with the youngsters. All of the parents seemed to be very pleased with the conduct and content of this year's camp," Worley concluded, "so we look forward to holding it again next year."

under division, for example, have dropped their times a combined 36 seconds for one lap.

At the beginning of the season they all struggled to make one length of the pool. Now they are able to do 10 laps just warming up for a workout.

"That's phenomenal," Vaughn said. "That's huge."

Vaughn didn't learn to coach through "how to" books found on the sports shelf of any book store. She is a seasoned swimmer herself and has applied the lessons she has learned in high school and college to better her own swimmers. In high school she swam seven hours a day.

"I was breathing the stuff," Vaughn said.

As captain of the B.S.C. swim team Vaughn qualified for the New England Championships three times and the Division 3 Easterns once in the Butterfly and Distance Freestyle, her two best events.

Vaughn also got into coaching the now defunct Marshfield Makos, while attending Bridgewater. She knew immediately it was something she eventually wanted to give more time to. First, however, there was a five-year stint working in the brokerage business. Vaughn started getting antsy to get back in the pool and began competing as a master.

Four years ago she became a certified N.C.A.A. and M.I.A.A. referee and judge for both diving and swimming and began to work several championship meets. Two years later Vaughn helped coach swimmers at the Weymouth Tennis and Athletic Club. She realized there was a high percentage of kids taking swimming lessons and "coming up through the ranks" who wanted to compete. Vaughn met their needs by starting a developmental swim team, which has between 70 and 80 kids on the roster, four seasons a year.

Cohasset will be sending 22-30 swimmers, ranging from ages 6-17 to the All-Star meet, August 14, at Wheaton College. The meet represents a major change in that it is usually held at pool of the host team. Cohasset is the host team this year, but Vaughn sees nothing but positives with the change of location.

"They're in a fast pool and hopefully they'll get their best times of the year," she said. "What we gain from it is huge. It even gives the kids who didn't make the team something to strive for. It hopefully emulates what swimming is all about."

That and Vaughn's attitude toward the sport.

Taylor leads All-Stars past Braintree

Greg Taylor of Cohasset's Williamsport Tournament Team struck out 13 Braintree American batters while allowing just one hit. He also walloped two home runs to lead Cohasset to a 10-0 victory over much heralded and previously unbeaten Braintree American. Pre-game prognosticators had given Braintree American the edge because of their home field advantage. Cohasset supporters eliminated any such advantage when they turned out in large numbers to back the team. The 8 p.m. start time permitted other Cohasset teams playing earlier games to come to the field. Coach Bill Baird's 12-year-old team was there to root on their classmates and friends. Jay Caron's 10-year-old team watched the two Gregs, Taylor and Bilton, hit back-to-back home runs while they dreamed of their own home runs to come.

Cohasset pounded out 10 hits, ran the bases aggressively, and played error-free baseball, while continuing to stun tournament participants with tremendous displays of team power and speed.

Cohasset has averaged more than nine runs a game while giving up zero runs, and yielding only two hits in total.

By the time this article is printed Cohasset will have played Rockland in another battle of unbeaten teams.

Cohasset clinches District Summer League title

Cohasset's 12-year-olds beat Braintree American 8-2 last Monday night in Stoughton to win the District Summer League championship. Greg Taylor finished off his Little League career with another outstanding pitching performance.

Taylor had the gloves to back him up as his teammates played flawless baseball in the field. Steve Baker, Ted Goff and Mike Rossi snagged everything catchable in the outfield. Ben Roine, Alex Schwerin, Matt Lewis and Jim O'Sullivan anchored the infield and Greg Bilton was rock solid behind the plate. Rossi and Schwerin turned in particularly impressive games. Schwerin made some key plays at shortstop. Rossi not only fielded well, he clobbered the ball with the bat. His two-out double with the bases loaded in the third, broke the game open and his solo home run in the fifth capped Cohasset's scoring for the summer with a dramatic touch. Jim O'Sullivan provided some drama of his own when he drove in three in the fourth with a two-out bases-loaded triple.

O'Sullivan also turned in a solid pitching performance in the semi-final game against North Randolph played last Sunday. He went the distance in Cohasset's 10-3 win. O'Sullivan struggled in the first inning, surrendering two runs, then just got stronger as the game progressed. Steve Baker doubled home two in the second to give Cohasset the lead and the momentum which led to the 10-run explosion. Over the last two games, Taylor was a scoring machine. He came to bat seven times and scored six runs. Bilton followed close behind, scoring four times after reaching base with two doubles and two singles.

Earlier on Sunday, Norwood tournament officials awarded Taylor the trophy as Cohasset's Most Valuable Player. This was the second year in a row that Taylor has won the award. Cohasset bowed out of the Norwood Tournament after losing their opening series to Needham. With seven games in five days, the Cohasset pitching staff sorely missed Matt Lewis who began the summer season by dominating Hanover and then injured his arm in his second outing which ended his pitching for the summer. He still burned up the summer season with a hot bat and game after game was one of Cohasset's most consistent hitters.

Saturday night's win over Whitman is the game that sealed Cohasset's first-place finish and the playoff berth that led to the championship. Justin Golden's outstanding relief effort sealed the Cohasset victory by a two-run margin. Golden struck out the last Whitman batter to end the game, leaving two Whitman runners stranded at second and third base.

The championship victory was all the more special because Cohasset played with only nine players. Ben Smoot, Mark Equi, Denis Rooney, Justin Golden, Jamie DeMichele, Eric Hanian and Kyle Bunstein, all of whom made substantial contributions to the team throughout the summer, missed the game due to illness, injury or summer camp commitments.

The team sends its thanks to League President John Carr for the support and the hard work. Special thanks to the parents who visited the many Little League fields of Eastern Massachusetts in good humor, and to the players' younger siblings who tagged along and always cheered for Cohasset.

The fish story: Sox and fishing

By Mark Trask
Special to the Mariner

"The fish are biting, the Sox are winning, can you ask for anything more?" commented a fishing mom while her young angler buzzed around the shop, collecting sure-fire lures.

Dave Guerrero has Hunters Pond down pat. The baking hot weather and steadily receding water has combined to drive the pond into its original creek bed.

Dave reports catching a nice largemouth this week and lost a huge catfish right at the shore at his feet!

Other ponds on the South Shore are showing the effects of this relatively rainless summer, notably Brushy Hill Reservoir in Scituate.

While Mo Vaughn has been launching baseballs out of Fenway Park, local anglers have been hauling fish into their boats and onto the beach after dark.

Gerry Belsan of Scituate, creator of the Belsan's Eel striper lure, caught blues and stripers on a recent trip.

Leonard Roll described chancing upon a large school of blues a mile and one-half off Scituate Harbor. Action was fast and furious as those who have been there know.

The next day, the school was nowhere to be found though others tangled with hefty blues near Flat Ledge. Across the bay at Ptown, Rich Chute dragged a Storm Lure with Rich Knapp in an effort to duplicate Knapp's Governor's Cup success. A bluefish close to 18 pounds was the result of their trolling. On this side they latched onto 12 blues, the largest estimated at 12 pounds.

Hardings Ledge was the scene of frustration for Sean Cunning as a huge fish grabbed his bait and began a violent fight. The rod broke and line snapped shortly afterwards and Sean was left with that sinking feeling knowing that he had the fish of a lifetime on moments before.

The wind came out of the northwest and pushed up waves for several days. Fishing improved markedly. Larger blues began to take the baits of local stripermen. Bill Jackson now leads the Bigfish Tournament with a 16-pound blue he took on his tube and worm rig. Bill reports striper action is better than the last couple weeks. Ted Abbadessa checked in with a 14-pound, 4-ounce blue taken in the Black Rock area on a cut pogie.

Others tangling with blues include Tim Farrell at Cohasset and Brian Kenerson at Brown's Bank off Plymouth Beach. Mike Cullity of Abington connected with a 12-pound, 11-ounce chopper on a trolled plug near the H Buoy.

After the wind blew up, stripers streamed to the official scale at the shop. Jim Hobbes' mackerel chunk fed a 22-pound lineside. Rory MacDonald of Scituate has found success at the North River Bridge. An 18-pound, 14-ounce bass whacked his pogie chunk.

Dave Leahy, Chris Rolandelli and Nick Welz fished under Mill Bridge at Cohasset Harbor and Dave came away with a 21-pound, 13-ounce keeper amongst a raft of smaller fish.

Scituate's Jay Graham fooled his with a seaworm near Little Hogshead. Mike Daly tubed two keepers on separate trips to the Egypt Beach area. Ken Fantasia came down from the roof long enough to visit Plymouth Beach and reel in a 38-inch chunker that tipped the scale at 25 pounds.

Dave Murphy and crew provided nice bluefish fillets for the food pantry at the Second Congregational Church. The benevolent bluefishermen were participating in the Cohasset Yacht Club's annual tournament. Top honors went to Linton Young's 14-pound fish. Dave entertained Cohasset firefighter Jim Runey and his son, Justin, the following day and they got into a major league school of blues east of Minot's Light.

Justin hauled in four big blues to start his fishing career. Paul Laugelle and Bob Silvia found the same school and cranked fish until their arms were ready to fall off.

Let's go fishing!

Academy adds Chi Kung

Visiting Tai Chi and Chi Kung master Wei Lun Huang has been scheduled in a return visit for two workshops focusing on Chi Kung (internal energy practice). The Chi Kung workshop, for which no previous experience is necessary, will be held Friday, Sept. 10, from 7 to 9 p.m. The cost is $50. This workshop is beginner level and open to the public.

Sept. 11 and 12, Master Huang will teach part one of the rare Liu He Ba Fa form, which blends the distinguishing features of China's three internal treasures, Hsing I, Ba Gua, and Tai Chi. Previous martial arts experience is recommended. The cost is $145. Pre-registration is recommended. For further information, call John Loupos at WLA in Cohasset, 383-6822.

This is how a fireman's muster works

Musters originated when two handtubs were located sufficiently close to permit their volunteer crews to argue about which was better.

According to tradition, the first formal Firemen's Muster was held in Bath, Maine July 4, 1849. Originally, the winning handtub was the one which pumped the highest stream, but measurement was difficult and disputes were numerous. The rules were changed to the current format: the object is to pump a stream the longest horizontal distance.

The New England States Veteran Firemen's League, the governing body for today's competition, was formed in Boston in November, 1890.

All engines must have been built prior to January 1, 1896 and must have worked at least one fire.

There are two classes: Class A engines have cylinders with a diameter of seven inches or more: Class B engines have cylinders with A diameter of less than seven inches. The pumping handles are called brakes. All Class A engines in competition today have brakes on the sides; All Class B engines in competition today have brakes on the front and back.

Each engine has 15 minutes on the pumping platform. Each team may pump as many streams as they wish, but most pump about three streams. The longest drop of each stream that lands on the paper is measured to the nearest 1/4 inch. The longest stream is the official score for the engine.

The action takes place in three places. You are urged to watch the activity at each venue. The Engine Platform is where the pumping occurs. Forty or more men may pump on a Class B engine; more than 60 men may pump on Class A engine. While in action, the handtubs develop water pressure approximating 200 pounds per square inch. Water is drafted from a tank connected to a hydrant and played through 150 feet of fire hose.

At the end of the hose is the Pipe Platform. Here a crew directs the stream through a nozzle or play pipe. Each team has its own play pipe, and they reflect important concepts of fluid dynamics. Directing the stream requires great skill: a one inch movement of the play pipe moves the stream over five feet 200 hundred feet away.

Streams are measured at the Paper Platform. Sheets of building paper are laid on a platform that is eight feet wide. It begins 100 feet from a straight edge on the pipe platform and extends to a distance of 290 feet from that straight edge. Only drops of water that land on the paper are measured. There have been many instances in which musters have been lost because the water did not land on the paper!

Wind has a tremendous effect on the streams. The person on top of the-engine, the Foreman, watches wind flags to decide when to play a stream. A change in the direction or the strength of the wind lasting less than 30 seconds may provide the opportunity to pump a winning stream. The play pipe crew must also heed the effect of the wind as they direct the stream. The league record stream is 285 feet played by the Neptune 8 of Newburyport, MA. in Bath, Maine, July 2, 1983.

BRIEF HISTORIES OF ENGINES IN ACTION SATURDAY

GARDNER 4, WEST NEWBURY, MA

The Gardner 4 was built in 1882 by the Button Company of Waterford NY for Gardner, MA. It went to Portland, ME in 1940 and to West Newbury in 1964. It was one of three engines built to compete in musters. It has won the Class A league championship seven times.

NEPTUNE, NEWBURYPORT, MA

The Neptune No. 8 was built in 1878 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Newburyport, MA. It went to Ipswich, MA. in 1889 and returned to Newburyport in 1899. It has won the Class A league championship seven times.

PHOENIX, NEW MARKET, NH

The Phoenix was built by the Thayer Company of Boston, MA. It went to New Market, NH this year, and this is its first appearance in league competition. This is the only Thayer engine in league competition.

HANCOCK, ASHBURNHAM, MA

The Hancock was the built in 1828 for Charlestown, MA. by Hunnemnan & Co. of Boston, MA. It went to Reading, MA. in 1870, to Somerville, MA., and then to Ashburnham, MA in 1897. It is the oldest engine in competition today. It has won the Class B league championship 12 times.

GENERAL BATES, NEWBURYPORT, MA

The General Bates was built in 1878 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for East Weymouth, MA. It went to Lisbon, ME. in 1886, and to Newburyport in 1965.

UNION, SOUTHBOROUGH, MA

The Union was built in 1867 for Weymouth, MA. by Hunnemnan & Co. of Boston, MA. It went to Braintree, MA. in 1875, and to Southborough, MA in 1960. It won the Class A league championship in 1914 (there was only one class until 1946) and the Class B league championship in 1960.

PROTECTION, NEWBURY, MA

The Protection No. 1 was built in 1865 by the William Jeffers Company of Pawtucket, R.I. for Jamaica, Long Island. The original name was the Excelsior #2. It was sold to Brookville, MA. to compete in firemen's musters in 1908. It went to Newbury, MA in 1948. It has won the Class A league championship 14 times.

GERRY 5, MARBLEHEAD, MA

The Gerry 5 was built for Marblehead by Hunnemnan & Co. of Boston, MA. and delivered on July 1, 1845. Named after Elbridge Gerry, a native of Marblehead, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a Governor of Massachusetts, and the fifth Vice President of the United States, it was retired from active fire service in 1890. It was restored in 1949 and has been an active competitor in musters since 1950. It was the Class B league champion in 1951, 1955, 1956, and 1958.

VIXEN, DERRY, NH

The Vixen was built in 1895 by the Gleason & Bailey Company of Seneca Falls, NY for Lowell, MA. It went to Somersworth NH in 1903, to Salmon Falls, NH, to Berwick, Maine, to Newburyport, MA. in 1974, and to Derry NH in 1976. It is one of three engines built to compete in musters. It has won the Class A league championship five times.

OKOMMAKAMESIT (OKOS), MARBLEHEAD, MA

The Okommakamesit was built in 1861 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Harrisburg, PA. Depending upon the source, the original name was the Citizen or the Good Will. It went to Marlboro, MA. in 1869 where it was renamed Okommakamesit No. 2. Okommakamesit means City of Hills in an Indian language. The Phoenix Veteran Firemen's Association of Marblehead purchased the OKOS in 1894 to compete in firemen's musters. The organization changed its name rather than change the name of the engine. The OKOS was the Class A league champion in 1903 and 1922.

ESSEX, ESSEX, MA

The Essex No. 2 was built in 1882 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Essex, MA. It won the class A league championship in 1941 and 1948.

ABERDEEN, SOUTH KINGSTOWN, RI

The Aberdeen was built in 1876 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Peabody, MA. where it was named the Signey C. Bancroft and then the F.B. Schofield. It went to Rockport, Maine in 1885 where it was renamed the Rockport and then the George F. Burgess. It went to Wellesley, MA. in 1955 where it was renamed the Maugus. It went to South Kingstown, RI in 1965 where it was renamed the Aberdeen. This was the name of a South Kingstown engine that was scrapped to provide metal during World War II. It was the Class A league champion 1966.

TIGER, NEWMARKET, NH

The Tiger was built in 1852 by the Leslie Company of Newburyport, MA for Newmarket, NH. It has won the Class B league championship nine times.

EAGLE, MERRIMAC, MA

The Eagle was built in 1857 by the Howard & Davis Company of Boston, MA.

GOVERNOR BRADSTREET, NORTH ANDOVER, MA

The Governor Bradstreet was built in 1861 by the Button Company of Waterford NY for Galion, OH and named the Niagara #1. It was sold to North Andover, MA. in 1903 and given its current name. It was the Class A league champion in 1950, 1986, and 1990.

winter of 1851 sacrificed their lives in a hurricane to keep the old Minot's Ledge light burning so that others in peril on the sea would live.

This is the oldest organized competitive sport in New England, with the class "B" champion Hancock from Ashburnham, Mass., having been built in 1828 when Abraham Lincoln was only 19 years old.

Fireman's muster competitions have always been known to be a fantastic time for participants and spectators alike. With as many as 16 teams competing to spray a column of water the furthest, anything can happen ... and often does.

Volunteers are often recruited or drafted on the spot to pump real iron. So don't be surprised if ... when you least expect it ... you're a firefighter too!

Cohasset's muster has been reborn with great excitement and energy after a 20-year lapse, in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the newly revitalized community center.

Firehouse food will be cooked on site by that "tantalizer of taste buds" Bill Adams and his second congregational church masters of culinary delights who also bring you the annual "Strawberry Fair." They're back with mouth-watering firehouse sausages, peppers, onions and more. All church food proceeds will go to the Midwest flood victims.

The fine efforts of members and friends of the Fireman's Benefit Association have made this muster possible. Their proceeds will benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the scholarship fund.

FIREMAN'S MUSTER - AUG. 14, '93 - COHASSET, MASS

The first "firemen's muster" at which official records were kept was apparently held at Bath, Maine, on July 4, 1849. Five engines were present on that occasion, two of which are still in active competition. Since then, thousands of musters have been held in the United States and Canada.

This unusual sport developed when hand pumpers, commonly known as "handtubs," "masheens," and "engines," were the backbone of volunteer fire departments. Each firefighter was convinced that his engine was the best, whether it was one of the popular Button, Hunneman, or Jeffers models, or one built by a local craftsman. The urge to prove its superiority prompted local volunteers to haul their masheen down to the village green, and send some local lad to a rival engine house with a challenge to prove which could pump the longest stream of water. It would also be hinted that this would be a good time to see which crew was comprised of men and which of "old women." These affairs attracted spectators to cheer their favorites, and a holiday atmosphere would prevail.

With the advent of the steam fire engine and paid departments, the role of the urban volunteer was reduced. The usual complement of 40 to 60 men required to man the hand engines was cut to one-fourth that number, and the engines themselves were laid to rest. But these proud firefighters formed veteran firemen's associations, dedicated to preserving their comradeship and saving their engines from destruction.

Chief Engineer
"Uncle Tommy" Franklin
NEW YORK FIRE DEPARTMENT 1811-1824

Between 1849 and 1890, many musters were held involving veteran firemen and active volunteer departments of towns whose main source of fire protection was still the dependable hand-pumper. Most of these musters were organized with haphazard rules. This often caused disagreement between participants and hard feelings toward the host company, who had usually arranged the rules to their benefit.

In 1890 it was generally conceded that some sort of governing body should be formed to oversee this growing sport. And the New England States Veteran Firemen's League was organized.

Among the important pieces of legislation enacted by this body was one disqualifying from musters engines built after 1895. This preserves the character and purpose of the sport, which tests who can pump the farthest stream of water, not who can afford to buy the newest engine. The majority of the rules and regulations adopted in 1890 are presently in effect with minor changes.

If one traveled through New England and New York this summer to any of the dozen or so major scheduled musters, he would see basically the same activity his grandfather or great-grandfather saw at the turn of the century. The day would begin with a parade of all participating handtubs, many accompanied by their own fife and drum corps. Ending at the muster field, the parade will break up for lunch, after which the pumping contest will be held.

The muster field is measured off as accurately as a football field. In the area where the engines will pump, a platform is built measuring 40 feet by 40 feet, with a tank at the rear, capable of holding 300 gallons, from which engines will draft.

One hundred and fifty feet beyond the pumping platform is the nozzle platform measuring eight feet by eight feet, the two being connected by a 2-1/2-inch fire hose. One hundred feet beyond this point will start the actual measuring area, which is eight feet wide and runs 280 feet, marked off at one-foot intervals. Only solid drops of water are measured, with scores recorded to the nearest quarter of an inch. Judges appointed by the league are posted at each of these areas to insure the utmost accuracy.

At starting time, the first entrant is pulled into place and set up ready to pump. Pumping order is determined by drawing one week prior to the muster. When the foreman takes his place atop the engine, the timekeeper advises that his 15 minutes have started and he may play as many streams as he sees fit in that time, the farthest of which will be officially recorded.

The pumping handles, known as "brakes," are put into motion slowly clearing the air from the engine and hose. When the foreman feels that all is ready, he will signal the nozzleman to cap the nozzle, thereby building up pressure in the line which at times may exceed 250 psi. Tension mounts as the foreman concentrates on the wind-direction flags along the measuring area, keeping his crew ready for the moment that the wind will help them the most. "Go!" he yells at the top of his lungs while signaling the nozzleman to release the pressure. Furiously, 40 pairs of hands begin pumping at an incredible rate of 120 strokes per minute, hurtling water 200 feet or more down the field. No one has to tell the crew to stop pumping, for after about 25 seconds they will be so exhausted that the engine will automatically come to a standstill. After a brief rest, pressure will be repacked into the line, and the whole procedure repeated.

While this is going on at the engine platform, a calmer drama is unfolding at the nozzle area. Each entry at the muster has its own nozzle or "pipe," and crew of four rugged individuals to hold steady this tremendous amount of pressure while guiding the stream down the narrow measuring area. The lead pipeman actually steers the column of water. If his accuracy is off the slightest bit, all will be lost. This position is usually assigned to the most experienced man. It is not uncommon for an individual to hold this position for 25 or more years, adding to his expertise with each passing muster.

The nozzles used are as distinctive as the men who use them. Some have been in continuous use for over 75 years and have proved very successful. Each is custom-designed to get the maximum distance from each stream. Fins of varying sizes and shapes are installed to help break up the turbulence in the water, providing a straighter stream. Razor-sharp cutting rings are built into the tips to eliminate any rough edges the stream might have. The tips themselves are interchangeable, permitting the use of the proper size under any conditions. Tips varying only several thousandths of an inch can drastically change the structure of a stream. All this gear, entrusted to the lead "pipeman," is treated reverently. Tips are often size-coded, rather than having the size inscribed, to avoid showing an opponent which sizes work best under prevailing conditions.

Six experienced judges are assigned to the measuring area, and it is their task to accurately measure and record each stream. Streams average between 180 and 215 feet, but extreme wind conditions can increase or decrease this by 40 feet or more.

For many years, all hand engines were in open competition. Since the mid-1930s, however, they have been divided into two classes. The larger first-class engines have cylinders seven inches or larger in diameter while the second-class engines have cylinders under seven inches.

Hunnemnan & Co. of Boston, MA. It went to Swampscott in 1852. It has won the Class B league championship eight times.

DEFIANCE, WESTERLY, RI

The Defiance was built in 1860 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Brockville, Ontario, Canada. It went to Fall River, MA. in 1889 to Riverside, RI in 1923, to North Kingstown, RI in 1926, to Bristol, RI, and to Westerly, RI. It has 12 1/2 inch cylinders, making it the biggest engine in competition today. It has won the Class A league championship five times.

T.W. LANE, MYSTIC, CT

The T.W. Lane was built in 1883 by the Button Company of Waterford, NY for Greenville, SC. and named the Neptune #3. It went to Manchester, NH in 1903 and renamed the Thomas W. Lane after a local fire chief. It went to Waltham, MA in 1920 or 1921 where it was renamed the Major. It went to Troy N.H. in 1922 and to Mystic, CT in 1967 where it was renamed the T.W. Lane.

QUANSIGAMOG, BATH, ME

The Quansigamog was built in 1853 for Hopkinton, MA. by Hunnemnan & Co. of Boston, MA. It went to Worcester, MA. in 1911, to Chelsea, MA. where it was renamed the Winnisimmett No. 2, and then to Bath, ME in 1962 where it was renamed the Quansigamog.

senior scene

Wednesday, August 18, a day at Wright's Mill Farm. Wonderful outdoor country environment with outdoor barbecue luncheon. Trail rides, entertainment and much more. Price $39. Call Libby Pompeo, 383-0711.

"A CLOSER WALK WITH PATSY CLINE" — The magic lives on! This show is both moving and a rousing good time. Sandy Martin captures the heart and soul of the country legend. It's a crowd-pleasing, toe-tapping show. Price $25 (bus and ticket). Leave from Cohasset at 12:30 p.m. and return about 5 p.m. Call 383-9112.

Last chance for Martha's Vineyard. Tuesday, Aug. 17. Leave Cohasset 7:30 a.m. for Wood's Hole, board boat for the Island then enjoy two-hour bus trip around the vineyard. Lunch at Harbor View Hotel, choice of London Broil or native Scrod. Cost $53. Call 383-9112.

August 23 and 24 trip up country for great western BBQ. Time to kick-up your heels. Two days, one night. Includes motorcoach, two lunches, one dinner, one breakfast, overnight accommodation. $123 per person. Call Libby 383-0711.

Thursday, August 26, Spirit of Boston clambake trip. This has always been a delightful day. We will take the Hingham commuter boat to Rowe's Wharf, there we board the Spirit of Boston. This ship is a beauty and is climate controlled. You will enjoy lobster feast as the boat cruises the harbor and enjoy an entertaining show with live band music. Cost $39. Call ASAP 383-9112.

Other upcoming trips: Portsmouth harbor cruise, Sept. 16, $46; Deerfield Inn, Oct. 7, $43; Forever Plaid, Oct. 13, $25.

For more information regarding COA trips call Marguerite at 383-9112.

Shipyard workers wanted

The Shipyard Memorial Committee is looking for more than a few good men and women — 24,000, to be exact — who worked at the Bethlehem-Hingham Shipyard during the 1940s.

The 50th anniversary of the shipyard will be celebrated Sept. 26, recognizing the civilian men and women who built the ships and the sailors who served on them. A memorial dedication ceremony, will feature the reminiscences of the shipworkers and the sailors, and all shipyard personnel are invited to participate. Former workers and sailors should send a card or letter to the Hingham Journal office at 73 South Street, Hingham 02043.

Beacon Rock cleanup

In response to the Mariner editorial regarding the garbage on top of Beacon Rock, a group of people are getting together to clean it up Saturday, Aug. 14, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Cohasset residents are invited to join in.

All participants should bring buckets, brooms and dustpans to the Rock, which is located on Government Island (behind the Harbormaster Building), and be prepared to clean up shards of glass.

For information call 383-0505.

Hear those bells

The 57-bell Taylor Carillon at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset will be played in recital Sunday, August 15 at 6 p.m. by Edward M. Nassor, Carillonneur of Washington National Cathedral and the Netherlands Carillon at Arlington, VA. Mr. Nassor, a Carillonneur Member of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America, holds degrees in music from Virginia Commonwealth University, The Catholic University of America, and the Hoogschool voor de Kunsten in Utrecht, The Netherlands. His Cohasset program includes music of Bizet, Ketelbey, Handel, Croft, hymn settings, an improvisation on a theme by Dave Brubeck, and his own composition "Variations on the old Salisbury antiphon 'Michael Archangele veni'."

Carillon programs will be available on Cohasset Common and in the courtyard behind St. Stephen's Church, on Highland Avenue. Listeners are invited to bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs, and blankets. After the recital, listeners may take a brief tour of the tower. The concert will occur rain or shine. Further information may be obtained by calling the church office weekdays at 617/383-1083, or the church Carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at 508/475-2599.

Band concert slated

The next scheduled concert on the common is Tuesday evening, August 17, at 7:30 p.m., Coha... Town Common. Performing will be the 30-piece S... Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richa... Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and are financially possible from matching grants of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and the American Federation of Musicians.

Please bring blanket or lawn chair and often insect repellent is a good item to have available.

Computer 'dinosaur' costs Cohasset taxpayers

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

What do Studebakers, '57 Chevys, dinosaurs, and even guinea pigs have in common?

Town computers, officials say.

That's what selectmen were told Monday by the computer study committee.

Member Richard Swanborg gave selectmen a detailed analysis of why the town's languishing in the the computer dark ages costs the taxpayers big bucks.

Swanborg compared the town's 1983 Digital VAX computer mainframe with a 1957 Chevy.

"It's a classic machine which is still in good shape in computer terms — but a ten-year old computer is equal to 50 years in cars.

"Old parts for a '57 Chevy are hard to find and service can take forever," Swanborg explained.

The computer study committee recommends the town spend money to save money.

State policy snuffs out town's lead grant status

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Cohasset is not in the lead anymore.

Three weeks ago the town was replaced as lead community of a 10-town anti-smoking coalition when it was discovered Cohasset did not have an affirmative action plan.

Hingham will replace Cohasset as the lead town.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said it is necessary that the lead town, or program administrator, possess an affirmative action plan in order for the coalition to receive state money.

Doyon added, however, that apart from its affiliation with the coalition, the state does not require Cohasset to have an affirmative action plan.

"Affirmative action plans are required for communities over 10,000," Doyon explained. "Hingham is required to have one and they do. Cohasset isn't and it doesn't."

Doyon said Cohasset's lack of a plan does not mean the town discriminates in its hiring practices.

"We are putting together a civil rights policy which will show our commitment against discrimination," he

Town audit stirs water budget deficit debate

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Auditor Antonio Roselli told selectmen that if the water department were a company—it would be out of business.

He likened it to a hypothetical business that bills $800,000 in revenue with $100,000 in the bank and expenses of $1 million a year.

"That company wouldn't last too long," he said.

But Water Commissioner Ronald Goodwin said Cohasset residents should not be left with the wrong impression from the audit.

He said the FY'92 water department deficit was due to unanticipated double interest payments on a bond issue which put the department in the red after two years of balanced budgets.

Roselli of Lexington-based certified public accountants Tucci & Roselli reported his fiscal year 1992 (which ended June 30, 1992) audit findings to selectmen Monday.

The purpose of the audit, which is mandated annually by the federal government for towns that receive over $100,000 in federal assistance, was to get an overview of the town's financial statements, Roselli said. Last year Cohasset received close to $200,000 from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), he said.

Roselli said the problem in FY'92 with the water

Cohasset couple honored for service at St. Coletta's

Maria Plante — who spent eight long years fighting against the building of a gambling casino in Hull — now works the Bingo hall at St. Colletta's in Braintree, where her son Peter is a student.

"There's a difference between charity gambling and gambling as an industry, so I really don't feel bad," notes Plante, who, along with team partner and husband, Patrick, of Cohasset, were recently awarded the 'Volunteers of the Year' award at Braintree's St. Colletta's.

"We were able to expand programs for kids and put a new wing on to the school, so the money is being used

Former food mart owner is indicted

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

William D. Roberts Sr., 35, former owner of Roberts Food Mart, which burned last year has been indicted by a federal grand jury for arson of the Rte. 3A convenience store, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said.

Noonan said the indictment followed an intense 15-month investigation by Cohasset police and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Noonan said Roberts was arrested at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday (August 17) at the Parkview Motel in Norwell where he was visiting. Noonan did not have an address for Roberts, who was a Scituate resident at the time of the fire. Federal officers and Scituate police made the arrest.

Roberts was arraigned at a bail hearing before a federal magistrate in Boston Wednesday afternoon after the Cohasset Mariner went to press.

Fire broke out in the rear of Roberts Food Mart in the Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza on Rte. 3A in the early morning hours of April 21, 1992.

The two-alarm fire caused an estimated $150,000 in damage to the food mart and neighboring businesses.

Police called the cause of the fire suspicious after results on samples taken from the convenience showed traces of gasoline. No one was injured in the fire.

Citing abandonment of the business landlord Thomas Cummings broke his lease with Roberts in a court action last August.

Cummings subsequently renovated and leased the site which is now occupied by Joe's Market Place.

Former food mart owner is indicted

William D. Roberts Sr., 35, former owner of Roberts Food Mart, which burned last year has been indicted by a federal grand jury for arson of the Rte. 3A convenience store, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said.

Noonan said the indictment followed an intense 15-month investigation by Cohasset police and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Noonan said Roberts was arrested at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday (August 17) at the Parkview Motel in Norwell where he was visiting. Noonan did not have an address for Roberts, who was a Scituate resident at the time of the fire. Federal officers and Scituate police made the arrest.

Cohasset's week

Sign placement approved

Selectmen said they would allow St. Stephen's Church to put up the size of sign that the zoning board of appeals authorizes in a new location.

Since the sign will be placed on town-owned land, a change in placement needs the selectmen's okay.

St. Stephen's is requesting a variance be granted by the ZBA that would allow the church to install a church sign larger than the 2 ft.-by-3 ft. as permitted on residential property.

Church officials contend that since the sign is to be installed in front of the church in a commercially-zoned area of town and not on Highland Ave., they should be allowed a sign larger than for residential property.

The matter was taken under advisement by the ZBA.

W. Roger Nast, chairman of the property committee at St. Stephen's wrote to selectmen asking for permission to install the sign on the right-hand side of the stairs.

"Regardless of the ZBA's decision concerning the allowed size of the sign, a new sign of approved size will have to be installed in the general area of our front steps shortly to replace the present sign, which is in a serious state of decay," Nast said.

"Because of an existing town-owned tree that continues to reduce the visibility of our present sign on the left-hand side of the stairs, we also propose that any new sign be installed to the right of the stairs where no obstructions to visibility exist."

No deadline extension

In a majority decision, selectmen did not extend the Aug. 20 deadline for interested individuals to apply for the position of fire chief.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Michael Sullivan voted to extend the deadline several weeks to coincide with anticipated receipt of the regionalization study, which is expected to include some input on the chief's position. Selectmen Martha K. Gjesteby, Merle S. Brown and Rocco F. Laugelle voted against the extension.

In addition to the Boston Globe, and the International Association of Fire Chiefs' Newsletter, the town advertised the position in the Massachusetts Municipal Assoc. (MMA) newsletter, which was published later than expected. Goedecke said extending the deadline would give more people a chance to apply and give the town more choice. She was also concerned that some people may not have seen the Globe advertisement which appeared on the July 4 holiday.

So far the town has received about 30 applications for the position which became vacant when John R. Nadeau broke his contract and resigned to accept a position in New Hampshire. Reached by telephone, acting Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said he has applied for the permanent position.

The town is administering a state grant which is paying for a five-town fire department regionalization study by an Oregon firm. Cohasset and Scituate are also investigating the possibility of sharing a fire chief.

Lars Fuchs works cleaning up the glass in the area around the stairs on Beacon Rock. The clean up Saturday followed a recent a Mariner editorial warning about broken glass on the Government Island rock.

Corporate name change

Kimball's Management Corp. is the new corporate name behind the motel, bar and restaurant at 124 Elm St. The corporation was previously called the Roy Corporation.

Directors of the corporation obtained selectmen's approval this week to pledge licenses held by the corporation relative to operation of the facility as part of collateral for bank refinancing.

The owners and operators have refinanced to lower payments and to provide funds to remodel and improve the facilities ability to serve the public, according to Peter Roy, corporation president.

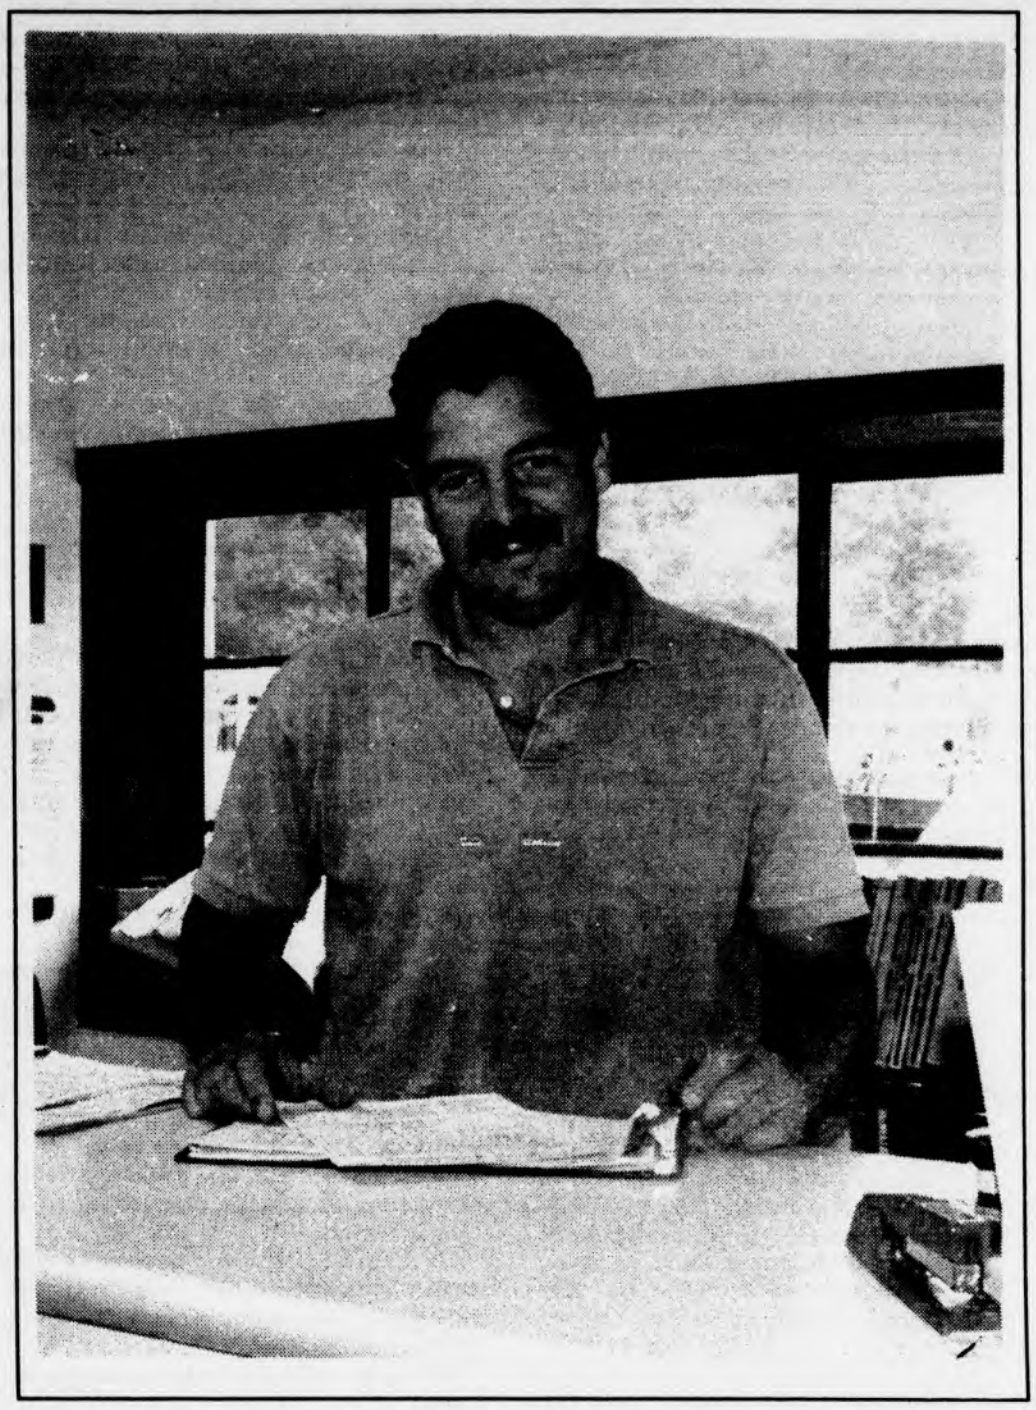
William J. Cavanaro



Name: William J. Cavanaro.

Occupation: Owner, Cohasset Collision Center.

Best day of your life: The day my son and daughter were born.

Most embarrassing moment: It happened two weeks ago. I was driving down Wollaston Boulevard in Quincy and my 4-year-old daughter asked me why there were police everywhere. I explained that they were stopping people for breaking the law. Right after I finished talking, I was pulled over for speeding.

Goal: To be a creative and productive person.

Favorite season: Summer.

Best vacation: A couple of years ago my wife and I and my brother-in-law and his wife rented a house on Martha's Vineyard.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: People who litter.

Favorite book: "Silence of the Lambs," by Thomas Harris.

Favorite movie: "What A Wonderful Life."

Biggest worry: Not having enough time to do everything I want to do.

Favorite place: Bermuda.

Favorite junk-food: Pizza.

Person you would most like to meet: Clint Eastwood.

Help us, please!

Presently, supplies in area food pantries are critically low. And as each day passes, the situation worsens.

Could you help us? A donation of nonperishable food (preferably canned goods) is very much needed and would be extremely appreciated by those less fortunate. Donations of cash in lieu of food would also be very much appreciated. You may drop off your donations at either our main office in Cohasset or at our branch in North Scituate.

Thank You from all of us at Cohasset Savings for helping us to help others.

Cohasset's Lot Bates measures up as town's sealer

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Lot E. Bates Jr. is a demanding consumer. He has to be — it's his job.

As Cohasset's Sealer of Weights and Measures, he's a regular at retailers in town.

"(My job) is to test and seal all gas pumps and scales in stores and measurements," Bates explains.

It is a job he has held for 20 years, and one that stays in the family.

"My father was the sealer back in the 30s," Bates says. "I used to go around with him."

Now Bates makes his rounds alone, and there are more of them.

"I check 400 items," he says.

The item which he is asked to verify most frequently is a cord of wood.

"It's a hard thing to check — and a cord isn't a legal measurement. It's actually 128 cubic feet check for," he said. "If people think they are shorted, I tell them to stack it up and I'll go over and measure it."

In neighboring Hingham, the problem of wood miscalculations became so severe, the town brought a wood-seller to court over it.

Hingham Sealer of Weights and Measures Thomas Wallace recalls the man was shortchanging people up to 1/3 the delivered amount.

Wallace says he no longer operates in town.

Bates notes that the advent of technology has made his job easier.

"With electronic measurements, you don't have much problem," he said. "Most pumps and scales are pretty accurate. With the hanging (manual) kind of scale, the spring weakens after time."

However, repairing broken electronic equipment isn't as easy for the merchants as repairing the manual kind of old.

"We (sealers) used to be able to adjust the old pumps and scales. Now they have to send the electronic ones back to the manufacturer," Bates explains.

The sealer also checks drugstore measurements.

"I test the apothecary scales," he says, "but the balances in pharmacies are very good."

The smallest measurement Bates has — a half grain — is used to test the drug scales at pharmacies.

"The half grain (measurement) I use is a very small piece of aluminum," he explains.

While doing his drugstore rounds, Bates said he also checks thermometers.

"Just the package. It must say it has been sealed in Massachusetts."

Bates also checks school scales.

"When they have a wrestling match the scales over there are tested," he notes.

Bates is required by law to verify scales and measurements once a year. Merchants don't mind, he adds, especially when an inaccuracy is discovered to be in the store's favor.

"I once found a pump that was giving more than a gallon of the most expensive gas to customers," he recalls. "The owner was very happy to find that out."

The sealer is a disinterested third party, Bates says.

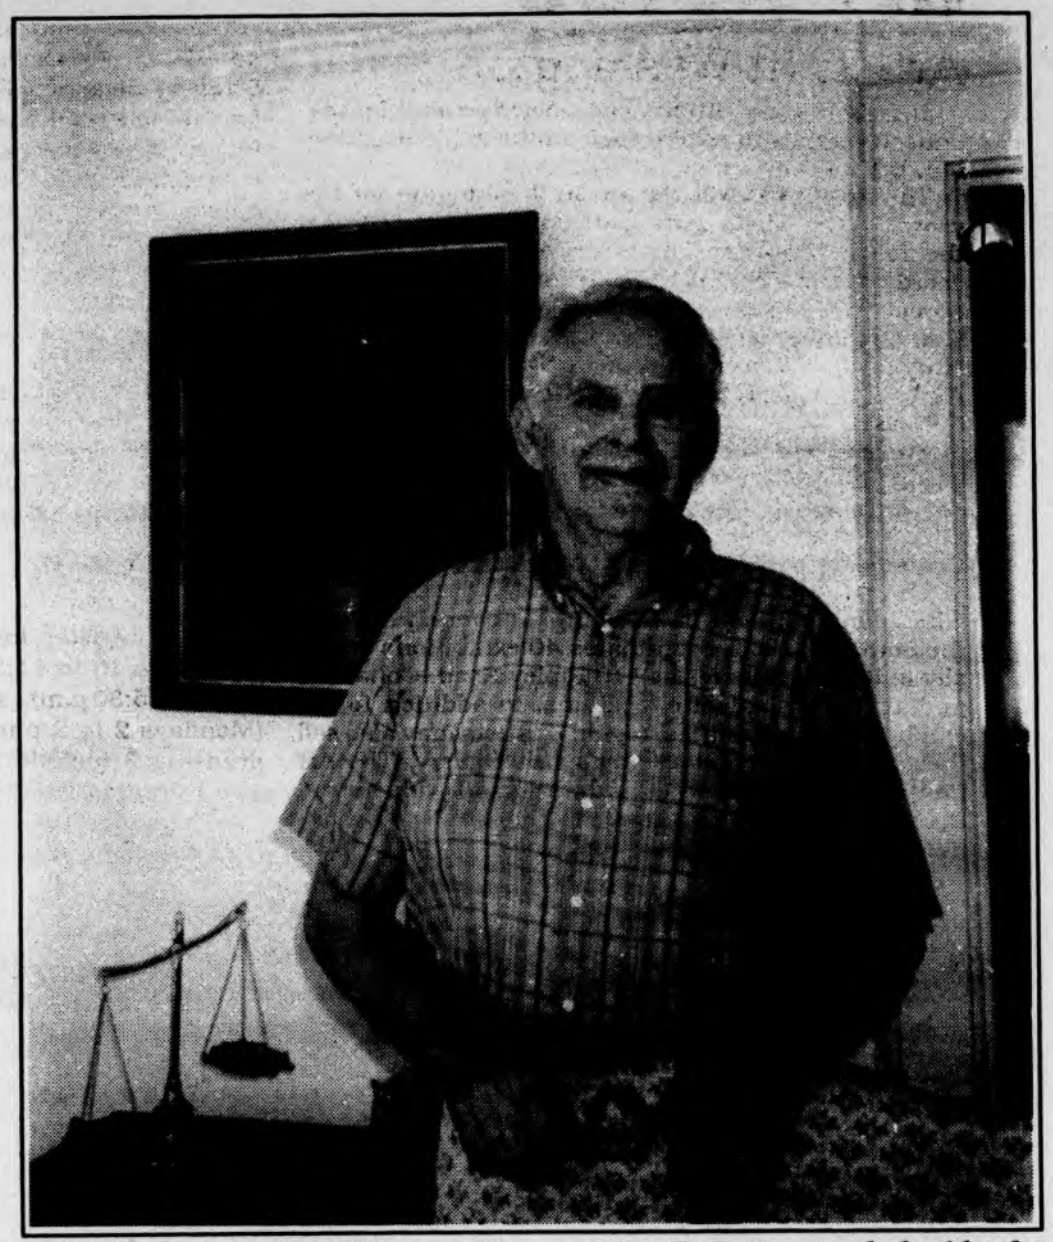
"We protect both the customer and the owner."

When it is discovered a measurement isn't accurate, Bates said he puts a seal around the device to prevent further use. Once the merchant corrects the problem, Bates breaks the seal.

Each verification the sealer performs costs merchants a fee, depending on the measurement.

"It costs $6 per pump to check it, and scales up to 100 pounds cost $5 — while over a 100 pound-scales cost $20," Bates explained.

The money from the fees goes to the town.



Cohasset Sealer of Weights and Measures Lot E. Bates stands beside the portrait of his great, great grandfather — also named Lot Bates. Family history is important to Bates', whose father was also the town's sealer of weights and measures.

Artists in Washington

U.S. Rep. Gary Studds has invited several Massachusetts artists to exhibit their works in his Washington, D.C. offices.

The exhibition will remain in Washington for two years. All the artists participating are Gallery Artists at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, who helped coordinate the exhibit. The artists include: Virginia Lovejoy Allyn of Marion, Julie Blanchard of Waltham, K.A. Calnan of Scituate, Brooks Kelly of Pembroke, Mary Lizotte of Norwell, Gail M. Nauen of Carver and Barbara Gurnis, Kit Bryant and Kerstin MacNeill, all of Cohasset.

Studds, representing Massachusetts' 10th district, is a member of the Congressional Arts Caucus, which considers legislation that affects the arts. He has also initiated exhibitions of artwork by the South Shore Art Center's regional membership in his Quincy offices.

The South Shore Art Center is a non-profit art and educational organization serving 43 communities on the South Shore. It coordinates 40 exhibitions annually in its two galleries at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, and at various satellite locations. In addition to the exhibition opportunities, regional artists may also sell their work in the Art Center's Gift Gallery. The Art Center also offers courses and workshops year-round to students of all ages and all levels of ability. For more information on the Art Center, please call (617) 383-9548.

Art registration opens

Registration is now open at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, for the fall term of adult and young artist courses and workshops. Serving all communities on the South Shore, the Art Center offers classes in all media for all ages and all levels of ability. The fall term begins Sept. 28 and runs through Nov. 20; call (617) 383-9548 for a brochure and to register.

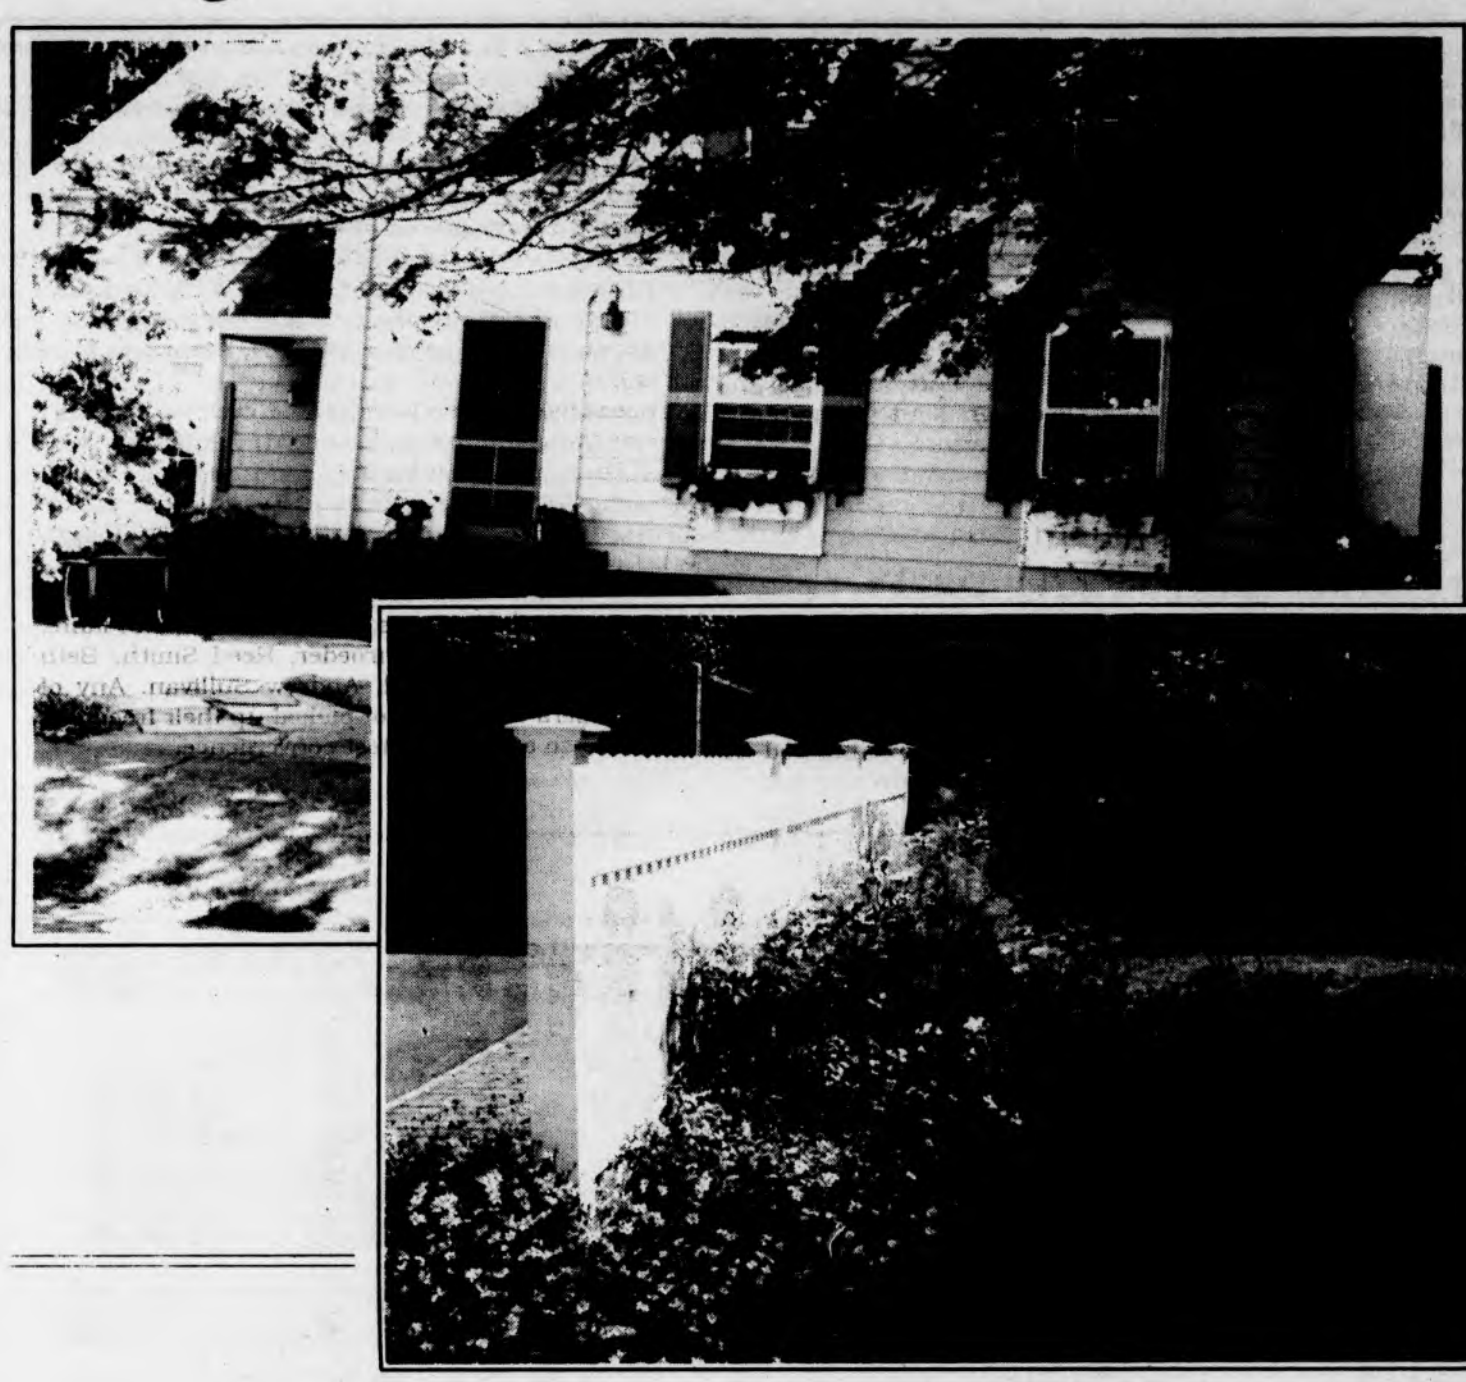
The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863



Many neighbors of the Pease residence at 3 Sankey Road called me in hopes that the Mariner would share this particularly lovely spot with the rest of the town. The front windows have white window boxes filled with pale pink and salmon colored geraniums and cascading vinca ivy. The front door is flanked by two clay pots filled with geraniums and a wheel barrow waits for the next gardening chore. The left-hand side of the front yard has a pristine white fence creating a backdrop for a perennial garden filled with Betty Prior Roses, yellow Coreopsis, Shasta Daisies, pink Cosmos, Blue Speedwell, and English Lavender. Remember to give me a call at 383-2863 with something that catches your eye around town!

Southwest magic

The high desert panoramas of New Mexico, with adobes, pueblos, and snow-capped mountains are featured in the art exhibit at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library this month. Paintings and sketches by South Shore artists Virginia Avery, Elizabeth Durant, Jane Corscadden, Martina McCarthy, Eleanor Rodegast, Elizabeth Burke, and Gloria Worthington richly portray the mystique and gentle grandeur of Santa Fe.

Led by Virginia Avery, the group of artists visited Santa Fe and Taos last spring. Their exhibit represents each artists perspective of the unique aspects of the Southwest, the puye cliff dwellings, the chapels, the black mesas, and endless horizons. Using a variety of mediums, oil, watercolor and charcoal, the artists captured the brilliance of New Mexico. The reading room is brimming in color!

Special thanks to the South Shore Art Center which initially staged the exhibition and graciously permitted the exhibit to continue at the library.

Summer reading party

All children who have participated in this summer's "Sail on a Sea of Books" reading program are invited to a party at the Paul Pratt Library Friday, Aug. 27, at 2 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

So far this summer, 95 children have handed in reading cards and decorated their sailboats, which are on display in the library. Twenty-nine children have reached their reading goal and have earned a free paperback book. Also, 21 "almost-readers," who are read to by a family member and keep track of the books, have decorated sailboats. The program runs until school begins in September, and children may join at any time during the remainder of the summer. Participants will be awarded certificates in school in the fall.

Those children who have earned their free book so far are: Courtney Anton, Timothy Anton, Erik Belz, Jason Benterou, Jenn Buckley, Andrew Busk, Bobby Camacho, KC Camacho, Raymond Cavanaugh, Susan Dane, Jonathan Downing, Rachel Doyle, Allison Earon, Kate Grimm, Jared Krupczak, Ross Lieb-Lappen, Julia Lovallo, Maura McKenney, Karen McMorris, Leah McMorris, Sarah McMorris, Sarah Pease, Nicole Plante, Jeff Schneider, Kate Schroeder, Reed Smith, Beth Smoot, Malcolm Stansell, Andrew Sullivan. Any of these readers who have not picked up their free book should do so at their earliest convenience.

around town

❑ I must begin by sending Rodney and Judy Milburn our hopes for a speedy recovery after their recent car accident. Although they live in Hingham, most of Cohasset knows them. They are a lovely couple who deserve the best. Our prayers are with you.

❑ Congratulations go to the Chart House — it celebrated its third anniversary last week with a community appreciation celebration and it was a huge success!

❑ Happy belated birthday greetings go to Brendon Mulcahy this week, who turned 26 and is handsomer than ever!

Have a wonderful year, Brendan.

❑ Wait until you see the sweater Jean Salvador is going to be raffling! It is gorgeous! It was designed by her, and either a man or woman can wear it. Naturally the theme is I Love Cohasset. Jean hopes to have it displayed at various town events, so be sure you take a chance on it. It truly is special.

❑ If you don't feel like cooking during all of this heat, go to the Red Lion Inn. We went for supper the other night and it was super! Food delicious, service great, it was nice to be there. It was also packed, be sure to call before you go.

❑ This is the last week of the Cohasset Recreation Department's summer playground program and it deserves special praise. Every counselor did such a super job; the programs were great fun for the kiddos, with a special theme each week.

The only bad news is that Ted Carroll, who has been with the department for ten years, has announced that he will be leaving at the end of the summer. If you could see the hard work he does and his dedication to the children, you will know how much he will be missed.

The next time you see Ted, tell him what a grand job he has done and how much he has done for our children! He certainly will be missed.

❑ We are sad to report the passing of Ray Townsend, a wonderful man who everyone spoke highly of. We hope that his family and friends know how much he was loved, and how much he will be missed.

❑ Don't forget Health Agent Dr. Godzik's warning that we not feed stray animals or wild ones. We run the risk of contracting rabies, and young children all think they are so cute! Especially raccoons — though they are cute, they can be deadly!

That's Willie McArthur getting into the foam outside the Osgood School on Monday. Cohasset firefighters sprayed the hillside with non-toxic foam for the kids who are in the recreation department Summer Playground program to enjoy.

❑ Just a note: Our acting fire chief, Roger Lincoln, sure is a dedicated worker, a nice man, and a "good guy!"

❑ Cohasset Savings Bank is begging!! For food that is. A donation of non-perishable food (preferably canned goods) is needed and would be extremely appreciated by those less fortunate. You can drop off your donations at either one of their sites, right downtown or at their branch office in North Scituate. Donations of cash are also accepted; don't forget that! Hats off to the Cohasset Savings Bank for their efforts!

❑ A huge thank you goes to Margaret Bates and Linda McCarthy, the newly appointed members of the Council on Aging. We all know how hard you will have to work and we appreciate all of your efforts.

❑ Please don't forget, Joe McElroy really would like your help! Anyone who has trade skills, willing to donate their time, or just wants to help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers Renovation Project, will be so appreciated by all of us! If you can help in any way, give Joe a call at 383-0505.

❑ During all of this wonderful summer weather, why not do as cemetery president Mary Jane McArthur suggests and visit our historic landmark. The history there is unbelievable and the setting is beautiful!

❑ If you don't think that we should be proud! Eleanor and Whitey Campbell's son, who is grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ed Tower, has made the Olympics! Watch for him next winter! Jim Campbell will be a name we won't forget.

❑ Don't forget that before anyone plays fall sports, they must have a physical. Thursday, Aug. 26, is the day for boys' football, Aug. 27 is the day for boys' soccer. Football is at 1 p.m. in the afternoon, soccer is at 9 a.m. in the morning, both at the high school. If you prefer, have your own physician do the physical, but remember, there is no playing without one!

❑ That's the news from here for this week. Please call up with your latest summer "treasure."

Barrett/Manchester

Diana Bennett Manchester, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Manchester of Cohasset and Davidson, North Carolina, was married Aug. 14 to C. Redington Barrett III, a son of Dr. and Mrs. C. Redington Barrett Junior, of Englewood, N.J. The Reverend Helen Moore performed the ceremony at Trinity Church in Boston.

The bride graduated from Williams College and received a masters degree in social work from Columbia University. She is studying for a masters degree in public and nonprofit management at the Yale School of Organization and Management. Her father is chief executive officer of Kewanee Scientific Corporation, a manufacturer of equipment for scientific laboratories. For twenty years he was chief executive officer of BIW Cable Systems in Boston.

Mr. Barrett graduated from Princeton University and received a masters degree in business administration from the Amos Tuck School at Dartmouth. He is a vice president at Worms & Company, a private equity investment firm in New York City. His father is acting director of the pulmonary division of St. Luke's Hospital in Manhattan.

Workers wanted by Memorial Shipyard Committee

The Shipyard Memorial Committee is looking for more than a few good men and women — 24,000, to be exact — who worked at the Bethlehem-Hingham Shipyard during the 1940s.

The 50th anniversary of the shipyard will be celebrated Sept. 26, recognizing the civilian men and women who built the ships and the sailors who served on them. A memorial dedication ceremony, sponsored by the Hingham Historical Society, will feature the reminiscences of the shipworkers and the sailors, and all shipyard personnel are invited to participate. Former workers and sailors should send a card or letter to the Hingham Journal office at 73 South Street, Hingham 02043. Names and stories will be forwarded to the Shipyard Memorial Committee.

Ground was broken for the Hingham Shipyard in February of 1942, and the final ship was launched in July 1945. By August 1943, the shipyard was turning out its quota of six ships per month, including fighters, destroyers and LSTs. One ship, the H.M.S Halsted, was built in the record time of four days and 23 1/2 hours, from the laying of the keel to the launching.

Hewitt's Cove was selected as the shipyard site because of its proximity to deep water, major highways and good rail transportation, as well as offering sufficient open space to build these 306-foot-long ships.

The Shipyard Memorial Committee urges former workers and sailors to share their memories in celebration of their tremendous efforts during World War II.

Learning computer-ese

Cohasset may soon be dragged out of computer dark ages and into 21st-century technology.

And what the computer study committee told selectmen Monday makes a lot of monetary sense. Computer change for town hall will require expending dollars at first but within two years, the town will start saving money with the new system when compared with sticking with the status quo.

The study committee is made up of town employees and ordinary citizens. On board are town accountant Michael Buckley, treasurer/collector Elizabeth Ripley and ex-officio member and assistant/assessor appraiser Joseph DiVito, and Guido Risi of the school department and citizens Richard Daniels, Mary McElroy, Daniel Nusdorfer, and Richard Swanborg.

Mr. Swanborg cleverly took computer-ese (a foreign tongue that includes words like Micro-VAX) and translated it by comparing old computers to 1957 Chevys.

"It's a classic machine which is still in good shape in computer terms ...but old parts are hard to find and service can take forever," he explained.

In just one area — the assessor's office — an upgrade will enable the town to realize $23,000 in savings in just three years. Those kinds of dollars combined with other savings from the new system can quickly translate into saving town jobs or easing the need for Prop 2-1/2 overrides.

The study committee — which by the way did not use the consultant fee authorized by town meeting opting to do the study themselves — has left no stone unturned in its report. The report includes how Cohasset got to where it is and what it needs to do to improve efficiency and save money.

The group also suggested selectmen establish a formal computer committee to recommend changes and provide guidance. We think that's a great idea and hope if the committee is established that some of the current crew will stay on to assist the town.

But the real key to moving forward lies with you the taxpayers who control the necessary cash to make the town truly computer literate.

At the special town meeting in October, local computer whizzes who sit on the study committee, will present their case for an updated computer system at town hall.

We all need to brush up on our computer-ese before special town meeting so we can make an informed vote on computer expenditures.

A copy of the committee's report is available for viewing in the selectmen's office. It talks about dollars and sense — and that's a language all of us can understand.

Decision on town fences needed

letters

(Ed.'s note: The following letter was sent to selectmen. Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said Monday she would be happy to accompany Supt. Litchfield on a tour of town fences.)

Dear Board Members:

RE: Wooden Fences

After receiving your letter regarding the repair of town fences, I would like to recommend that a member or members of the Board of Selectmen accompany myself or one of my employees around the town to personally inspect these fences that are in need of repair.

I have recently repaired some of these fences only to have them knocked back down or collapse from old age. I have just begun to repair a fence on Atlantic Avenue only to find that the wall to which the fence is connected to is crumbling. This will probably be a common scenario with a lot of these fences.

I have also heard that the wooden planks that are used for these fences may not be legal. Should someone be impaled by a piece of these planks then the town could possibly be held liable for injuries and thus be sued.

I also would like the board to understand that even with a budgetary transfer, we would not be able to repair all these fences before the cold weather sets in.

Therefore, I recommend again that the board inspect these fences, decide which fences need immediate attention and also think about replacing them with a different type of fencing.

I look forward to assisting the board with this project any way that I can.

Sticker need makes site exclusive

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen).

Dear Sirs:

I have followed with great interest the newspaper articles dealing with the restoration of Minot light and admired the dedication, craftsmanship and sense of history that must have motivated those people involved in the planning and construction of a historically and technically accurate scale model. It is literally a shining example of local historic pride and all the town's residents should well be proud of it.

This morning I had the distinct pleasure of taking care of my two-year-old grandson and decided to expose him to a bit of visual history. Not that a two-year-old would be too impressed, but it gave his grandfather a good excuse to "check it out."

As so many other people who have come to see the "lighthouse model" and as many more who will come in the future will discover, that to view this unique monument to marine history, they have, and will run the risk of acquiring a parking ticket and the attendant embarrassment and costs, due to the fact that you cannot park in the area of the model without a Cohasset resident parking sticker.

Please gentlemen, don't continue to be so exclusive with your piece of historical treasure.

Cellucci to appear

South Shore residents will be invited to the Annual Cohasset GOP Cookout to be held at the seaside home of Ted and Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Sunday, Sept. 12, 4:30 to 7 p.m. Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci will be honored guest, town chairman Julie Guild announced.

Other invited guests will include Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees of East Longmeadow, House Minority Leader Peter Forman of Plymouth, Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, County Commissioner Bob Stone of Whitman, and potential candidates including former federal prosecutor, Janis Berry. Also invited will be State Committee members Polly Logan of Cohasset and Thomas Barry of Duxbury as well as Town chairmen Harvey Hurvitz of Abington, William Bazley of Duxbury, Donna Hoadley of Hanover, Jeanne Matatall of Kingston, Daniel Webster of Hanson, Richard Walsh of Carver, Bradford Kimball of Dennis, Carl Harris of Hingham, Jean Robinson of Hull, Martin Lund of Whitman, James Kilborn of Norwell, William Dougherty of Rockland, John Clarkeson of Scituate, Barbara Carney of Marshfield, H. Richard Coughlin of Weymouth and Joan D'Alessandro of Pembroke.

Chairman Guild said that President Clinton's tax increase and Governor Weld's tax reduction program have sparked new interest in the Republican Party and GOP candidates; therefore reservations for cookout are limited and must be made by Sept. 8. Donation is $10 per person and for further information call Jean Muir 383-1850 or Polly Logan 383-0031.

State Republican women are ready to run

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

State Senator Lucille P. Hicks (R-Wayland) appealed to the women of the "Thursday Caucus" to be on the watch and to identify in their communities good potential Republican women candidates.

Held at the home of Polly Logan of 121 Nichols Rd. in Cohasset, Thursday, Aug. 12, was the kick-off of a new group on the South Shore, the "Thursday Caucus."

Led by Hicks, the group's goals are to enlist, instruct and assist moderate Republican women candidates for office.

"We're encouraging socially moderate women because we feel that electable women are going to come from that wing of the party," said Hicks.

"I feel we have something at stake as women," she continued, "to show we can not only get elected, but we are just as capable of holding all the jobs, all the way to the top, as anybody else out there."

The event attracted an impressive crowd, numbering more than 60 women, with many becoming new charter members of the "Thursday Caucus."

A champagne reception was followed by a buffet dinner and dessert.

Hicks addressed the group, and after a round of introductions, guest speaker Janis Berry spoke on the political advances and social changes women have made since June 14, 1919, when women gained suffrage, the right to vote.

Former federal prosecutor who lives in Saugus, Berry is a Boston attorney who is interested in opposing Scott Harshbarger for Attorney General in 1994.

Other guests included City of Boston mayoral candidate Diane Moriarty, who is the first Republican woman ever to run for the seat, as well as the first Republican to run in a Boston mayoral race in over half a century.

Moriarty is a Boston attorney who grew up in Hyde Park and now resides in Dorchester. She has owned her own company for 13 years and mostly does legal defense work.

"I have more experience on the streets than anybody else who's running," she said.

Kathleene Card, newly elected board member of Massport, was also present. She lives in Holbrook with her husband, Andrew Card, former secretary of transportation under the Bush administration.

"We have to know that every woman is wanted in the party, and if every woman is made to feel inclusive, I think we have a dynamite opportunity to redefine what it is we have to do," said Card.

"It's the women in the party who are going to redefine the party for the next several years," she added. "It's our time."

Joyce Hampers, who worked under the Bush administration in the Department of Commerce, emphasized Card's assertions by adding, "We have the opportunity to be real women, not imitation men. We don't have to be men to be important. We have to be women and to be feminine and all those things that we bring to the party."

Hampers, in 1986, ran for state treasurer against Robert Crane and lost. She said she feels if there had been an organization like the "Thursday Caucus" when she ran, she would have won.

"I would like to help other women do what was not available for me when I was running," said the lawyer who said she now wants to focus on helping small businesses and creating jobs.

Julie Guild of Cohasset, chairman of the town's Republican committee, was also among the women. She described the group as "women who believe in the promotion of women."

Martha Gjesteby, the chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, said "I think this is a wonderful group and I hope that many more Republican women will start coming out of the wood-work."

Gloria Hanson from Hingham said that electable women today can not be good, but super good.

"They have to be super women," she said.

Elinor Clapp, the national Republican committee woman for Rhode Island, spends her summers in Duxbury and was able to be there also.

In Rhode Island, she was proud to say, two women hold general office at the state level, the treasurer and secretary of state.

Events like this have been held on the North Shore and in Boston, said Hicks.

Hicks decided in November that Republican women needed to band together and support each other in order to get strong candidates in the next elections, she explained.

The "Thursday Caucus" has formed a Republican sisterhood of moderate women who are "better than Hillary," they say, and now more ready than ever to stand up and be heard.

for a good cause," she says.

St. Colletta's — as well as Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center in Hanover — are schools for the multi-handicapped and run by St. Colletta's of Massachusetts.

Mr. Plante is a gifted wood carver and uses his talent to benefit the students at St. Colletta's. He makes physical education equipment adaptive to the special needs of the students.

St. Colletta Day School director Lawrence Lambros praised Mrs. Plante's fund-raising skills.

"Mrs. Plante has been our #1 sales person," he says.

One of her efforts was helping to sell pins, called "colletts," made by students with the name of the maker on the back. More than 5,000 pins were sold as a fund-raiser for the school.

Mr. Plante was a teacher at CohassetHigh School, where he taught for 30 years.

Volunteers of the year, Maria and Patrick Plante are congratulated by Braintree St. Coletta Day School Director Lawrence Lambros during a recent ceremony.

St. Coletta's 'Volunteers of the Year' are Maria and Patrick Plante of Cohasset.

While he was a teacher, working with the Cohasset Teachers Association, he and his wife organized the "Ride-A-Bike" for the retarded which raised close to $50,000 for the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens.

And every year the Plantes went into Cohasset schools to teach children about mental retardation.

"We would tell them they could help in raising money for programs for the kids by getting pledges for the Ride-A-Bike.

"The kids did an excellent job raising a lot of money and it was a nice community effort every year," Mrs. Plante recalls.

The Plantes have been married for 33 years and have six children. Peter, who has down-syndrome, is their youngest at 18 years old.

When Peter was three years old, Cohasset Public Schools started a program for the mentally handicapped that he was involved in for nine years.

Mrs. Plante and another active parent Taffy Nothnagle started a handicapped-awareness program, along with school officials and teachers.

"It expanded to a lot of classrooms and finally to the school committee's acceptance of it as part of the health curriculum - to have an on-going guide to teach children about other handicaps," says Mrs. Plante.

Aside from their volunteer work strictly for St. Colletta's, the Plantes have contributed greatly to making Massachusetts a safer and happier place for the mentally retarded.

Mrs. Plante is on the board of directors of the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens. She served as president for three years and is now vice president and legislative chairman.

"I do a lot of legislation lobbying which helps both St. Colletta's and Cardinal Cushing as well as other schools," she notes.

She tracks the bills that are filed and the money that goes into the Department of Mental Retardation.

"I get the word out to people to call their representatives and senators to support certain bills that help the retarded," she says.

As a team, husband and wife monitor community residences for the Department of Mental Retardation. A community residence is a home within a community for the retarded to live, explains Mrs. Plante.

"Mostly we're advocates for people who live in community residences. What we want to be assured is that they're happy and that they're not being abused," she says.

The monitoring is part of the guidelines established by the department, but the evaluation doesn't come from the department.

"It's strictly an advocate for the people who live there," she explains.

The team worked hard to have a community residence established in Cohasset, and after 11 years, one was established last year.

"The housing authority has been wonderful," comments Mrs. Plante. Not only do they work towards building a new facility, but they have also used another home on Elm Street that they bought and moved more mentally retarded people in, she adds.

Through community work and educating people the community residences have been warmly welcomed.

"Cohasset has been very supportive and warm in established residences," she says.

Mrs. Plante said she feels funny about being named 'Volunteer of the Year,' because there are about 335 volunteers between the two schools.

The volunteers do everything from office work to one-on-one tutoring, leading scout troops, and doing special programs like wood working.

The Plantes' volunteer work, however, is two-fold. Not only do they help the students while they are in school, they also fight for the rights of retarded citizens long after the school leaves off.

The Plantes help ease the transition from the protective shell of St. Colletta's to a frightening and sometimes unaccepting world, through education and activism.

Town audit stirs water budget deficit debate

department was that the town was too optimistic with its water revenue collection estimates falling $70,000 short of its goal.

That shortfall contributed to a total deficit of $340,000, which had accumulated over many years.

Goodwin said the double whammy of double interest expense during the year explains the FY'92 deficit.

"The old debt (to the town) goes back to 1978 and over the past two years we've paid off some of that," he said. "Then we went in the red last year about $60,000.

"What happened is the bonding (nearly $2 for Lily Pond estates) did not happen the way we anticipated," Goodwin explained.

He said the double payment added an unanticipated $100,000 to the water department's budget.

"It's as if you paid two years of your house mortgage in one year," he explained.

Roselli explained in his report that about five years ago when the water deficit had risen to about $400,000 the water department started to pay $20,000 a year raised from water usage back to the general fund.

Goodwin said the water department is not an "enterprise account" so any money collected from liens for non-payment of water bills is not credited to the water department.

"I don't want people left with the impression that we're not collecting properly and not budgeting properly," he said.

Goodwin said the water department's new superintendent, Duncan McCormack, will write Roselli a letter further explaining water department finances and billing procedures which Roselli will add to his report.

Water billing has been turned over to the treasurer/collector's office which adds efficiency, Goodwin said.

Computer 'dinosaur' costs Cohasset taxpayers

The group says the town currently spends about $7,000 annually just to maintain the current VAX system. The committee recommends the town upgrade the VAX with a used Micro-VAX 1400 which would cost about $20,000 the first year, including installation and training costs. Cost of the new system would eventually be offset by lower maintenance costs. The town would actually realize a $3,500 savings by FY'96, Swanborg said. That figure does not include savings resulting from more efficiency in town departments.

As an example, Swanborg noted that with the current system the assessors' office can't "talk" easily with the treasurer/collector's office.

"It's like a Studebaker with square wheels," he said. "It's not integrated with other software so there's a lot of manual work."

Currently the assessor's office uses a software system for appraisals that costs $6,000 a year. With an upgraded VAX that software could be phased out over two years with accumulated savings to the town of $23,800 by FY'96, according to the study committee's report.

The upgraded, used computer is a stop-gap measure. The future of computers is in PCs (personal computers), member Guido Risi noted.

"You're buying a dinosaur even through an upgrade, because the direction is PCs," he said.

Because software to handle the town's needs "is two-to-three years away," Swanborg explained, the committee recommends the town buy the upgraded VAX in the interim.

"It's a timing issue," Swanborg explained. "If we could get three more years out of the '57 Studebaker (old VAX) we would. That's why we looked at fine tuning (that machine)."

The committee recommends upgrading the current VAX while at the same time keeping only those "things we can't find a PC equivalent for on that machine."

Selectmen Michael H. Sullivan noted that buying PCs before the software is ready could be a costly mistake.

"Let someone else be their guinea pig," he said.

The upgraded VAX is faster and would give the town room to expand the number of software applications, Swanborg said.

The study committee plans to come up with a detailed proposal on town computer needs for voters at October's special town meeting.

State policy snuffs out town's lead grant status

said. "However, an affirmative action policy is more than a policy of non-discrimination. Affirmative action deals with certain specific recruitment practices."

Cohasset Health Agent Dr. Joseph R. Godzik said he is ambivalent about the transfer of power.

"There is no real prestige with being the lead community," Godzik said. "It is more a question of who will be doing paperwork as far as finances go."

Hingham Health Agent Bruce T. Capman said the coalition is expected to receive approximately $189,000 annually for five years. Money for the program will come from each community's share of the cigarette excise tax collected by the state.

Last year Massachusetts voters passed Question #1, which added a $.25 tax to each package of cigarettes sold in the state. The state Department of Public Health, through its Tobacco Control Program, will distribute the tax money to communities with approved control programs.

Capman said the revelation that Cohasset did not conform with state guidelines was unexpected.

"We discovered it the 23 or 24 (of July) and the proposal was due the 30," Capman said. "But we ended up picking up the ball."

One person who may not be not unhappy with the turn of events is Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle.

When Godzik petitioned selectmen last month for approval for Cohasset to administer the coalition's anti-smoking program, Laugelle objected.

"I don't understand it. We are the smallest town in the group," he said.

Braintree, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Plymouth will join Cohasset in a mutual effort to educate the public about the dangers of smoking.

The town chosen as program administrator, Capman said, will handle all financial aspects of the program. In return for its administrative services, Capman said the lead town will receive approximately 1.2 percent of the grant money as a fee.

Capman said although final figures on how much money each community will receive is still up in the air, the amount will roughly equate to about $1 per capita.

"By pooling resources we can hire staff, develop advertising and public speaking engagements," Capman said. The speakers, advertising material, and other educational tools will be available to all participating communities.

Godzik said a half-time executive director, two educators, as well as a half-time secretarial clerk would be needed to administer the coalition's program.

Capman said he did not expect any objections to the coalitions grant proposal.

"The state is looking to give this money out and is encouraging all boards of health to apply for the grant," he said.

The targeted audience of the coalition's tobacco control program will be children and adolescents, Capman said.

"We will work with the school system with these programs," he said.

In a Cohasset Health Board memo on formation of the coalition, Godzik also says possible "sting" operations might be undertaken in stores suspected of selling tobacco products to minors.

The harbormaster has a surplus 1988 Johnson Outboard Engine. At Harbormaster Irving Gadow's request, selectmen declared the engine surplus so the harbormaster can sell it. The book value of the engine is $1,500-$2,000, Gadow said.

Sporting event is tougher than it looks

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Firemen go through rigid training prior to battling the smoke and blazes they confront in their line of work.

And then there was Saturday's Old Fashioned Firemen's Muster on the Cohasset High School football field, which was a workout in itself.

"It takes a brief spurt of concentrated effort," said Cohasset Water Superintendent Dick Kenny, the liason between the New England State Fireman's League and the Cohasset Firefighter's Association.

"It's a good stress test. I think if you're not in reasonably good condition you can get worn out."

Cohasset Call-Firefighter Kathleen Sanbona said the one muster Cohasset participated — June in West Bridgewater — was a new experience for the group, which was formed earlier that month.

"We've only gone to one," Sanbona said, as she helped other Cohasset firefighters unroll a hose to fill the dunking booth, "so we didn't know what to expect.

"We were wiped."

Cohasset was the only team to compete in full gear at that muster, held on a hot day. The squad did not take part in Saturday's muster, but its antique pump, the Konahassett was on hand. The pump, owned by the Cohasset Historical Society was on display for spectators' viewing.

The muster was part of the town's celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Cohasset Community Center.

Interestingly enough, the firemen's muster is the oldest organized sporting event in the United States, dating back to the first recorded muster in July, 1849 in Bathe, Maine.

More than likely, Kenny believes, individual musters that went unrecorded were held before the one in Bathe.

It first began as a rivalry of sorts between neighboring fire departments to see which could pump water the furthest. The contests grew in popularity and a governing body was organized in 1890 by firemen's groups from around

Swim team wins fifth title

For the fifth consecutive year Cohasset won the South Shore swimming and diving finals, this year with a total of 403 points. Hanover was second with 340.5 points; Aqua Dux, third with 291; Scituate K of C, fourth with 288; Marshfield Y.M.C.A., fifth with 283.5; Scituate Yacht Club, sixth with 249 and Duxbury Yacht Club seventh with 207.5.

Coach Cathy Vaughn, with the help of her assistant Dave Leahy, chose an all-star squad of Cohasset swimmers to compete in each of the championship events. In this competition each team may enter only one swimmer in each race. Diving coach Jane deLima had to choose from her divers, one from each age group to dive at finals.

In diving Dawn Meehan was first in 12 and under. Jordan Fiore was third. This strong finish in diving got Cohasset off to a quick start.

In swimming events the results were as follows:

50 yd Free Styles: Jeff Schneider, second; Girls — Gemma O'Brien, first.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

There's nothing like being a Red Sox fan during a summer pennant race.

The Extra-Points Crew, like most New Englanders, lives or dies with the boys in red. And like most New Englanders, we have suffered with the Sox over the years.

The following is our recollections of growing up with the Red Sox. Read it, share it and cry over it.

The Impossible Dream season of '67

Dave: "I was one year old when Yaz and the boys pulled out all their magic. I don't remember a thing about the season at all. Remember, I was still in Pampers. However, I later met and talked with star pitcher Jim Lonborg and he seemed like a nice enough guy."

Joe: "After reading the the book 'YAZ' I got an idea how exciting it must have been to watch the Hall-of-Famer have the best season of his career by winning the triple crown. Yaz is still the last player to acheive the magical stats. Funny though how the name Bob Gibson doesn't raise the hair on Bostonians' neck like those of Bucky Dent, Bill Buckner or Matt Young for that matter.

1975 World Series, Game Six

Dave: "I was in fourth grade and went to bed before the game was settled in extra innings. Fourth graders aren't supposed to stay up after midnight on a school night. When I awoke the next day, I asked my mother what happened. She told me that Rico Petrocelli hit a home run to win it for the Sox. At least my mother had the right team. As for game seven, I remember Yaz flying out to end the game. I thought he was going to hit a homer."

Joe: "We were all envious of a neighborhood kid whose father was friends with former Red Sox announcer Jim Woods. He was able to get tickets for games six and seven. He talked about it so much beforehand the rest of the neighborhood prayed that the series would be decided in five games — even if it was the Reds who won it. Yes, he was that irritating."

1978 Sox/Yankees Playoff Game

Dave: "For some reason, I remember the game being on a school day during the afternoon. I may be right or I may be crazy. Anyway, I thought the Red Sox had no chance especially with the Yankees throwing Ron Guidry. But they looked great early and took the lead. However, Bucky Dent hit a home run and the rest is history. Once again I thought Yaz was going to win the game in the last inning, but like Game Seven of the '75 series, he made the final out."

Joe: "I was running a workout with the rest of the East Junior High School cross-country team as the Sox battled the Yankees in a game that never should have been. One of the guys was wearing a walkman and giving us a pitch-by-pitch account. We were all home in time to see Bucky Dent foul a Mike Torrez pitch off his foot before parking the next offering in the left-field screen. By the way, we beat Central Junior High School the next day.

New England.

Little has changed since the first musters. Several are held throughout New England during the summer months.

Fourteen antique pumps manned by up to 40 firefighters were on hand to see how far each could spray water fed from a 300-gallon tub. The pump is placed on a wooden platform and the hose is pulled to a smaller platform about 40 yards down the field.

From that point the firefighters have 15 minutes to get off as many shots as possible — the average usually is three — toward a 290-foot long, eight-foot wide role of paper. The paper is spread over wooden boards held together by wire.

The official measurement is the furthest drop of water which is at least as big as a dime.

The field of 14 pumps, introduced by announcers Ron Rawson and Wayne Sawchuk, included the Granddaddy of them all, Protection No. 1 of Newbury. Built in 1865 by the William Jeffers Company of Pawtucket Rhode Island it made the rounds to various fire departments until Newbury acquired it in 1948.

Although it didn't win on Saturday (the muster was won by The Union of Southborough), Protection No. 1 has a long, rich history. The pump holds the current world record of 281' 7—1/2" set in 1963 and the New England League record of 280' from 1978.

Only four hand engines have shot a stream over 160' in 129 years. Protection No. 1 has furthered the mark four times. Since Newbury became owners of the pump, it has won prizes in 205 of 243 musters with 87 first-place finishes. Its earnings of stand at the top of the all-time list at $30,869.75, $44,874 overall.

The combined earnings of the 14 antiques was $292,853.

Tournament raises funds for hospice

Cranberry Area Hospice will hold its second annual golf tournament Tuesday, Aug. 24, at the Plymouth Country Club, Plymouth.

The tournament, sponsored by B-Goods discount store and WATD Radio 95.9, will help raise funds for the non-profit hospice.

The tournament will begin at 2 p.m. with a shotgun start at the 18-hole course in Plymouth. Golf will be a Scramble format with prizes awarded, followed by a reception from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. A full dinner will be served followed by a Sports Memorabilia Auction.

People who wish to support the tournament can do so by playing golf, sponsoring a hole, donating a raffle prize or sports memorabilia. The tournament committee is assembling a huge array of major prizes for an after-dinner raffle. Raffle tickets are $5 each. It is not necessary to be present to win.

Additionally, a special hole-in-one contest offers a lucky golfer the chance to win a 1993 Ford Probe GT, courtesy of Shiretown Ford in Plymouth.

Cranberry Area Hospice, with offices at 161 Summer Street, Kingston, serves people with a life-limiting illness regardless of individual lifestyles, personal preferences, age, sex, religion, national origin or financial status. The Hospice serves the towns of Carver, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanson, Hanover, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton and Scituate.

For additional information on services provided by Cranberry Area Hospice or to be part of the golf tournament, call (617) 585-1881.

Congratulations and thanks to Coach Cathy Vaughn on this very successful conclusion to her first year of coaching the Cohasset team. Thanks also go out to Jane de Lima on another year of bringing not only her diving expertise but also her caring and enthusiasm to her diving squad. And a special thanks to all the members of the Cohasset Swimming and Diving Team, whose dedication and hard work led to this championship.

Dave: "I was at a keg party at college and was cheering on the game in a room full of Red Sox fans. After every inning, I would go to the keg and get another beer. My routine seemed to pay off as the Sox played well and looked to win their first World Series since 1918. However, in the tenth inning after the Sox scored two runs to take the lead, I did not go to the keg to get another beer.

At the party, everyone was cheering on the Sox. We had chants of "Three outs to go", "Two outs to go" and "One out to go" during that final inning. However, one hit led to another and everyone knows what happened as the ball rolled through Bill Buckner's legs and the Sox lost. The party turned into a morgue.

I blame myself for the loss and Bill Buckner's torment. If I had only gone to the keg one more time the luck would have stayed with the Sox.

As for game seven, I knew the Sox would lose. It was as automatic as Greg Norman missing a big putt in the clutch."

Joe: "Like Dave, I was at a college party myself. I now know what my parents mean when they tell me that people remember exactly where they were and what they were doing when JFK was assassinated in Dallas. That's not to say one can compare the magnitude of the two events. Nobody cares what happened in Shea Stadium that October evening except Mets and Red Sox fans. But it's the Sox fans who carry on as if that ground ball trickled between Bill Buckner's legs yesterday. It was seven years ago! Let's move on and enjoy the '93 pennant race.

Boy, there are more "Music Man" fans out there than either of us ever imagined.

Our put-down last week of WBZ's sports reporter Scott Wahle for singing in a local production of the play drew the ire of several readers.

One woman even cancelled her subscription to the Mariner and said we were jealous of people with talent.

All we can say to her and other distraught show-tune fans is lighten up, have a Pepsi, take a bubble bath or curl up with a good book. Better yet, take an early-morning walk. This is only a column. The sun is still going to rise in the morning.

As for Scott Wahle and his so-called singing talent, we say stick with sports reporting. Too many people these days who are successful in one field think they can just magically walk into another one and do just as well. Actor Eddie Murphy trying to make it as a singer is one example of this. You may think differently. That's fine with us. We never said this column was the final say on anything. It's just our opinions. We have the column to express our views and you have the chance to speak out in Sound-Off and/or Letters to the Editor.

But who knows, maybe one day the Extra-Points Crew will show off its singing talent. We do a mean Bee Gee's medley. A personal favorite is "Stayin' Alive." That should pretty much prove our Eddie Murphy Theory.

SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) News...

SHINE is a health benefits counseling program administered out of the Cohasset COA. It is made up of other COA's (called a Consortium) who also participate in the SHINE program.

SHINE is sponsored and funded by the state's Executive Office of Elder Affairs. SHINE has been in existence over ten years and has been in the Cohasset area since 1987. Cohasset and the surrounding communities have long recognized the need for timely, accurate and unbiased information in the area of health benefits for seniors.

The SHINE Program consists of a network of trained health benefit counselors who are very knowledgeable in the areas of Medicare, Medicare Supplemental Insurance (Medigap), Medicaid, Long Term Care Insurance and a host of other health benefits. Counselors are available free of charge to provide you with accurate and objective information.

Individuals who have used the Program express high levels of satisfaction. Many are relieved to finally get their questions answered. Oftentimes, people have called all over the universe, only to be referred to yet another agency. Avoid all that. Start with the SHINE Program first and you'll receive the attention you need.

Here are some questions commonly asked of SHINE counselors:

Q. I sometimes receive information in the mail on insurance, especially long term care insurance. Are these organizations legitimate?

A. That is a good question. Some insurers that sell long term care insurance (insurance that is designed to cover care in a nursing home and care at home) market their plans through the mail. This is particularly true of what they call group products. While they might be legitimate, it is important to exercise caution when purchasing insurance (and anything else) through the mail. Keep in mind, group long term care insurance is not regulated by the state, therefore their benefits may differ and may not meet the standards established by the state. Always understand beforehand whether a product is a group or non-group. When you receive such information and if you are interested in the insurance product, why not call and make an appointment with a SHINE counselor to get your questions answered.

Q. I was recently contacted by telephone by an organization called the Retired Homeowners Association of America. What can you tell me about it?

A. This is a franchise organization that originated in California. It is an organization that requires annual dues of $595. Payment of these dues entitles you to benefit from information on Social Security, Medicare, insurance analysis, legal and financial advice. It is important to point out, all of these benefits are available to area seniors free of charge.

The organization also sells an optional, home companion care benefit. This requires an initial fee of $6,450. The money is placed in an interest-bearing escrow account. The money is then drawn on to pay for home care if the member needs it. We spoke with a sales representative and asked several specific questions about the plan. Every few specifics were provided. This is an excellent example of why people should use extreme caution when presented with these scenarios. Always call a reputable, objective organization (like the COA, the attorney general's office, etc.) before you make a decision. The COA is in the process of getting more information on the organization. If you have been contacted by them, we would like to hear from you.

Book signing slated

Author and science teacher Ellen Doris and Scituate photographer Len Rubenstein, will be at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset, Saturday, Aug. 21, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Ms. Doris and Mr. Rubenstein will be signing their new series of science books for children, Invertebrate Zoology, Marine Biology and Entomology. These books will give nine-to-14-year-olds the tools and inspiration to explore the natural world as a scientist, through firsthand experience.

"The entire family will enjoy using them to increase their knowledge of the world around us. They are not only wonderful sources of information, but true field guides for exploration. The books are really geared to our shores and fields. A great resource and a terrific gift," said Betsey Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys.

The books are based on the program of the Children's School of Science of Woods Hole, Massachusetts.

Ellen Doris has taught science at schools, museums and workshop programs. She is the author of an influential book for teachers, Doing What Scientists Do: Children Learn to Investigate Their World. Len Rubenstein's photographs have appeared in many books and magazines.

If you are unable to attend, call Buttonwood B[illegible] and Toys at 383-2665 to order your signed cop[illegible]

Farmers Market hours

The anticipated pow-wow between Police Chief Brian Noonan and local youths concerning a proposed earlier closing time of a popular local beach never materialized as no teenagers attended the open meeting held Aug. 18.

"I talked to a good amount of kids about coming tonight, and they all send their warmest regards," said Drug and Alcohol Committee Chairman Ellie Waal to Noonan. "But they were not willing to attend this meeting."

Although the youth input into the controversial matter was missed, the committee and Noonan did discuss the reasons for the proposed beach closing and why Noonan deemed it needed at this time.

Noonan has originally asked selectmen that the beach be closed at 8 p.m. instead of the current 11 p.m. but the chief told committee members that after giving the matter more thought, 9 p.m. would be

Kids came first for Ted Carroll

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset Playground Director Ted Carroll has seen hundreds of local kids grow up in the summer park program. A few even became members of the staff over the years.

Carroll remembers one senior in particular.

"I was opening the door for him as a six year old," he said with a laugh of a high-schooler who was now working in a program he loved partaking in as a child growing up in Cohasset.

Carroll stepped down from the position last week with nothing but positive feelings about the past 10 years.

He admits, though, it was a bitter-sweet day.

"It's something I'm going to miss," said Carroll, who works full-time as manager of the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham. "I spent a lot of time preparing for the day and it was still tough."

During his 10 years — seven as director — Carroll took the position and raised it to a level that answered the parents' and kids' needs and came up with a diverse itinerary of activities for the more than 300 3-12 yea_ old children who signed up yearly.

Activities included swims in the Cohasset Swim Center pool, bowling, Safety Day, children's plays at the South Shore Music Circus, drama productions put on by the kids themselves, sports camps and an array of others.

Call firefighters lost their most experienced member Aug 5.

Seventy-year-old Cliff Dickson retired from the call force after serving for 51 years.

"I turned in my beeper," Dickson said referring to the department-issued detection device. "But I'll still be following them. I bought my own."

Cohasset's week

Bike accident injures youth

A 12-year old Cohasset boy was treated and released at South Shore Hospital for minor visible injuries suffered during a bicycle accident with a motor vehicle Monday, Aug. 23.

The accident occurred at 7:10 p.m. near 493 Beechwood St.

Sgt. David Pomerico said the vehicle was heading south on Beechwood Street and the unidentified bicyclist was heading in the opposite direction.

The bicyclist apparently lost control and the bike hit the vehicle. Sgt. Pomerico said it was fortunate the driver was driving very slow at the time of the accident.

No citation was issued but police continue to investigate the accident.

Arrest at Music Circus

Police arrested two adults for allegedly stealing a woman's pocketbook during a performance of the Doobie Brothers Wednesday, Aug. 18 at the South Shore Music Circus.

Police credit spectators who came forward and identified the pair as the reason for a quick arrest.

Charged with larceny over $250 was Mark S. Whelton, 39 of Braintree and Alanus Hendricksen, 43, of Quincy.

During the performance, the woman left the pocketbook on the floor near her seat and the suspects allegedly were reported sitting behind the victim.

The woman spotted the pocketbook was missing and reported it to Lt. Michael Moore of Crown Security who contacted Cohasset police.

Crown Security and Cohasset Officer Lisa Martol and Sgt. David Pomerico began the search and interviewed patrons who gave a description of the suspects.

Police found the suspects in the rear of the music circus parking lot with the pocketbook.

Later police found some of the contents of the pocketbook in the woods. All money, keys and credit cards were returned.

Hendricksen and Whelton were arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the charges. They were released on their own personal recognizance until a future court date.

School committee to meet

The school committee will meet Thursday, Aug. 26 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High School. On the agenda are: an amendment to the residency requirement policy, an update on the education reform act, a discussion on the no smoking policy, staff appointments and a review of 1992-93 goals.

An executive session to discuss collective bargaining will follow the open part of the meeting.

Fire chief search narrows

The names are in and there are 38 candidates.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said 38 people applied for the job of Cohasset Fire Chief by the Aug. 20 deadline.

John Nadeau left the position to become fire chief in Salem, New Hampshire two months ago.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Merle Brown will decide which candidates will be asked to interview for the position, Doyon said.

He added that he hopes to have a finalist selected by the end of September.

Capt. Roger W. Lincoln has been serving as acting chief since July 7.

Brush fires fought

Cohasset firefighters battled several brush fires over the past two weeks.

The fire department was in the Wompatuck State Park at 10 p.m. Aug. 5 following complaints of smoke odor but couldn't find anything, acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

Saturday, Aug. 7, Cohasset firefighters fought a blaze on the island in the town reservoir at the end of Beechwood Street. Access was gained by boat and a floating pump was used to pump the water, Lincoln explained. The fire was of suspicious origin, he said.

On Tuesday, Aug. 10, Cohasset firefighters put out a fire in the woods at Wompatuck State Park that was probably caused by careless campers and was not deliberately set, Lincoln said. A small pond was used to supply water and there was just enough to put the fire out. Lincoln said after the fire all that was left of the campers' plastic tarpaulin, which was hung between the trees, were the eye rings.

The following day (Aug. 11) the camp-site fire, which had apparently gone underground, started up again.

"We went back to do the same thing again," Lincoln said.

McDonald announces aid

State Sen. Brian J. McDonald (D-Weymouth) has announced a state award of $2,366 to Cohasset's Council on Aging.

The grant, which was awarded by the Massachusetts Executive Officer of Elder Affairs, is designed to complement other local and federal funding, volunteers and in-kind support.

"I am pleased to see the Commonwealth upholding its commitment to serving the needs of our senior citizens," stated McDonald. Senator McDonald also stated this grant would assist the work already being done by the council.

School opens Sept. 7

All Cohasset public schools will reopen Tuesday, Sept. 7, the day after Labor Day. Teacher orientation days will be Wednesday, Sept. 1 and Thursday, Sept. 2. The Cohasset Mariner will publish the school bus routes in the next edition, Thursday, Sept..2

Rotary Club meeting

The Cohasset Rotary Club met with the New District Governor John A. Begg Jr., Aug. 23.

Begg emphasized this year's theme, "Believe in what you do — do what you believe in."

He also outlined his and Rotary International's goals and objectives for 1994.

They are public relations, emphasizing that "Rotary is an organization of business and professional persons united worldwide, to provide humanitarian service, encourage high ethics standards in all vocations and help build goodwill and peace in the world."

He emphasized those 31 words are worth remembering when someone asks what is a Rotary Club.

He urged new members should seek out other new members.

Mr. Begg also spoke to the club about programs in world community service; Rotary Foundation Club and district awards.

Jewelry Jottings

JUNE KING

Today, wise shoppers look for quality, value and versatility when they buy. Karat gold jewelry offers all of that and more. Its special beauty lasts and lasts. And gold jewelry items can be mixed and matched to suit almost any occasion.

Begin your basic gold jewelry wardrobe with classic pieces that can be combined with others or worn alone. Usually these pieces are of 14K gold. Later you can add "trendy" items.

Earrings, in several styles for day or evening, should be included. Start with a gold stud, a simple button or geometric. Add a classic gold hoop in the most flattering size. Gold drops, fluted, and feathered shapes are also quite popular. And gold "jackets" can be added to stud pierced earrings for a totally different look. Karat gold earrings: an essential part of any woman's gold jewelry wardrobe.

Chief compromises on beach hours acceptable to him.

Since the beach closing time is part of the town bylaws any change will need to be approved by the town at the next town meeting in October.

"[C]hange to 9 p.m. would be more fair to everyone" said Noonan, adding that his department tends to become busy about that time of night with other police matters. The later closing time stretches out an already depleted police department.

"I have twenty years of patrol experience in this town, and what goes on at the beach at times is something that has always bothered me", said Noonan, refering to the under-age drinking that has become prevalent at night on Sandy Beach as well as in the beach parking lot.

The private beach is owned by the Sandy Beach Association, while the parking lot is town property.

Noonan added, "There is nobody really to blame, but it is a situation that has become out of hand", saying that kids from other surrounding towns now also use the beach as a place for their drinking parties.

Noonan estimated that there had been seven arrests made by his department for minor in possession of alcohol so far this summer.

Noonan acknowledges his position on the earlier closing time will not make some people happy but added he is not trying to punish any residents but just trying to solve a problem within the town.

"I am willing to be the 'bad guy' in this situation", said Noonan, in order to get the drinking element away from the beach.

"I am not out to hurt anyone, and I can tell you that I am not the type of person who will go out of their way to make life bad for any kid", he said, adding later that, "I am on their side and I only want good things to come of this.

"I'm not pointing to all the kids at all, but some groups of kids just go to the beach at night to get drunk which could be a tremendous liability to the town.

"The beach just does not work right now in its' current set-up."

Committee members seemed to agree with Noonan's reasoning. They also noted that consideration should be given to the youths in where they could go to be with their friends.

Chairman Waal said when she was a teacher she hated the "one person does something bad, so everyone gets punished" theory, but that the early closing is a needed evil.

"If the kids are looking for a place to just 'hang out' with their friends and not drink, I think that we should supply them a place other than the beach."

The committee voted unanimously to back Chief Noonan's effort to get Sandy Beach's closing time shifted to 9 p.m. in the interest of public safety when it comes up to town meeting.

Firefighter retires after 51 years . . .

suspenders, said he has seen a lot of changes in the fire department in the past 51 years.

"I went through seven chiefs and now I'm up to (acting chief) Roger Lincoln," he said.

During Dickson's tenure with the department, the population of Cohasset tripled while the number of fire stations decreased by a third.

"We used to have three fire stations. One at West Corner and one at Beechwood by the ball field," he said. "And we have less equipment now, too."

However, despite the reductions, Dickson said there are fewer fires today and they are less severe than before.

"We get such early warning of fires today because there are more people around to see them, " Dickson said. "They never really get a chance to get started."

When the septuagenarian started as a call firefighter, the population was 3,000. Today it's approximately 9,000.

"The ones (fires) we used to respond to were working fires."

He credited the fire detectors and improved electrical systems with decreasing the number of fires.

"We actually have less fires today due to technology and good wire inspections," Dickson said.

Faulty electrical wiring was the main cause of fires in the 40s, 50s and 60s, he said.

"The wiring couldn't keep up with the modern appliances and the circuits would be overloaded," Dickson explained.

"But 12 or 14 years ago they started with the big push for smoke detectors and house inspections," he added. "That's when the fire department began being put out of business."

Dickson said his initial attraction to the fire department had nothing to do with the intrigue of fighting fires.

"When I grew up there weren't many teenagers in the cove, so we all hung out at the fire station," the life-long Cohasset resident explained. "A good part of that group became call firefighters."

He said he decided to join the force on an interim basis for the camaraderie.

"We all went there anyways, so when I turned 18 I joined the auxiliary fire department. When I got out of the military in 1947, I joined the regular call force."

Dickson said he almost became a full-time firefighter.

"In 1954, I took the Civil Service exam to become a firefighter, but after I took it they offered me the job of steward of the yacht club," Dickson explained. "I figured the next best thing was to become a call firefighter."

Still steward of the yacht club, Dickson explained why he chose the yacht club job over the firefighter position.

"They let me take my dog to work," he said. Today Dickson is rarely seen without his dog Sam.

While a call firefighter Dickson also served 12 years as disaster chairman of the Red Cross.

"We'd provide quarters for people who were burned out and clothing."

He said it was logical for a firefighter to serve as disaster chairman.

"It was a complement to the job. We were there" when the disaster occured, he said.

The easy-going steward said while he'll enjoy more free time, retiring from the call force was not entirely his idea.

"Insurance companies don't like covering you when you are 70," he explained.

Retired call firefighter Cliff Dickson rests with his constant companion, Sam. Dickson is due for a break — he has been a call firefighter for 51 years!

Hazardous waste date set

The town will host its fourth annual hazardous waste collection day Sept. 11.

The collection site will be at the high school from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Only Cohasset residents may dispose of their hazardous waste at the collection site.

The board of health will release a detailed list of what types of hazardous products will be accepted at the site next week.

Bill payment okay'ed

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills: $1,262.67 to Civil Designs, Inc. for engineering services for the month of July relating to beach and highway repairs at various sites; and $3,511 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services provided the town for July.

Cohasset's week

United Nations Day set

Selectmen unanimously approved the marking of Oct. 24, 1993 as United Nations Day in Cohasset.

The board acted on the request from Nancy Bush Ellis, who is Massachusetts chair for U.N. Day.

Ellis explained that each year the governor appoints a chairperson for the celebration of United Nations Day in the Commonwealth.

In a letter to selectmen, she wrote "48 years ago the United Nations was born when the U.N. Charter was ratified by the required number of governments. The year 1993 has been a landmark year for the U.N., with its peacekeeping missions in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Somalia, and in supervising elections around the globe. The struggles against drug abuse, hunger, and violations of the Human Rights Convention continue unabated."

Ellis said towns can celebrate U.N. Day by issuing a proclamation to that effect, flying the U.N. flag, and encouraging schools to present special programs, and organizing suitable community activities.

Cohasset citizens are also invited to attend the official U.N. Day celebration at 5 p.m., Oct. 21 at the State House. The theme of the celebration if "the Rights of Indigenous Peoples," Ellis said.

Ellis said interested community groups should call the U.N.'s Boston office 482-4587 for more information about U.N. Day.

Kern steps down

Barbara A. Kern, 111 Atlantic Ave., has resigned from the water resources protection committee and the regional refuse disposal planning committee.

"We accept her resignation with deep regret, she's done a great job and we hate to see her resigning," said Selectman Merle S. Brown.

Common use approved

The Community Center of Cohasset, Inc. will have use of the town common from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 25 for its sixth annual Tag Sale.

Selectmen unanimously approved the request at their meeting Monday, August 16.

No other group has applied to use the common on that day, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Thina Lazar

Thina (Kiritsy) Lazar, 90, of Cohasset, a homemaker and a native of Albania, died Aug. 15 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

Mrs. Lazar immigrated to the United States in 1935 and lived in Dorchester before moving to Cohasset.

Wife of the late Vangel Lazar, she leaves a son, Larry Lazar of Cohasset; a sister, Yanna Socrats of Framingham; two grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Peter Lazar.

A memorial service will be held at a later date in Holy Trinity Albanian Orthodox Church. A private service was held in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Donations may be made to Holy Trinity Albanian Orthodox Church, 241 D St., South Boston 02127.

Ruth Pratt

Memorial services will be held for Ruth A. Pratt in Cohasset at 2 p.m. Sept. 2 at the Second Congregational Church. Contributions can be made to the Cohasset Historical Society in lieu of flowers.

A reception will follow at the Lothrop House, Summer Street, Cohasset.

around town

❑ Here is a headline for you! Ruth Bacigalupo just celebrated her 89th birthday! All of her children were there, including her son Bill who made the trip from Africa for the event. We certainly hope your day was a happy one, and here's to many more of them. A fine lady indeed.

❑ Ken Ekberg was spotted "around town" with a great big bunch of roses. Ken and Alna celebrated their anniversary last Saturday, and we want to send them every good wish! Let us know the details of your celebration; we'll bet it was grand!

❑ Francis Muncey, son of John and Mary Muncey, a mechanical design engineer employed by the Department of Defense, has been transferred to NASA, Langley Air Force Base, in Virginia. He is now living in Hampton, Virginia and we hope he will keep us informed as time goes on.

❑ What will the coaches do now that Allison Ludlow has taken off for college? Anyone involved with sports remembers Allison, as either a manager or a player; she was with the programs since the fourth grade! Remember her as the water girl for the football teams when she was smaller than the jugs she had to carry? Or when she would help the guys warm up by throwing passes? What about her soccer prowess, or her softball abilities. We wish you nothing but the best Allison. Keep us up to date with your latest ventures. Oh yes, have a wonderful year!

❑ Hopefully we will hear more from Eleanor Smith, she recently returned from Europe. Eleanor has lived in Cohasset for 40 years, and her trip included Scotland, Whales and England. We do know that she stayed in some Elder Hospices, and we do know that she took tons of pictures (she is going to show for the senior citizens, who will love to see them). One month must bring back tons of memories, we hope they are grand ones.

"Petals the Clown" was decked out for the recent Fireman's Muster Parade which went from Town Common to Milliken Field Aug. 14.

❑ News from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. More than 4000 students received undergraduate degrees in May, and among them are four Cohasset Stars. William J. Anstead of Linden Drive earned himself a Bachelor of Science, Elizabeth M. Hurley of Highland Ave received a Bachelor of Arts degree, Heather Goodrich Ripley of Main Street also received her Bachelor of Arts Degree and Ian M. Smart of Old Coach Road fame earned himself a BS in Electrical Engineering. We congratulate all of you and wish you luck in this tough job market. vou will do it, just be patient.

❑ Hope everyone saw the front page of the Boston Herald last week, Doug Moe was on the cover! Doug is a worker at the clothing store, Destinations, at Martha's Vineyard and was showing off a special new T-shirt as President Clinton was arriving on the Island. Surely he bought one, it is sure to be a collectors item. And, we hope that Doug has the chance to meet President Clinton and is able to tell us all about it.

❑ Make your plans, Polly Logan and Ted and Julie Guild already have! There will be a Cohasset GOP Annual Cookout, at the Guilds' home (365 Jerusalem Road) with Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci as the highlight. The time is 4:30 to 7 p.m., the date is September 12, the donation is $10, and you all know it will be a super time! Those of you that are interested may call Jean Muir at 383-1850 or Polly Logan at 383-0031. Limited tickets at the door are $12 per person. By the way, Cohasset GOP Town Committee has contributed to Midwest Relief Fund and hope that other towns follow this example. They also make direct contributions to state representative and state candidates, direct mail slate cards to independent voters at election time, send local ads to support local candidates, maintain computer voter files to support Candidate efforts, and do periodic mailings. Support them.

❑ Marilyn and Bill Adams were spotted dancing their way through all of the oldies at the South Shore Music Circus. What a delightful couple.

Recreation department end of season report

By John M. Worley
Cohasset Recreation Director

The Cohasset Recreation Department office will be open only intermittently from Aug. 23 through Labor Day, because of vacation schedules.

Regular hours for beach sticker sales have ended for the 1993 season. However, stickers may still be purchased at town hall, should you need one.

Fall soccer registrations for grades K-9 will be held Saturday, Sept. 11, at town hall.

Details regarding recreational soccer will be coming home via school during the week of Sept. 6.

Registrations for children's after school recreation programs will begin during September for children four through grade three. Fliers will be coming home via school, or available at the recreation office, during early September.

Programs are scheduled to begin Monday, Sept. 20, continuing for six weeks through Oct. 28.

Tennis lessons cancelled

The recreation dept's. summer youth tennis lessons concluded last week with the annual NELTA Novice Tournament. Over 30 players participated in the three separate draws, which included an intermediate boys' draw, an advanced boys' draw, and an open girls' draw.

The girls' tournament was a round-robin format, with Jackie Kahn emerging as the champion and Sarah McDonald as a close second. Amanda Gontary and Rebecca Jenkins rounded out the top four finishers.

In the intermediate boys' draw, Alex Russell took the top prize, defeating Jared Ford in the semifinals and outlasting Greg Boyne in the final match. Boyne reached the finals by virtue of a tremendous come-from-behind victory over Geoff Colling in the semifinals.

The advanced boys' draw produced a repeat champion, as Alex Schwerin defended his 1992 title. Schwerin outlasted Jamie DeMichele to reach the finals, where he defeated Justin Buckley in a two-hour match. Buckley had defeated Rob Buckley in the semifinal round, in a battle between cousins.

Letter to parents

Dear Parents,

On behalf of the recreation commissioners and the playground staff, I would like to thank each of you for your participation in the 1993 Playground Program. I am certain that I am able to speak for the entire staff, saying that we have enjoyed each child this year.

We are looking forward to receiving your completed surveys back, as that information provides us the necessary data to be able to better meet community needs. We consider every comment, suggestion, and observation to be important and every survey will be reviewed. While it is not always possible to make suggested changes, we certainly will try to accommodate the dynamic needs of the community.

Friday, August 20, 1993 concluded the summer playground season, culminating with our annual Family Day Cookout at the Deer Hill School.

At this juncture, all of you must know Ted Carroll. Friday, Aug. 20 was designated as "Ted Carroll Day" in honor of his 10 years of service to playground. Ted began his illustrious playground career as a camper, more years ago than I care to recall. During his employment, Ted began as a counselor, working his way up to playground director, the position he has held during the past seven summers.

While Ted has declared this year to be his final playground season, he will continue to serve our community as a member of the recreation commission. When you see Ted during the next couple of days, please feel free to let him know that he is appreciated. I know Ted well and I know that the one thing that means the most to him is your satisfaction.

The commissioners and summer staff join me, wishing each of you a happy, healthy upcoming year and we will hope to see many of you in other programs throughout the school year.

Information on fall soccer clinic and league registrations will be forthcoming soon, as will program information for other children's and adult fall programs.

After school recreation for children, four years old through grade three begins Sept. 20.

Fliers will be available soon.

Our very best wishes and most sincere gratitude for your interest, cooperation, and participation in the 1993 Playground Program.

College admissions session

An information session on the College Admissions Process and the new S.A.T. will be held Tuesday, Aug. 31, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library (Whiton Room).

The session will be conducted by Leslie Goldberg, a Hingham educational consultant in her seventh year of private practice, and Kimberly Hoyt, Director of S.A.T. programs at the Princeton Review.

The session is free for high school students and their parents from all areas.

For information, call 749-2074.

Wirth exhibit planned

An exhibit of cut paper drawings and illustrations by Cohasset's James Wirth will be displayed at the Clemens Gallery (upstairs) at the Hingham Public Library through Aug. 31.

James Wirth's cut paper technique is a mixture of methods taken from drawing, printmaking, and painting.

While obtaining his degree in art and anthropology at the University of Massachusetts in Boston, James explored the deconstruction of images in one format and their reassembly in another.

Influenced by the process of color separation and color synthesis employed in printmaking, James began using gestural charcoal and pastel drawings as guides for a more exacting cut paper technique.

The utilization of the computer as his primary drawing tool allows him to create the same stylized renderings as in charcoal or pastel but in a computer generated format. This process simplifies the color separation needed in the cut paper process and allows for multiple renderings of a single design.

James is working as a freelance designer and graphic artist. His illustrations have been sold to magazines, newsletters and screen-printing customers (clients include: The New Yorker Magazine, The Oxford American Magazine, Vic Firth Inc. and Goodwin Graphics).

If you are interested in any of the displayed artwork, or are considering a commissioned work, a designing project or a portfolio viewing, please call 383-2053.

Final carillon recital Aug. 29

Sunday, Aug. 29, will mark the end of the 6th annual summer series of carillon recitals from the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset.

The program begins at 6 p.m., and will be played by Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of St. Stephen's.

She will play a varied program of interest to all, and afterwards will host a tower tour for listeners interested in viewing the large keyboard and the 57 Taylor-Gillett & Johnston bells. The largest bell weighs 11,200 lbs., and the smallest about 22 lbs.

The action is entirely mechanical; the linkage connects the keyboard with only the clappers of the bells. There is a tower guest book for visitors to sign.

The recital and open tower will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs will be available both on the Cohasset common and in the church courtyard on Highland Avenue. The concert is free.

For further information, call the church office at 383-1083, or Sally Slade Warner at 508/475-2599 (Andover).

Irish concert Aug. 27

Aisling Gallery will present Dordan (Irish and Baroque music) Friday, Aug. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham.

This is an outdoor concert; bring chairs or blankets.

Tickets are $12 in advance and $15 at the door.

Dordan performs a distinctive mix of traditional Irish and Baroque music with a wide-ranging repertoire

For tickets, call Maureen Connolly at 749-0555.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Finding balance

Water is a precious resource, never more so than when it is scarce.

We in the Northeast have long viewed water as inexhaustible and nearly free.

The MWRA (Mass. Water Resource Authority) is teaching many of our neighboring communities that it certainly isn't free and we don't need to be gluttonous and squander our precious resource.

During the past summer for some North Cohasset residents, they saw a outside water ban for several days in July.

Later, those residents on Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue and part of Hull Street are using an odd-even day system for outside water use as instituted by the Mass.-American Water Company.

But fortunately for a majority of Cohasset residents, the town's water department has not experienced any shortages.

Still, the news of many community water shortages in metropolitan Boston has reinforced the message that we should be conservation-minded.

It's a balanced approach that we could apply to the way we manage our own little piece of ground — our yards.

While emerald green lawns are pleasant to look at, they are not a necessity. In fact, a movement is afoot to use landscaping techniques more in keeping with our climate and soil conditions.

Our love of green lawns is an English tradition. In England, abundant rainfall and cool summers make lawns a logical choice. Here, lawns die without frequent watering during dry spells.

So, many people are turning to native plants and ground cover instead. Natural landscaping provides an environment for birds, helps preserve endangered native plants and reduces the need for watering and the use of artificial fertilizers.

Plus, if you use ground cover, you never need to mow! Many natural landscaping enthusiasts have as their goal the complete retirement of their lawnmower. Others don't take it that far, retaining an area of lawn for outdoor gatherings and barbecues, but reducing it considerably.

Many native plants, like blueberry bushes, are attractive and useful. A naturally landscaped yard does not need to look messy or unkempt– it can be as orderly as its owner wants it to be, and has time and energy to make it.

As more and more people become mindful of the need to live in harmony with our environment, natural landscaping with native plants is an idea worth looking at.

Furthermore, there are several organizations which could provide additional information about using natural landscaping techniques, such as the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, the Massachusetts Audubon Society in Marshfield or the Plymouth County Extension Service in Hanson.

The Whelan residence at 137 Atlantic Avenue was brought to my attention by Polly Logan. I certainly do agree with her that this planting of pink and white impatiens is something to see. The Whelans have cleverly planted the impatiens along the top of the stone wall which winds its way alongside the driveway up to the house. What a beautiful use of summertime color. Drive by and enjoy the view.

'Attaboys' for Adam's Ribbing

To the Editor:

Several hundred "Attaboys'" are due Steve Adams for his expose of the foolishness of MassPIRG in last week's South Look. . He's right; these kind of people long for the power to police the rest of us into behavior that fits their ideological prejudices. I feel sorry for the earnest young dupes who come to the door seeking donations; they have been convinced that they are serving the noble cause of environmentalism and conservation. Not sorry enough, however, to refrain from sending them back to the street enriched only by my exhortations to investigate the organization that is using them. Some of my neighbors are soft-headed enough to bite, and so the activists are funded to continue the meddling that increases the cost and difficulty of providing goods and services to the public.

MassPIRG is not alone; most organizations purporting dedication to Keep Us Green are working like beavers to subvert the free enterprise system and to impose rules of their choosing on the rest of us.

Some years ago, I served on the New England Energy Caucus, a giant committee composed mostly of environmental and social activists whose common denominator was ignorance of the realities of energy demand and production. Those of us who knew something about the subject were numerically overwhelmed, so the recommendations to the sponsoring New England Congressmen were of little practical value. I remember the anger of one young delegate, from one of the major environmental organizations, when she realized that mandated fleet mileage standards for passenger cars didn't extend to pick-up trucks and that some people used pick-up trucks for personal transportation. She declared forcefully that there should be a law prohibiting purchases of pick-up trucks unless the purchaser could demonstrate commercial need! Reminding her that we live in a democracy, with freedom of choice one of our dearest possessions, fell on deaf ears. That's the mindset of these birds.

Volunteer response is paying off

To the Editor:

This is a grateful "thank you" and testament to the power of your papers, from the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Just recently the Mariner papers printed our appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. We're delighted to report that in the first few days after publication, we gained 15 volunteers and the calls are still coming in, both to the Hingham "hotline," 749-2535, and to the area office, 341-4210.

We greatly appreciate the attention you give to activities of the unit and especially to this need which is vital to the help we offer cancer patients and their families in this area.

Lt. Governor Cellucci to meet local GOPs

Julie Guild, chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, has announced Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci will attend the annual GOP cookout to be held at her oceanfront home at 365 Jerusalem Rd., Sunday, Sept. 12, from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

Following a tradition, grill cooks will be Samuel Pease and Peter Guild, assisted by Christy Mihos. Heading salad bar and dessert tables will be Pat Buckley and Martha Gjesteby.

Others assisting are Mark Baker, Joe Busk, Murray Campbell, Lillian Curley, John Flanagan, William Grimm, Brian Jacobs, Lee Jenkins, George L. Marlette III, Kevin O'Donnell, Margaret O'Donnell, Nancy O'Toole, Betty Lou Pearce, Douglas Peck, Dennis Roth, Richard Silvia, Fred Toppan, Grace Tuckerman, Mary Varisco, Judith Volungis, George Watts and Dr. Edward F. Woods.

All South Shore residents are invited to attend but by reservations only. Donation is $10 per person and those interested may call Jean Muir, 383-1850 or Polly Logan, 383-0031. Limited tickets at door will be $12 per person.

Other invited guests will include Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees of East Longmeadow, House Minority Leader Peter Forman of Plymouth, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, County Comm. Bob Stone of Whitman and potential candidates including former Federal Prosecutor Janis Berry of Saugus.

Tom Jones: Still dancing and rocking hard at 53

By Bruce Compton
Special to the Mariner

Close your eyes and imagine a prototype Motown soul singer performing live in his prime: sweat flying off the brow with every explicit gyration — bumping, [illegible]ding, thundering pelvis and hips rotating; charisma p[illegible]sonified via a vigorous delivery of incessant vocal power to the outcries of adoring fans.

commentary

Open your eyes now and — surprise — it's "Jones The Voice," as Tom Jones' native Welchmen have called him for over two decades.

He's now 53 and still entertaining with the drive that makes many of today's rock vocalists half his age look like fairies.

And so it was that the South Shore Music Circus pulled out the rocking chairs, and I mean rocking, Aug. 19, for devotees of "the hardest working man in show business," according to a recent Rolling Stone article.

The certified "hip" showman proved perhaps a bit too hip for the audience at times with his sensuous hip rolls, writhing knee dips, winks, teasing, crotch-tugging, and generally irresistible energy.

Nonetheless, the Voice never failed to endear himself to his loyal, albeit sometimes seemingly shocked audience, most of whom could remember his glory days, and followed him all evening through the 20-plus song split set which ranged from a generous variety of original classics to a climactic medley of soul standards.

The living legend came onstage dressed in a white balloon-sleeve shirt with a black satin vest and white ruffled tie, tight black pants and black leather boots.

Three female backing vocalists who harmonized throughout the show — Jones' bargain basement version of the Ray-ettes — appeared dressed in diverse shades of black. The seven-piece all-male band displayed mismatched outfits with variously colored slacks and shirts with open collars. These musicians were, ironically, much younger in appearance than the crowd cross-section. If they had no uniformity visually, they made up for it aurally, particularly with the tightness heard on Prince's "Purple Rain" cover.

Blue Eyes belting out, "Never want to be a weekend lover..." drew sighs of "Whew" from some of the younger women in attendance. The first true feel good of the evening for me, performed early in the second set, it featured Brian Mulrowney on a wailing electric lead guitar digging up memories of the style of Pink Floyd's David Gilmour (with whom Jones has collaborated in recent years). The rest of the band consisted of a trumpet, trombone, saxophone, five-string bass, electronic keyboard, and drum/percussion section. The band's consistent tightness was the glue of the performance; the excitement they generated might be hard to match in a band which had been around as long as Jones himself.

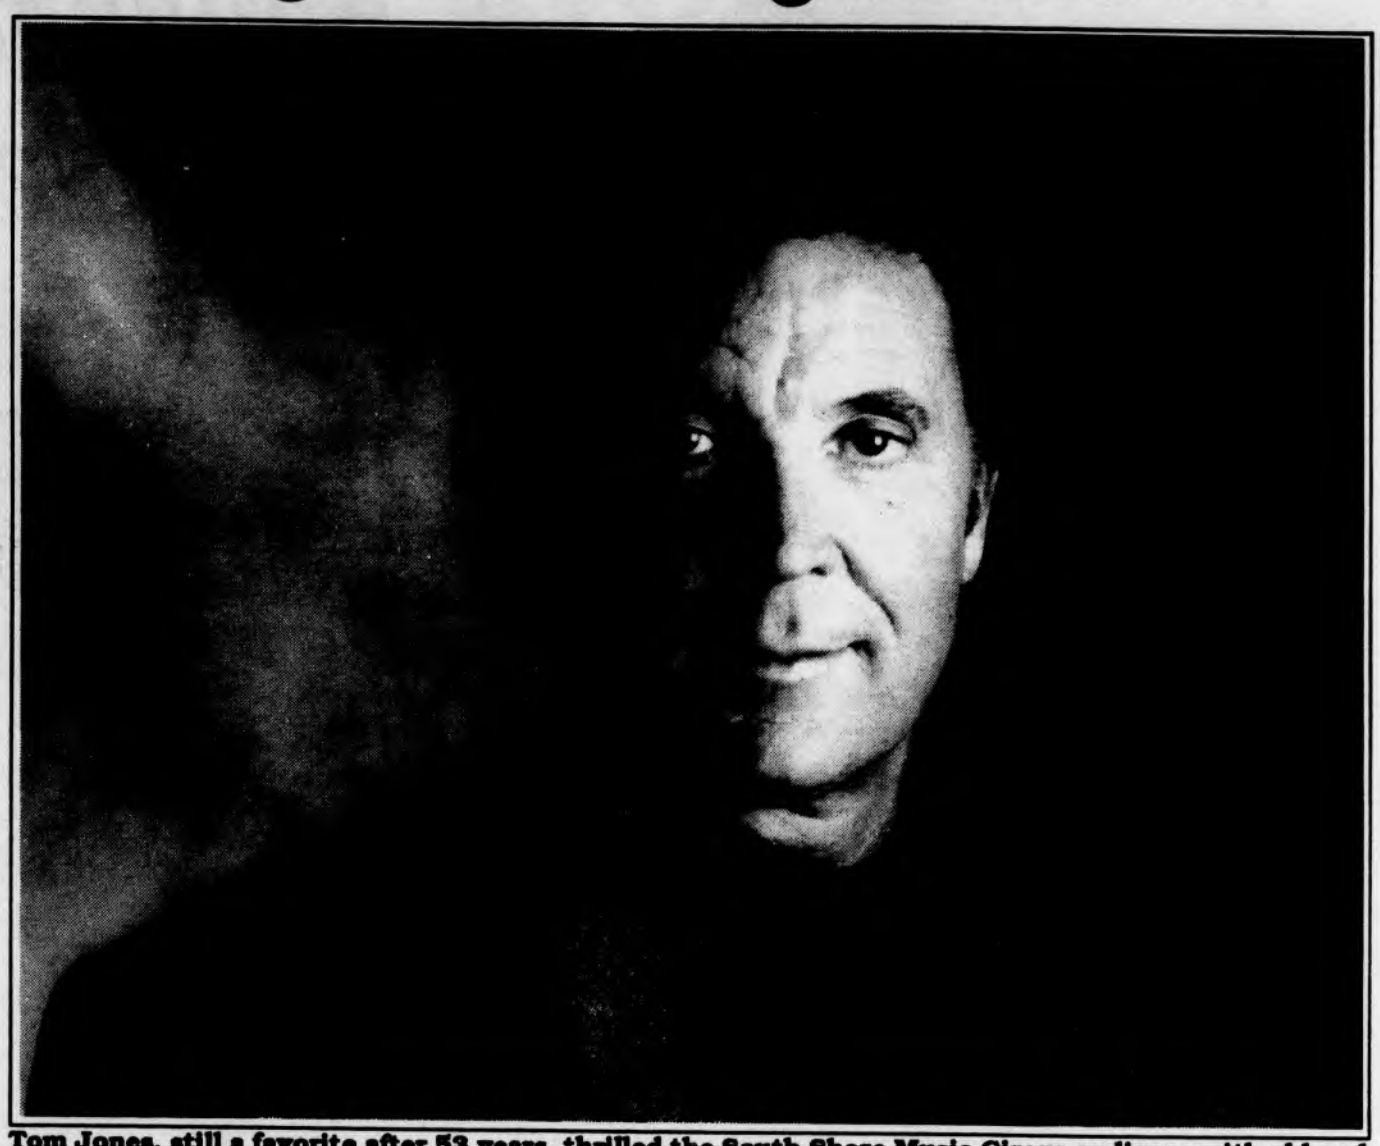
He has been noted for his ability in concert on this tour over the last few months to be able to last for as long as 110 minutes of single-set, uninterrupted music. On this night, though, he abbreviated the first set, apparently not by design; one very thirsty Tom cat had downed six tall glasses of water, along the way popping what we hope were only throat lozenges.

He coughed his way through each of the five numbers of the initial set, sometimes wincing and swallowing repetitively.

If you hadn't been watching all of this, though, you would have thought that he sounded as good as ever. And indeed he did.

Before he walked off for the first time, Jones had performed admirable versions of "Without Love," "Hard to Handle," and "Delilah." A nicely soulful Delilah it was, too, punctuated with the suggestive flirtation and playful antics that the audience couldn't get enough of. "Come Together," a song which he probably would have liked to have performed in concert around the time the Beatles released it, but for some reason didn't, further showed the band's versatility. (Likewise, Elvis Presley, a longtime chum of the Welchman, would war up his vocal chords by singing "Delilah" in his backstage dressing room before concerts, but never performed it live. Lucky flies on those walls.) The accompanying vocal triad spiced up "Search Me Lord," a gospel song"...for all you sinners out there, and you know who you are..."

Jones' versatility in the musical genres has made a number of new acquaintances in terms of collaborative ventures, especially over the past five years. His recordings have spanned a stretch from gospel to pop, rock to rockabilly, and country to R & B. "I'm very versatile," he has said, "and I feel as good as I ever did." The 1988 collaboration with the progressive techno-pop group "The Art of Noise" covering Prince's "Kiss" blasted Jones back onto the charts, since then, he has performed with such luminaries as Sinead O'Connor, Dave Stewart of the Eurythmics, Stevie Wonder, and EMF. His friend since the sixties, Van Morrison, wrote, produced, and performed several tracks for his "Carrying the Torch" project of 1991. Earlier this year, Jones hit the English charts with a version of the Beatles' "All You Need is Love."



Tom Jones, still a favorite after 53 years, thrilled the South Shore Music Circus audience with old and news songs in performances last week.

Last spring Jones received a chance to display his versatility when Video Hits One (cable station VH-1) tapped him to star in and co-produce what has come to be considered one of the best short series about pop music in this decade: "The Right Time with Tom Jones." The show covers a different musical genre in each episode. For instance, Joe Cocker and Stevie Wonder join him on an R&B show; Cyndi Lauper and Daryl Hall lend their expertise with an episode about soul; and on a show about Celtic and country (which Jones sees as connected), Lyle Lovett and the Chieftains join him. The show is not the first for Jones; ABC offered him a program Friday nights in 1969 which included an impressive hand-picked roster consisting of such greats as Aretha Franklin; Elvis; Stevie Wonder; Johnny Cash; Bob Hope; George Carlin; The Who; Ella Fitzgerald; Janis Joplin; Richard Pryor; Sammy Davis Jr.; Ray Charles; Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young, and Sonny & Cher. In support of the new show, "The Right Time," Jones has enjoyed such highly successful promotional activities as recent appearances on Jay Leno's "Tonight Show," "Late Night with David Letterman," and "The Howard Stern Show."

Loosening the collar, Jones dressed down some for his second set appearance. He displayed a thick studded sterling silver belt buckle with a dry black cotton longsleeved shirt and an austentatiously bulky gold cross on a neck chain.

While the audience awaited the reappearance of The Voice, the band entertained with some intriguing music which could have been spawned from the soundtrack of James Bond's "Goldfinger." Jones took the stage and got right into the souled-out Al Green classic, "Take Me to the River," which drew a favorable response. The band fit in a synthesized arrangement for Stevie Wonder's "Superstitious."

And if the crowd had been playing "Name That Tune," they could have named "Try a Little Tenderness" in two notes. Jones offered it"...for all the men here tonight..."maracas and a tambourine being beaten with a stick added some diversity.

Junior Walker & the All-Stars original "Shotgun" was loud, loud, LOUD! Marc Cohn's ballad, "Walking in Memphis" coupled well with the predictably well-received "Green, Green Grass of Home."

Inevitably, they would start showering the stage. It happened halfway through the second set when Jones introduced "What's New Pussycat?" A sudden barrage of roses and women's undergarments flooded Jones' perch. When the dust settled, the final count was, surprisingly, Roses 5, Undergarments 4, (Jones had done the Mexican Hat Dance around some black panties which had landed directly in the center of the stage for the remainder of the set).

In 1969 the Roses would have been out numbered at least fivefold, which just shows the maturity of the audience, and of Tom, today.

On "Help Yourself," the band performed particularly tight, pulling off a virtual clone of the original sound heard every Friday night on ABC 24 years ago. A highlight of the evening, a Motown medley which featured "Knock On Wood" into "Hold On, I'm Coming" and culminating in "Good Music," kept the crowd anxious with each variation of tempo. The medley came together with the band's voluminous rhythm working well with the grooving backup vocalists while Jones bellowed the lyrics with his patented shake and shimmy, which has remained his trademark.

In 1963, Thomas Jones Woodward's self-appointed manager took him to London to promote him; the record companies, however, found him disconcerting. He sounded black and moved like Elvis. The industry was not ready to invest in another white soul singer-sex-magnet. When the label eventually relented and signed him, Jones soon made his own name with two establishing hits; "It's Not Unusual." which was considered too risque for radio air play in 1966, and "What's New Pussycat." Today, Jones' sense of humor about where he is at musically and performance-wise is obvious if you have to squint a little; his gyrations seem parodied — of himself, or maybe Elvis, just as David Lee Roth may perceive himself as a quadragenarian prancing around a teeny-bopper-surrounded stage in spandex leotards. Come on. When a disc jockey of today's younger generation plays a Tom Jones song, it is presented as a sort of change-of-pace entry; the audience doesn't take him too seriously. Neither does Jones himself.

The Voice later payed tribute to his biggest inspiration, Jerry Lee Lewis, during a flaming rendition of "Balls of Fire."

Others who inspired him include Little Richard, Tennessee Ernie Ford, and Jackie Wilson. Jones' more mature fans stayed loyal to the end of his cover of EMF's "Unbelievable." I've always thought of the tune as a rather immature dance number, but Jones' persuasive performance managed to bring it to a different level.

He finished with a splended production of The Art of Noise's "Kiss," the song responsible for blasting off his comeback in 1988. Recently, Jones has been primarily producing covers and collaborating with well-known artists, adding new energy to established hits. There seems to be no limits to the territories he is willing to explore. And with his success in turning to stage gold virtually any genre of material he touches, it remains intriguing just to speculate what boundaries this remarkable musical chameleon may next penetrate.

All-star pitcher has priorities set

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

A no-hitter is special any time. It's something the team, fans, coach and of course, pitcher, never forget, no matter what level of play. Ask any pitcher who has ever thrown one and he'll tell you he still has the baseball that was in play on the final out.

Holding an all-star team hitless is an even bigger thrill. A pitcher goes up against the best baseball players a town has to offer — players that proved during the season they can hit — and sits them down one after another.

Cohasset's Greg Taylor knows the feeling. Three weeks ago the ace of the Mets' staff during the regular season struckout 13 Milton American batters to pace his squad to a 6-0 in the District 8 Stoughton Tournament.

Was a no-hitter all it was cracked up to be for Taylor? That and more.

"It felt good to know nobody on that team got a hit," said Taylor, who also contributed offensively in tournament action with three home runs.

"And they were all all-stars."

Taylor showed exactly what he can do on the mound when he has a strong team playing behind him. He only finished with a 5-6 record for the Mets, but said most of the scored against him were unearned. With the crop of major leaguers on the all-star team with him, Taylor lowered his ERA and rebounded nicely to 4-1.

"The main reason was I had a good field behind me backing me up," Taylor said of his improved record on the mound.

Taylor is no stranger to playing past the regular season and playoffs. He is a four-time all-star in the Cohasset Little League and has improved seen improvement in his play every season. This spring and summer was no exception.

"I think I improved on my hitting a lot and had a little more speed on my pitch," Taylor said.

Taylor will be moving on to the Pony League next spring. The seventh-grader hopes to make the JV squad at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School. He played mostly shortstop this year when he wasn't pitching, but Taylor will go wherever he is needed if he makes the team.

"I think if I really try hard and do what I can, I can probably make it," Taylor said.

Taylor, who plays basketball in the Cohasset Recreational League and Quincy Church League during the winter, enjoys the fast pace on the court. At 5-foot-5 and 130 pounds, Taylor can jump higher than his size may lead one to believe. And he isn't shy under the boards.

"I can jump pretty good and I like to get aggressive and box out," Taylor said.

Taylor is also looking at playing football in the eighth grade, but he first wants to get bigger, physically, so he'll have a better chance to see more playing time under head coach Ted MacDermott.

He is concerned too that going out for the team prematurely could lead to injuries that may jeopardize his chances at continued improvement in baseball.

"That's one of the reasons I wouldn't go out for it right away," Taylor said.

Baseball, after all, is the sport he wants to continue with after high school and through college.

"I think it's more fun than the other two sports," he said. "I like it because I'm better at it than the other two sports and it's more interesting."

Besides, how many no-hitters can you throw playing football?

Kids came first for playground director

The price of the camp was just $140 for the seven weeks, along with a $25 activity fee. Carroll implemented the sole activity fee, rather than have each family pay for individual activities, which was done in past summers.

Carroll believes the parents' money was well spent.

"We offered a great deal for a good price," he said. "We had one of the best deals around."

Parent representative Peggy LoVallo has had three of her children attend camp during the course of the past five years. She believes Carroll's strengths lie in organizational skills and motivating his staff of camp counselors. LoVallo is just one of the parents who has seen the program improve since Carroll took over as director.

"It's a well thought out program," she said. "Ted's attributes are his ability to chose the right counselors, motivate them and keep them busy all day.

"He has taken it from a walk in type of thing to a complete day. It's like a little hidden treasure."

Gail Parkinson, whose 12-year-old twin sons, Sean and Greg, began attending the camp when they were four, had complete confidence leaving her sons in Carroll's care for the day.

"When I dropped the boys off," Parkinson said, "I felt they were safe. I knew Ted would be there watching them."

Over the years Parkinson could see Carroll emerge as the "authority figure" at the camp. That never stopped him from letting the kids bend his ear over certain activities within the camp. His laid-back demeanor, Parkinson said, made the children comfortable. They respected him, but he never made them feel intimidated.

"He would always listen to the kids' input too," she said. "If they liked a sport he'd keep it in. If they didn't, he'd discontinue it.

"He wanted them to have fun."

Since the age of four, neither Sean nor Greg missed many days of camp. Last summer Greg didn't pass on a single day. He wasn't even late.

Parkinson also liked the idea of the surveys that were distributed for parents to fill out at the end of the summer. Carroll always wanted to get an idea of what the parents would like to see implemented, changed or considered for the program in the future.

Carroll made use of the surveys.

The biggest change made this summer was adding the Deer Hill School as a playground site for the 8-12 year olds, while the 3-8 year olds remained at the Osgood School. The Osgood School had been the lone site since 1976.

"They based a lot of the following year's program from the input of the surveys," Parkinson said.

"It was just a different atmosphere," Carroll said. "The kids were more controled in what they wanted to do."

To save time traveling from site to site, a communication system was also added which kept the staff at Osgood and Deer in touch with the Town Hall at all times.

Carroll said the average span of a staff member was four years, and usually held by students working their way through college. It was tough for Carroll to break in new counselors who were not familiar with the way the program operated.

The staff, though, was completely committed to the kids. One of the greatest compliments a counselor received was that the children regarded them as friends and not just a guardian for the day.

"I'll miss the kids the most and I think they know that," Carroll said. "It was just a great position. I felt I was important to the town, but most importantly, the children of the town."

Carroll will still be associated with the playground program as an elected official on the recreation commission. He hopes to be named the liaison between the commission and the program.

"My hands won't be too far away," he said. "I'd like to keep an eye on it from a higher position.

"It's a program that meant a lot to me and I want to see it continue to improve."

"We're all very sad to see him go," said Parkinson. "It's not going to be the same without Ted. That's for sure."

Being in the sportswriting profession, words are the tools of our trade.

The Extra Points Crew has worked long and hard to provide the following short list of slang sports terms for you the reader. If you learn some of these words you can walk proudly into any sports bar in America and converse freely and with authority.

Baseball terms

"Dinger"- stands for a home run. Not to be confused with Dinger Ford. By the way, how does Dinger do it? We don't know.

"Grand Salami"-This is a grand slam or a "Dinger" with the bases loaded.

"The Grand Poobah"- This title, from "The Flintstones," is bestowed on any batter who strikes out three times in a game. If you become "The Grand Poobah" during a game, it's time to seek another hobby.

"Throwing pills"- This means the pitcher is throwing the ball with much speed or "heat." Roger Clemens used to "throw pills."

"Ducks on the pond" — Situation when there is a player on the basepaths. This is a perfect term when referring to the Red Sox. Not too many of them could beat a duck around the bases.

"K" — What Ron Deer will be doing when he's not connecting for a "dinger."

Golf terms

"A Margarita" -This is when a putt rolls around the rim of the cup without going in. For those not aware, a Margarita is a nice tall tequila drink with salt around the rim of the cup.

"Hitting fat" - This means a golfer had a mighty swing but hit the ball too high and not that far.

"A worm-burner" - This is when a shot is smoked along the ground. Apparently, any worms trying to get some air will be burned as the ball rolls over them.

"A wet shot" -This is when a ball is stroked into the water. When a ball becomes "wet" it's time to reach into the ball bag for a new one.

Basketball terms

"Playing above the rim" - This term applies to any player who can jump high or "sky."

"White man's disease" - This term applies to players who are slow runners and can't jump that high. See Larry Bird or Danny Ainge, and Woody Harrelson for that matter.

"Windex" - This is when a player goes up for a lay-up and is blocked by another player who pins the ball to the backboard. Most backboards in gyms are made of glass and when a shot is blocked just right, it makes a squeaking sound against the glass.

"Hands of Stone" - This is from the nickname given to boxer Roberto Duran. He was called "Manos de Piedra" for his punching power in the ring. However, a hoop player with "Hands of Stone" (former Celtic Joe Kleine for example) couldn't catch the ball if he had glue on his hands.

Hockey terms

"Losing a Chiclet" -This is when a

Playing a round of golf with Bobby Orr

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Boston Bruin Hall-of-Famer Bobby Orr follows the flight of his shot during a recent round of golf at the Pembroke Country Club. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Bobby Orr quietly arrived at the Pembroke Country Club last Monday afternoon.

There was no entourage with the National Hockey League's best-ever player as he prepared to play in a benefit golf tourney for the Marshfield High Hockey Program and the Muscular Dystrophy Association. He simply came alone with his golf clubs.

Standing 6 feet tall, weighing around 180 pound and sporting a nice summer tan, Orr looked 10 years younger than his 40-plus age.

But one look at his hockey-ravaged knees showed a man who had seen a lot of years.

Both knees, but especially his left, sported Zorro-like scars around the cap and and along the sides.

The knee injuries cut short Orr's brilliant career and there are many knowledgeable hockey people who think he would still be playing if his knees had only held up.

But there was no bitterness or disappointment in Orr as he began playing golf.

The same fire and competitiveness he had on the ice has simply been transferred to the golf course.

On the course Orr is a power player.

On the 531-yard Par 5 first hole, Orr's drive was the longest in his four-man group.

His shot carried down the middle of the narrow fairway and came to a rest about 300 yards from the tee. It was dead solid perfect.

On the ice, Orr shot lefty. However, on the links, he golfs in the traditional right-handed manner.

"When I started playing golf I hit from the other side, just like in hockey" Orr said as he approached the second green. "But then I switched to the right-side and for a while all I hit was a one-iron. Now, I can't even think of hitting a one-iron. Then I moved up to using only a five-wood off the tee. Now I can play okay, but it took a while for me to learn the game. It did not come easy by any means."

Orr said hockey players make good golfers for many reasons.

"The idea of similar wrist action has some truth," he said. "And hockey players' hand-eye coordination is helpful. But the main reason there are a lot of good golfers is the overlap of the season. The hockey season ends in May or June and that leaves the whole summer to play."

When not preparing to shoot on the course, Orr liked to have fun.

Along the second fairway Brendan Aikens, age 7, was selling cold beverages for the players. Orr approached the boy but Aikens had no idea who he was.

"Do you have any Diet Coke?" Orr asked.

"No but I have iced tea," the boy said.

After buying three glasses, Orr was told the price was $2.

"Two dollars, whoah. I can't believe that," he said with mock indignation. He gave the boy the money.

As he re-joined his golfing group, Orr told them, "Look the kid is running to his house to tell his parents he finally found a sucker."

In addition to having a long game off the tee, Orr displayed a nice touch around the greens.

Several of his approach shots during the first nine holes landed within ten feet of the pin and set up easy birdies for his group. He uses a cross-handed putting style and was quite successful in making putts.

"This is a real nice course," Orr said as he checked out a putt on the third green. On each green Orr repaired the divots and cleat marks of the other golfers, even if they were not in his line of putting.

He said his handicap is eight, but after watching him hit, one suspects it might be a bit lower than that.

The tourney provided carts for all golfers and not having to carry his bags was helpful for his painful knees.

However, over the course of the day, Orr jogged after several of his group's errant tee shots and walked down the fairway of several holes.

On the fourth hole, where the long-drive contest was being held, Orr grabbed a lefty driver from a player in the foursome ahead of him and tried a shot for fun.

The drive sliced way left into the woods and the group of players cracked up with Orr.

"That was a beautiful shot, huh," Orr laughed.

While waiting to tee off, Orr was talking to some players about various clubs available.

"Those are good clubs but I've found it to be true that's it not the gun but the gunner," he said.

Orr's group was making great shots and was six under par after nine holes. Orr hit only one poor approach shot and one poor tee shot. His drives were in the 270-yard range and his long irons approached 230 yards.

At one point, Orr laughingly told his group, which consisted of Marshfield's Pat Roche, Rick Roche and Ed Kilduff, "I'm in a zone. Leave me alone."

At the changeover at the tenth tee, Orr signed more autographs and had a cold drink and a snack.

He only drank Diet Coke and would not touch a candy bar. Instead he chose peanut butter crackers.

"Ugh, no candy for me," Orr said. "You can keep the Snickers."

Orr did not have an extra pound of fat on him and it was obvious he knew what was best for his body.

On the 11th hole, where the hole in one contest was held, Orr hit the ball to within ten feet of the cup.

While killing time waiting to tee off at the 12th, Orr talked for the first time about hockey.

He was talking about a famous NHL goalie who was known for "jaking it" (claiming to be more injured than he really was.) The story involved the goalie getting hit in the head with the puck and laying on the ice for a long time and being taken to the dressing room.

At one point another golfer asked him about playing in a benefit hockey game in Sept.

"Nah. I'm done with hockey," he simply said.

Orr did not confine himself to only talk about hockey.

He talked about the murder of Michael Jordan's father, the PGA golf tourney, the Pink Panther movies and his work exploits with BayBank.

Orr's group kept playing well and eventually reached the 18th and final hole.

"I'm brain dead," he said to his group. "This is our last hole. Let's go get 'em."

Orr saved his best shot for last as he ripped a 300-yard drive right down the center of the par 5 hole.

His shot allowed for his group to reach birdie and finish at ten under par.

"Boy this was a lot of fun," Orr said. "I missed a few shots here and there but all in all, it wasn't that bad."

Orr grabbed another diet coke and went out to his car to change his spikes.

The fish story: Bluefish blitz

By Mark Trask
Special to the Mariner

"I was down the beach about 10:30 this morning and it was lined with fishermen. They were hauling in blues left and right. It was crazy!"

The story was from a woman returning to the beach in the late afternoon to read a novel. The shoreline was clogged with seagulls and other birds, harvesting the schools of tinker mackerel at the waters' edge.

Legions of raucous crying gulls wheeled and glided overhead, seeking an opening at the buffet.

Weary anglers were still heaving plugs into the weedy breakers, seeking to attract well-fed blues that slashed and splashed through the shallows only yards from the beach.

Fifty yards off shore, small craft rose and fell on the ocean rollers as boat-bound anglers worked to get in on the bounty. High on the beach, rows of spectators watched the chaotic scene in the hot sun. The bluefish were blitzing!

To the south, the Plymouth breakwater has been heating up, as well as the channels of Duxbury Bay. Anglers coming into the shop for frozen mackerel and pogies are reporting schools of pogies being chased near the Powder Point Bridge, Two Rock Creek, and out past the bend of the Plymouth jetty.

One fly-fisherman told of spending the day working his line along the edges of the Cowyard up to Two Rock and getting striper after striper after striper. None he got to the boat were keeper size, however. Bluefishing is steady in the channel from Bug Light to the Gurnet. Conditions were marginal for a few days, as large ocean swells and onshore breezes made it tough for small boats.

Anglers working the rocks and ledges from Atlantic Hill to the North River had a heck of a ride, as well. One frustrated fisherman was spouting about the conditions. He was unable to hold any kind of a fishable position at the Collamore Ledges and called it quits. He made out better than the sailing yacht that got too close and was tossed up onto a ledge, damaging its rudder badly player gets a tooth knocked out during a game. As in, "Did you lose a Chiclet?"

"Dr. Hook" - nickname given to a player who uses his stick as a weapon against opponents. Originated with former Bruin Bobby Schmatz.

"The five-hole" - The area between the goalie legs where many goals are scored. By the way, the "one hole" is low-stick side, the "two hole" is high-stick side, the "three hole" is high-glove side and the "four hole" is low-glove side.

"A Policeman" - This is a physical player who throws his weight around to protect the other players on his team from receiving cheap shots. Other synonyms include "Goon" and "Cement Head."

"A Reajan Houle" — When a shot accidently catches the goaltender in a very sensitive part of the anatomy — and the netminder is not wearing a very important piece of equipment. Applies to baseball, soccer and basketball as well. Enough said.

Football terms

"Franchise player" - A player who is supposed to turn around a losing franchise as soon as he suits up. New Patriot QB Drew Bledsoe is an example of this. Vinnie Testaverde is not.

"An East-West runner" - This is a running back that darts around looking for a hole but rarely finds one and loses yardage. Jon Vaughn is an example of this. O.J. Simpson was a successful "East-West runner during his pre-Naked Gun days. The opposite is a "North-South" runner that plows into the line of scrimmage and runs over people. Larry Czonka was a "North-South" runner, as was John Riggins.

"All-Chemical player"-Someone like high draft pick Tony Mandarich or Lyle Alzado who gets his size and strength from steroids and not from the gym. Instead of being "All-American" they are "All-Chemical."

"Game Day" - Stands for a player that loafs in practice but says he will be ready on "Game Day."

Nickname originated with former Patriot Ken Sims, the number one draft pick who never worked hard during practice or in a game. He told a reporter during his rookie season, "I'm saving myself for "Game Day."

"Shank" — A field-goal kicker whose boots are wide to the left or right. Former New York Giant Roy Gerrela was famous for the "Shank" and Ali-Hajji "Shank" wasn't given that nickname for consecutive extra points.

Tennis terms

"Love" — What non-tennis players say after 15 minutes of trying to get the ball over the net. "Wouldn't you love to play home run derby about now?" Talk about a tough sport to master. Hats off to anyone who can do it.

"Fetch" — What player has to do after hitting the first home run of the derby tournament.

To all those serious tennis players out there: We're only kidding about the last section. It's just in there to give you an idea as to how inept at the game we really are. And only one of us can golf without being thrown off the course.

Ever have one of those days when everything goes wrong and there's nothing you can do about it.

Well, that happened to the Mariner softball team Saturday morning when we squared off with MPG Newspapers.

To be blunt, we were beaten like a dusty rug. The score was 20-something for them and two for us.

Now, we could offer excuses for the loss (such as we were missing many of our best players because they needed their beauty sleep) but we will not do that. MPG beat us fair and square and like the Sox, we will keep our heads high and go get 'em tomorrow.

Or to paraphrase that great softball man Ernest Hemingway, "A softball team can be destroyed but never defeated."

Our record so far this season is 2-1 with our two wins coming against the Patriot Ledger. That's a .666 winning percentage and is better than just about every major league baseball team. Rah-Rah.

The Pembroke Country Club is hosting the first annual golf tournament to benefit the Hanover Foundation for Educational Enrichment.

The format will be a "Florida Scramble" for the 120-player limit field. Golfers can form foursomes or sign up individually and be matched with other entrants.

A putting contest will kick off the day's events from 11:30 a.m., to 1:15 p.m. The shotgun start follows at 1:30 p.m. An awards ceremony and dinner will follow play.

Prizes will be award for longest drive in both men's and women's division, closest to the pin (two holes) and first, second and third-place teams. Players will be able to "buy" mulligans for use at any point of play.

The entry fee is $125 per player, which covers golf and dinner. The putting contest and mulligans are $5 each. The dinner fee is $30. Early registration is strongly recommended.

Volunteers are also needed throughout the day. Golf experience is not a prerequisite. For additional information or registration call Joe and Suzanne Recomendes (826-4932), Mike and Cheryl Gallant (829-9145) or Eileen Gautreau (954-4035).

enough that Coast Guard assistance was needed to get into Scituate.

The Coast Guard was busy around the mouth of the North River, as the classic ingredients combined once again to wreak havoc. Ocean rollers pushed by a stiff easterly wind piled up onto the sandbars at the inlet. A swift running tide added the final ingredient to the dangerous mix.

One boater chose to leave his family at Mary's Boat Livery, while he made the run out in his thirty-six footer. Green water was everywhere, as he powered through six- and eight-foot waves into the relative calm of the deeper water outside.

Dave Terry showed why he gets a lot of fish whenever he goes fishing. He has spent most of the year at school in Maine but showed up in Scituate just in time for the bluefish blitz at Egypt Beach. What timing!

Dave bagged a pair, ten and eleven pounds respectively, on Atom poppers. Barry Sladen capitalized on the blitz, catching and releasing sixteen blues, keeping a 12-pounder for the table.

Paul McLaughlin Jr. showed the kids how, flinging his Mambo Minnow to the horizon and coming up with an eight-pounder. Mark Spinale of Framingham connected on the water side of the school. Mark launched from his trailer at Scituate Harbor and, using deep running Rebel Jawbreakers, bagged three nice blues.

Many more anglers took part, and the steady stream of anglers through the shop attested to the popularity of such blitzes. Be ready for the next one!

Elsewhere Ray Davis Jr. and Ray Sr. cast pogie chunks around the ledges along the Easterly Channel and brought four keepers to the net. A 22- and an 18-pounder were kept.

Mike Daly, Rich Chute and the Jackson boys are eating striper this week.

Another angler, who wished to stay anonymous, told of a striper that picked up his bait near Rainsford Island and ran out all the line right to the knot before he got it turned around. The 37-inch lineside sure made it tough on light gear!

Smelt are beginning to show at Scituate Harbor. Several dippers have caught a handful of the tasty fish, so far, but one angler and his wife connected for 46! He stated he was fishing the coming tide from 4 to 8 p.m. using seaworm bits. Action died off as it got dark.

Smelters looking for shrimp might try under the lights at Cohasset Harbor. Clouds of shrimp were seen passing by under the sodium vapor lamps at Lawrence Wharf.

Let's go fishing!

Jury is out on Education Reform Act

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee and Supt. Stephen Hart reviewed key provisions of the new state Education Reform Act that took effect July 1.

"This is kind of daunting," Hart said of the new set of rules and regulations governing education in Massachusetts. "I don't know where to start or stop."

Both Hart and committee member Ralph Kidder have attended workshops on the new laws. They came away expecting many changes, interpretations and amendments would be coming down in the next few months.

More than one enterprising consulting firm has offered to assist Cohasset in complying with the new laws for a fee.

"There's a whole new industry coming," committee member Barbara Bliss said.

School committees lose much of their power over the day-to-day operations of a school system. Although they retain the right to hire the superintendent and

Hazardous Waste Day set for Sept. 11

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Experts say that household hazardous materials make up about 1-1/2 percent of solid waste.

But even a small percentage like that can add up to big problems for the environment.

"In Cohasset we have 2,700 tons of solid waste (annually)," health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik explains. "So 1-1/2 percent of that equals about three tons of hazardous waste."

So for the second year in a row, the health department will conduct a hazardous waste collection day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 11 at Cohasset High School.

This year for the first time the event includes paint recycling.

Organic farming comes naturally to Cohasset couple

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Hidden from view in the woods off Jerusalem Road, White Cedar Farm is no secret to those who appreciate colorfully sweet, organically healthy, home-grown fruits and vegetables.

David Bigley and Alix White are organic farmers who live at and run White Cedar Farm, a "farm within a farm." Holly Hill Farm is a 100-acre farm and White Cedar Farm covers seven-and-one-half-acres of it right in the center.

White is the ninth generation of her family on Holly Hill Farm. White Cedar Farm is a piece of land that White's grandfather, a doctor, bought from his father and built a house on as a retreat in the 1920s.

Bigley and White have created a special niche with their fruits and vegetables that have charmed gourmet chiefs in many area restaurants.

For one thing, everything they grow is organic. Organic foods are grown without synthetic chemical pesticides, herbicides or fungicides.

"It doesn't make sense to grow any other way. It's not healthy to grow with a lot of chemicals and there's no need for it. That was just something we've always

Tuesday is start of '93-'94 school year

Cohasset kids will soon be saying goodbye to summer and hello to another school year.

All Cohasset schools open for a full day of classes Tuesday, Sept. 7.

Kindergartners at the Osgood School have a staggered start with half attending Tuesday and half Wednesday. Letters explaining who goes on which day have been sent home to parents.

Supt. Stephen Hart said about 1800 students are enrolled in the school system — up slightly from last year.

Lunch on opening day is grilled hotdog on roll or hamburger on roll, lettuce and tomato, cinnamon applesauce, milk and cookie. A la carte choices for the jr./sr. high and Deer Hill are french fries and cheese pizza. Lunch prices are $1.35 at Osgood and $1.50 at Deer Hill and the high school.

Osgood starts at 8:55 a.m. and is dismissed at 2:55 p.m.; the Deer Hill day gets underway at 8:25 a.m. and runs until 2:25 p.m.; and the jr./sr. high begins at 7:45 a.m. with dismissal at 2 p.m.

One change parents will see in schools this year is a direct result of the Education Reform Act. Each school will have a school council made up of the principal, several teachers (elected by their peers), an equal number of parents, and a community representative at large.

Cohasset's week

Mariner closed Labor Day

Labor Day will be observed in Massachusetts on Monday, Sept. 6.

On the holiday, all banks, schools, libraries and government offices will be closed. There will be no mail delivery and supermarkets will not be open for business.

The Mariner Newspapers office will be closed Monday, Sept. 6, and will reopen Tuesday, Sept. 7 at 9 a.m.

The deadline for classified advertising for the Sept. 8 and 9 editions will be changed to Thursday, Sept. 2 at 5 p.m. All other deadline for advertising will not be changed.

Deadlines for submission of editorial copy for the Sept. 8 and 9 issues will not be altered because of the Monday holiday.

Pumper bid awarded

On the recommendation of acting Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln, selectmen have awarded the contract for a new fire pumper to Pierce Manufacturing Inc.

At $228,907, Pierce was the low bidder and most closely met the specifications, Lincoln said. The town will also get a $4,000 discount by taking advantage of a partial pre-payment option, he said.

"The award of the contract to Pierce gives the Cohasset Fire Department the opportunity to standardize both front-line pumping engines and allow for maximum efficiency in pumper operations," Lincoln said.

The engine will be paid for through a combination gift and interest-free loan from an anonymous patron. Town meeting voters approved the purchase of a new pumper last March.

Eight-year-old Michael Hawkes, right, and his younger brother Kevin, 5, share a summer morning and some bread with friendly ducks on the Town Common. (Staff photo/Mary Ford)

Moore steps down

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of Barbara Moore from the personnel board effective Sept. 19.

In her letter of resignation, Moore wrote "over the last five years of so, it has been most rewarding to work with the individuals on these two boards. I have enjoyed getting to know my town better and the personnel that serve it."

Doane Street bill okay'ed

Selectmen approved payment of $7,145.32 — the final pay estimate for rebuilding the Doane Street bridge. A state grant provided the money for the project.

Beechwood accident

Late Saturday night, two Rockland men were sent to the hospital following an alcohol-related accident on Beechwood Street, police said.

At about 11:43 p.m., Aug. 28, the 1981 Mercury Lynx hatchback, driven by Richard K. Smith, 35, of Rockland, struck the rear end of a truck which was stopped with its flashers on. Smith, whom police charged with operating under the influence, was treated at South Shore Hospital for minor injuries, Sgt. David J. Pomarico said.

Also injured was Smith's passenger and owner of the car, John Marvin of Rockland.

The Cohasset men, who were loading bicycles onto the parked truck, were not injured, Pomarico said.

Appointments noted

When students return to school, they'll find eight new staff members waiting to greet them. Supt. Stephen Hart informed the school committee that the following staff had been hired: Jill Charles, second grade teacher; Robert Sippel, high school art teacher; Elizabeth Leonard, fourth grade teacher; Francis Fitzgerald, elementary schools' adjustment counselor; Susan Edwards, special needs teacher; Donald Satter, girls' varsity soccer coach, and Corey Hughes, girls' basketball coach.

Former teacher Dorothy Wondolowski was rehired to serve as chairman of the social studies department.

Under the new education reform act, Hart did not have to secure committee approval of the positions as in the past. The hiring was done by Hart and his building principals. The committee retains hiring authority only for the superintendent and assistant superintendent.

School Match award

Cohasset was one of only 93 schools in the country to receive a School Match award. The award is given to schools who most provide what parents want in a school system. The award is based on information complies by Fortune 500 and relocation services.

In announcing receipt of the award, Supt. Stephen Hart said the award had been profiled in a recent issue of USA Today.

Auction requested

South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens has requested to hold a sports auction during their annual tournament at Cohasset Golf Club, Sept. 27.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said he would clear the request with the police and fire chiefs.

South Shore ARC helps individuals with mental retardation, developmental disabilities, and their families.

Lisa Lapointe, the association's public relations coordinator, said the association must increase the amount of money raised through special events to continue providing the highest quality services.

Bill payment okay'ed

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills: $1,262.67 to Civil Designs, Inc. for engineering services for the month of July relating to beach and highway repairs at various sites; and $3,511 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services provided the town for July.

Farming the organic way . .

felt strongly about," White said.

"And I think that the food tastes better," Bigley added. "I think most of our customers agree that when we sell the food, it's good, clean, wholesome food."

With a background as an artist, White said she grows very much with color in mind.

"How things look on a plate is almost as important as how they taste," she noted.

Until that was pointed out to her, she did not even realize she was doing it.

"Gourmet vegetables are fancier," White said. "When presentation as well as taste is important to a restaurant, they want specialty, fancy vegetables."

"We don't grow tomatoes, we grow tomartos," Bigley chuckled.

Instead of growing cherry red tomatoes, they grow orange ones.

"They are sweeter than the red ones," White noted.

They also grow peppers in all different colors.

"We found that growing fresh, high-quality gourmet vegetables was one of our important niches," said White.

Over the years they have developed wonderful relationships with the chefs.

"The whole process," Bigley explained, "began with raspberries. We have restaurants that we have sold to since we sold our first raspberries."

They start calling them in June to see if the raspberries are ready yet.

After putting all their energy into growing the food, to bring it to somebody who really truly appreciates it is a great feeling, they explained.

"They love what we grow!" Bigley beamed, "and it's often only a few hours old. They can't buy that anywhere else."

They call the restaurants in the winter and ask them what they want them to grow. "We're trying to be as diverse as possible, growing a lot of different things with the end consumer in mind," Bigley explained.

"It's an on-going dialogue, which is very special. The supermarkets can buy big and in huge volume, but they have lost their link with the farmer," White said.

This year, however, they were able to do business with the Fruit Center of Hingham.

"It was a good thing to work so closely with a retailer that is close to us, that we were able to serve them very easily.

"They were able to call here and get raspberries delivered that afternoon that we were picking that morning," Bigley recalled.

Their children, Deirdre and Aaron, help out in the fields as well. For Deirdre, her father said, it is like going to a candy store. She loves the cherry tomatoes.

"Everything has meaning to it, and everything has value," White said.

Although their customers are mostly restaurants, they also have a small home delivery business, mainly among their neighbors on Jerusalem Road.

They also have a home egg-delivery service, organic, of course.

"There are other ways to farm other than with chemicals and the chemicals are very expensive," White remarked.

One substitute they use is called "buckwheat," which is a strong, hearty plant that grows fairly tall and suppresses the other weeds.

"It's one thing you're mowing down, rather than all of these things growing up between," Bigley explained.

Buckwheat has a form of nitrogen which stabilizes the nitrogen in the soil, which is why plants exist in the first place, Bigley explained.

One of the big problems with "agribusiness industrial farming" is that when the nitrogen is added, it is often in a form that is not readily absorbable by the soil.

"Run-off" occurs when the nitrogen is not absorbed into the soil, rather it runs off into lakes and streams causing over-nitrafication, Bigley explained.

Bigley was involved with Greenpeace for 15 years and was instrumental in the time that Greenpeace was growing. While living out in San Francisco, he started the first door-to-door canvass that Greenpeace ever had. He calls himself the "elder statesman of canvassing."

A Somerville native, he returned to Boston and started a Greenpeace office in Boston.

"I got into that very intentionally but also learned a lot," he recalled.

White Cedar Farm is a member of Northeast Organic Farming Association of Massachusetts (NOFA), a coalition of consumers, gardeners and farmers working together for cleaner food and a safer, healthier environment.

The common thread between all the farms involved is that they are all small, manageable, and family oriented, Bigley explained.

A hidden treasure chest full of history and dreams to come lies in the woods off Jerusalem Road. It's a very special place, where the people are as real as the food they grow.

Farming at White Cedar Farm is a family affair. Here Deirdre helps her parents David Bigley and Alix White by harvesting some cherry tomatoes. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Hazardous Waste Day set . . .

— the vendor hired by the health department to conduct the event — will recycle the paint for reuse, Godzik says.

The event is for Cohasset residents only. If residents don't have a beach or dump sticker, they'll be asked to show a driver's license, vehicle registration, or some kind of identification that shows a Cohasset address. There is no charge on the day although residents are paying for the hazardous waste collection through their property taxes. Town meeting voters appropriated money for the purpose last spring.

If Godzik has his way — hazardous waste days will become obsolete.

"It's important to try to education people to use other materials," he says. "Then we could eliminate hazardous waste day by eliminating use of those products."

According to Laidlaw Ltd., household hazardous waste is defined as any material in the home that may — because of its chemical nature — endanger human health or contaminate the natural environment if not properly managed.

Items accepted at the collection site are:

• From the house: drain cleaners, oven cleaners, furniture polish, metal polish, disinfectants, pharmaceuticals, arts & crafts supplies, photo chemicals, floor cleaners, window cleaners, dry cleaning fluids, radiator cleaners, mothballs, rug & upholstery cleaners, all types of aerosols, and batteries.

• From the garage: gasoline, anti-freeze, brake fluid, wax polish, engine & radiator flushes, and transmission fluid.

• From the workbench: rust preservatives, wood preservatives, wood strippers, oil-based paint, paint thinner, solvents de-greasers, sealants, asbestos, and stains/finishes.

• From the yard/garden: pesticides, herbicides (except dioxin), insect sprays, rodent killers, pool chemicals, muriatic acid, no-pest strips, cesspool cleaners, and fungicides.

The following items will not be accepted: commercial wastes (this event is for Cohasset household waste only); radioactive materials, explosive materials, ammunition, pathological wastes, compressed gases (other than aerosols), PCBs, controlled substances, and dioxin containing waste.

Special town meeting

Special town meeting is Oct. 25. The special town meeting warrant will open Sept. 13 and close Sept. 20.

Jury is out on Education Reform Act . . .

assistant superintendent, all other hiring decisions have been given over to the superintendents and building principals as long as they adhere to the hiring policy established by the school committee.

Kidder said one of the most significant new additions to the educational system will be the establishment of school councils at each of Cohasset's three schools. The councils must be established and hold their first meeting within 40 days of the first day of school.

The councils will consist of the building principal, who co-chairs the council and faculty, parents and non-parent community members. At the high school level, student representatives will be included. The faculty will elect their own representatives and the PSO will hold elections to choose the parent representatives.

Kidder urged that meetings of the school councils be held during evening hours to avoid eliminating participation by working parents.

"The school councils will have very significant powers, responsibilities and duties," Kidder said. He explained the councils could take a role in developing policies for their individual schools as long as they aren't in conflict with written policies established by the state or the school committee. The councils could impact decisions in policy areas governing homework and instructional grouping.

"I could see them getting very involved in choosing textbooks," Kidder added. "There is nothing in the education reform act regarding the school committee's power over textbook selection."

Kidder also raised the possibility a school council could eliminate, change or add to the school curriculum unless precluded by a written school committee policy. He said he believed the education reform act had a definite urban orientation.

"It was passed with the intention of bringing the community and the principal into control and holding them accountable for the school's performance," Kidder said.

Many citizens supported the act in the belief it would eliminate tenure for teachers and make it easier for school systems to weed out under-performing and incompetent teachers. The reality may be less clear cut.

According to Hart, the new act eliminates tenure but replaces it with "professional teacher status" which is acquired in the fourth year of active teaching. The standard for firing a teacher attaining that status was shifted from "good cause" to "just cause."

Hart added that the process for dismissing a teacher is expedited by eliminating a hearing before the school committee, but the protections for a teacher still remain.

"It could make it much more difficult," Kidder said of the dismissal procedure.

The state will establish curriculum guidelines, testing and performance surveillance policies and can intervene if schools fail to meet the new standards. The intervention can be relatively minor or can involve taking over the operation of the school system in extreme situations.

The act also sets a complex formula for determining the amount a town should contribute to the support of its school system. Towns that do not meet their obligation can qualify for additional state assistance if the failure results from the relative poverty of a community. Towns deemed able to pay can lose state aid if they do not ante up.

According to Hart, Cohasset must field a total school budget for the 1993-1994 school year of $6.2 million.

"Right now we're $125,000 below that figure," he said. Salary increases negotiated through collective bargaining will put Cohasset over the top, as long as town meeting approves the contracts.

According to committee Chairman Nancy Sandell and Kidder, by spending $125,000, the school system will qualify for $166,000 in new school aid. If the town fail to approve the contracts, the schools will lose all $527,000 in state aid to education.

"It's a little incentive for a town to spend what the state thinks a community can afford to spend," Kidder explained.

Cigarette tax to help health ed.

Cohasset schools will harvest $48,766 from the new cigarette tax. The money will be used to support health education programs in the school system.

Supt. Stephen Hart told the school committee last week he would use part of the money to hire a health education teacher to work in the elementary schools and to train a Cohasset police officer to work in the schools in a D.A.R.E.-like program.

School administrators have resisted adopting D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) because they fear it will conflict with the health education curriculum already in effect in the school system. But Hart said the new grant program allows schools to adopt programs similar to D.A.R.E. that stress building self-esteem and role-playing ways to avoid peer pressure to use drugs and alcohol.

"We have started working with the police department and we are applying for another state grant from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs to help with that," Hart told the committee.

The committee also amended the existing no-smoking policy to bring the school system in line with the new Education Reform Act prohibitions against smoking in school buildings or on school grounds.

State law now forbids smoking on school grounds at any time, including athletic events. Cohasset's previous policy forbade smoking in school buildings, but permitted smoking on the grounds when school was not in session. The new law may come as a real shocker for town meeting voters who took cigarette breaks the auditorium entrance.

Although smoking is prohibited during athletic events, Hart said Milliken Field, where Cohasset High School holds its football games, is town rather than school property. That means football fans can smoke at home games, but the crowds at soccer, basketball, baseball and other athletic events must extinguish all smoking materials before setting foot on school grounds.

No smoking will be permitted on school buses at any time.

"The council will be involved with curriculum and policy-making issues," Hart explained. "It's really an initiative for school-based management. (Please see this week's story on the Education Reform Act). The councils must be in place within 40 days after school begins.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the selectmen's office, a representative from the Massachusetts Municipal Association, a community advocacy group of which Cohasset is a member, will discuss the financial impact of the Ed. Reform Act with the Long Range Planning Committee.

COMPARABLE PRICING

QUESTION: How important to the value of my home is the relative value of other homes in the neighborhood?

ANSWER: Very! It is generally best — in terms of long-term values — if all homes in a given neighborhood are in the same price range. Professional real estate appraisers have this theory on the neighborhood's influence on home prices: A home will tend to go up in value if other homes around it are more expensive. It will tend to go down in market value if other homes in the area are in a lower price range. I should also note that this is a good selling point if your home is for sale and is priced below the average for your neighborhood.

around town

❑ Willard and Diane Taylor have great big grins, and for a good reason! Her name is Carly Anne Taylor, the daughter of Laurel and Bill Taylor, who was born July 30 at 9:40 p.m. and weighed in at 7 lbs 2 oz. Carly Anne joins her brother, Scott, who must be thrilled! Her maternal grandparents are Robert and Barbara Clark, who live in New York, but must visit often to see their precious grandchildren. Aren't we with local grandchildren blessed.

❑ Hope everyone saw the front page of the Boston Herald recently, Doug Moe was on the cover! Doug is a worker at the clothing store, Destinations, at Martha Vineyard and was showing off a special new T-shirt as President Clinton was arriving on the Island. Surely he bought one, it is sure to be a collectors item. And, we hope that Doug had the chance to meet President Clinton and is able to tell us all about it.

❑ Marilyn and Bill Adams were spotted dancing their way through all of the oldies at the South Shore Music Circus. What a delightful couple.

❑ A belated birthday greeting goes to Robin Suhrbier this week. We won't give away her age, just tell you that she doesn't look it! Here's to a wonderful year for a fine lady! Many more to come!

❑ While on the subject of birthdays, Norman Swain had one this week. And what a present he is going to get next month, twin girls. Hopefully, he will keep us informed after the grand event, how exciting! Meanwhile, hope your day was a happy one.

❑ A standing ovation goes to four men, Dan Celluci, Mike Ward, Bob Beggan, and Bill Colwill. They were responsible for running a girls' softball team all summer, for girls in grades seven to nine. Every Monday, every girl that wanted to play did so, and there was so much fun involved that they sure are hoping to have the same next year. Good going guys, that's what sports are all about!

❑ Talking about sports, they're back! Double sessions are on for this week, so if you see more than a few athletes looking a little bit sore, you'll know why. We wish all teams a successful season, and hope everyone will be there to cheer you on! Good luck.

❑ Had a nice chat with Ted Carroll recently, as you know he ran another successful summer recreation program this year. It was also his last year as director, after being with the program for ten years. He will go away with many memories, one of which was an unusual one. When Howie Mandell was in Cohasset for his performance at the Music Circus, he took his bus to the car wash that they ran. He was unable to have it done (it is huge), but he still donated $20 to Recreation. Isn't that nice?

❑ A rousing welcome to Calvin Edward Trask, new son of Donna and Philip Trask. Calvin was born August 13 at South Shore Hospital at 7:18 p.m. and weighed 6 lbs. 7 oz. He joins his brother, Alexander Philip Trask. Of course his grandparents, Joan and Harry Trask and Edward and Marie Udas, are thrilled.

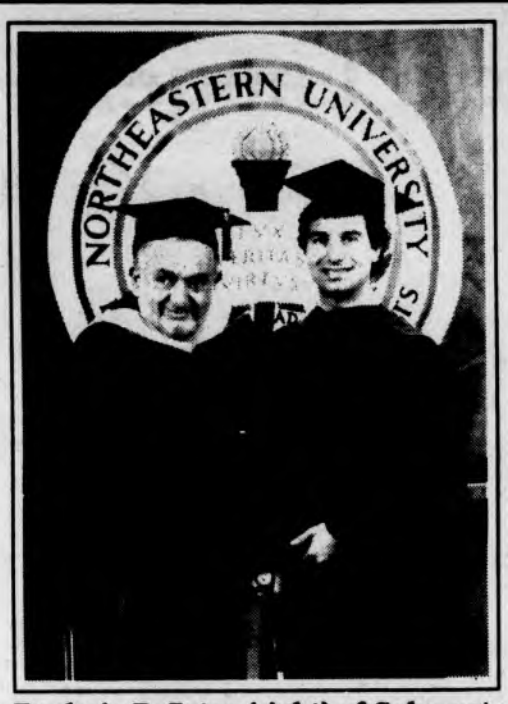
One thing is for certain, he will get lots of love from that big family. Calvin is a lucky little guy.

❑ Anna Sandell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Sandell of 24 Stevens Lane, will be spending the fall and spring semesters studying at Hamilton College's program in Paris, France. Anna is a junior at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. If you have time Anna, send us news about all of your experiences. Doesn't everyone envy her?



Frederic P. Zotos (right) of Cohasset, graduated in June from Northeastern University with a masters of business administration. His father, John Zotos, is a professor of mechanical engineering at the university. Congratulations Fred!

❑ Word comes from Framingham State College that Lisa A. Cheney, a psychology major, was named to the Dean's list for the 1993 spring semester. Good going, Lisa!

❑ Robert B. Harkness, a former longtime resident of Cohasset, received a "Distinguished Alumnus" award in recognition of his outstanding professional achievement, civic leadership and dedication and support for Bentley College. Mr. Harkness, a 1933 graduate of Bentley, is co-founder of Adams, Harkness & Hill, a New England firm specializing in municipal bonds. He served on Bentley's Board of Trustees for 20 years, was elected a trustee emeritus in 1985 in recognition of his contributions. Robert and his wife, Sally, are the parents of five children and have retired to the U.S. Virgin Islands.

❑ Mark A. Gentile makes the news this week. We hear from Salem State College that he made the 1993 Spring semester Dean's List. Hard work pays off. Congratulations!

❑ Tim Maroney Jr. was recently appointed to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation Board of Directors. He has been involved in the March of Dimes as the Chairperson for WalkAmerica in Boston. He also chairs the Income and Development Committee as a board member. He owns his own Direct Marketing Agency.

His wife, Marion, and his two children must be extremely proud of him, as are we all.

❑ Here's hoping that Burt Pratt is feeling much better as we send him this get well wish. A finer man is hard to find.

❑ Finally, don't forget the Cohasset Food Pantry. Word from Ozzie Ingram says they are still in need of donations and volunteers to distribute the food, as well as storing it. Anyone wishing to volunteer at the pantry may call Annette Sawchuck at 282-0050. The 20 local families will certainly be grateful.

❑ That's the news from here. Happy Labor Day!

Travelin' books

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has recently subscribed to a new service from the audio-visual department of the Boston Public Library, books on tape. There are 30 books on tape at the Cohasset library, on loan from the Boston Library for the next three months. Cohasset was the first suburban library to subscribe to this service thanks to Sue Watrous, reference librarian. These Books on Tape are wonderful for travelers in cars or cruising yachtsmen.

Titles vary from classics to thrillers, such as Eye Of The Needle, by Ken Follet, American Caesar, by William Manchester, Stained Glass, by William F. Buckley Jr. and Great Expectations, by Charles Dickens. The complete selection of tapes is located on top of the card catalog at the library.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library have been searching for a photograph of Paul Pratt, other than the one photograph at the library. If anyone has a photograph of Mr. Pratt that they might share or loan to the library for a short time, the Friends would greatly appreciate it. Please call Patty Lambert at the library, 383-1348.

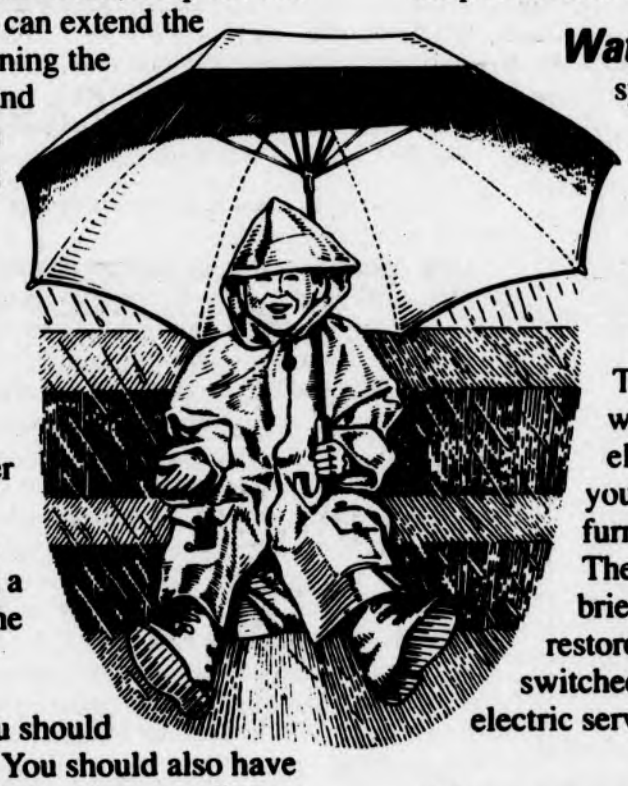
Prepare for Storms Before They Hit!

When little showers turn into big storms, your electric service may be interrupted. However, there are some simple measures you can take to help ensure your comfort and safety during a power outage.

Food... Have canned and packaged foods that need no refrigeration. If you have an infant, keep several days' supply of formula. You can extend the life of perishable foods by turning the controls of your refrigerator and freezer to the coldest position before the storm hits. During winter storms, you can use a picnic cooler outside your home to preserve frozen foods. And don't forget your manual can opener.



Water... Clean containers should be filled with tap water in case your electric water pump or area water supply is affected. Also, you can flush a toilet by pouring water into the bowl.

Medical Supplies... You should have a complete first-aid kit. You should also have an adequate supply of prescription drugs or dietary needs.

Cooking... A fireplace or wood stove can be used for cooking. Gas grills or camp stoves should only be used outdoors. Charcoal grills–because they release carbon monoxide, a deadly poison–should NEVER be used indoors.

Lighting... Camper lanterns and battery-operated lights are safer than candles. And keep an adequate supply of fresh batteries. Propane and oil lanterns are useful. But you need to store the fuel in a safe place.

Radio... A battery-operated, portable radio may be the only way you can get up-to-date information on what's going on during and after a serious storm.

Burning Wood for Heat...
If you have a fireplace or wood stove, keep an emergency supply of dry firewood on hand.

Emergency Generator Safety... If you have an emergency electric generator, please follow these safety precautions: the generator must be UL approved and it should be installed by a licensed electrician and inspected by your municipal wiring inspector. There must be no link between our lines and your generator, because an improperly wired generator could endanger your life and the lives of your neighbors and emergency workers by "backfeeding" electricity from your generator out to the power lines in your neighborhood.

Water Pipes... If your home-heating system is down for an extended period of time due to a winter storm, drain your water pipes and traps. Remember to shut off the main water valve to prevent flooding when the power is restored.

Protect Your Appliances...
Turn off and unplug all appliances that would go on automatically when your electricity is restored. This includes your TV, VCR, microwave, dehumidifier, furnace, water heater and water pump. These appliances could be damaged by a brief voltage surge when the power is restored. Turn off lights, but leave one light switched "on" so that you'll know when your electric service is restored.

Remember to stay away from fallen wires!

Our emergency numbers are open 24 hours a day.

editorial

That time again

It's been a quiet summer in Cohasset. Town boards met less often and many clubs and organizations were on hiatus during July and August.

Still we enjoyed searching out stories about the town and the people that make Cohasset special.

And as always we appreciate your input and your contributions to the paper.

The Grand Tour, the Paul Pratt Library Corner, and Community Lights are just three examples of new additions to the Cohasset Mariner during the past 12 months. Some of you may not be aware that Cohasset citizens came up with the ideas for the columns and generate the copy for them.

We love our readers to get involved and have a stake in their local paper.

And now as the schools open and all sorts of clubs, activities, and organizations get going again — your help is more important than ever.

Let us know what's going on with your group, school, sport, or activity. And if you have a story idea about someone your know — share it with us.

Nothing succeeds in community journalism like being the primary source that you turn to for news and events.

And along with this increased activity — it's a good time for us to remind our readers about our deadlines and drop spots.

The deadline for editorial copy in noon Tuesday.

That means that your tidbits and news items must be dropped off at either of our two drop spots in town: the Colonial Pharmacy or Cohasset News by noon Tuesday at the latest.

Items may also be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025 or the Mariner main offices at 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050.

It's always better to get your copy in well before the deadline. That gives us time to edit it and send it to typesetting before the Tuesday rush.

Please note: whatever copy we receive here at the Mariner is edited at our discretion. And sometimes during production items are cut from the bottom — so it is important to get the time, date and place near the top of your news release.

We welcome photographs taken by our readers. When our staff photographers are not available to cover an event or activity, your help can be invaluable. Photographs may be black and white or color. Please remember to identify the people in the picture and write your name and address on the back if you want the photo(s) returned.

If you would like a photographer for your event, please let us know as soon as possible because we share our photographers with the other Mariner towns.

Questions can be directed to me here at the Mariner at 1-800-649-6661. Please leave a message with the receptionist if I am unavailable and I'll get back to you.

Community Lights

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Less than four months since it opened in May, the Cohasset food Pantry is serving an increasing number of local families and expects even more as the bounty of summer gardens and light summer meals are followed by the rigors of fall and winter.

On the basis of current and expected future needs, food pantry organizers recruiting additional volunteers to handle collection and distribution of food. The pantry, which is supported by local churches and social services is located in the rear of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. next to Town Hall and distributes food each Tuesday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 7-8 p.m.

"We're finding the use of the pantry growing, and we know from experience of other pantries that there will be a greater need in the fall," Margie Steele, chair of the steering committee, says. "We have been fortunate in having enough food to satisfy the demand to date, but we could use more volunteers to help with the storing and distribution of food."

At present the pantry helps about 20 local families by providing good, quality supplemental food and household supplies. The food comes from donations by churches and other organizations, individuals, and through purchases at the Boston Food Bank. Recently Cohasset Savings Bank joined in encouraging and arranging for food donations.

Volunteers are needed especially for the hours when the Pantry is open and are asked for only a minimal amount of time convenient to them. Anyone wishing to learn more about volunteering at the Pantry, may call Annette Sawchuck at 383-0050.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

Volunteers are asked to pledge only one trip per month scheduled at their convenience and are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Katherine Andrews, 17, of Cohasset, has been involved in the junior volunteer program at Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge this summer. Katherine worked in admitting, escorting patients to various areas for tests and to their rooms. She also worked for the hospital's Lifeline program, filing, photocopying, and sending letters. Katherine attends Philips Academy in Andover.

• If you have some time to share and want to make a difference in your town — then how about volunteering to serve on a town board?

The following committees have vacancies: cable-TV council (4); handicapped commission (1), zoning appeals board (1 associate), school facilities committee (1), Government Island study committee (1), water resources protection committee (1), and mosquito control committee (1).

If interested, please stop by the selectmen's office or call 383-9900 and leave you name and phone number. The member of the board of selectmen, who serves a liaison to the committee you're interested in serving on, will get back to you.

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Highlights of the Education Reform Act

Following are highlights of the new Massachusetts Education Reform Act, taken from a summary prepared by the Department of Education's legislative office and printed in the department's monthly publication Mssachusetts Education Today. The Cohasset Long Range Financial Committee plans to discuss the law with a representative of the Massachusetts Municipal Association at 8 p.m. tonight (Sept. 2) in the selectmen's office.

✔ Section 1 commits $600,000 annually in revenues from the arts lottery to the children's trust fund. Present law sets this annual commitment by calculating an average day's proceeds.

✔ Section 3 established 14 advisory councils to the Board of Education in these areas: early childhood education; gifted and talented education; math and science education; racial imbalance; parent and community education and involvement; special education; bilingual education; global education; comprehensive interdisciplinary health education and human service programs; life management skills and home economics; educational personnel; and fine arts education.

✔ Section 14 establishes an Advisory Committee on Educational Policy to consider issues common to higher and secondary education. The committee consists of the executive committees of the state Board of Education and of the Higher Education Coordinating Council. It replaces an existing committee consisting of the entire membership of those two boards.

✔ Sections 15-16 amend the powers and duties of the Secretary of Education. The Secretary will serve on both the Board of Education and the Higher Education Coordinating Council, will prepare an annual master plan, and release a report annually to the public on the condition of the public schools.

✔ Section 17 requires the Massachusetts Corporation for Educational Telecommunications to develop a statewide educational technology plan called "Massachusetts Education-on-Line."

✔ Section 22 establishes an "attracting Excellence to Teaching Program" in which outstanding college graduates who choose to teach in the Commonwealth's public schools may have the Commonwealth assist them in repaying their student loans.

✔ Section 23 allows public secondary school students to enroll in Massachusetts public institutions of higher education, where they will earn both secondary school and college credits.

✔ Section 24 clarifies that the state must pay the cost of complying with new mandates imposed on regional school districts and educational collaboratives.

✔ Section 25 allows state employees, with supervisor approval, to volunteer in public schools without extra compensation or loss of salary for a maximum of seven hours per week.

✔ Section 26 allows cities and towns to establish scholarship funds to provide educational financial aid to deserving city and town residents.

✔ Section 27 declares that a paramount goal of the Commonwealth is to provide a public education system of sufficient quality to extend to all children the opportunity to reach their full potential.

✔ Section 35 authorizes school committees to hire and fire superintendents, review and approve public education budgets, and establish educational goals and policies for schools consistent with law and the statewide goals and standards established by the Board of Education.

✔ Section 36 provides that superintendents must publish district policies pertaining to student and teacher conduct. Tobacco use by anyone on school grounds or buses is prohibited. Student handbooks must provide that any student found in possession of a dangerous weapon or a controlled substance or who assaults a school staff person will be subject to expulsion.

✔ Section 37 requires school personnel to report incidents involving a student's possession of a dangerous weapon on school premises.

✔ Sections 38-39 repeal provisions requiring school committees to vote on hiring and promoting teachers, department chairmen, principals, assistant and deputy superintendents, and other positions. It also repeals the authority of school committees to hire instructional and administrative aides.

✔ Section 40 provides that teacher performance evaluations are to be performed by the superintendent rather than the school committee, using evaluation principles established by the Board and any supplemental standards a school committee may additionally impose.

✔ Section 41 establishes a new process by the Board of Education for certifying school personnel.

✔ Section 42 requires school districts to adopt and implement professional development plans for principals, teachers, and other professional staff.

✔ Section 44 provides that a principal may dismiss or demote any teacher or person assigned full time to the school, subject to review and approval of he superintendent. The superintendent may dismiss any employee of the school district. A teacher with professional teacher status shall not be dismissed except for inefficiency, incompetency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher, insubordination, failure to satisfy teacher performance standards, or other just cause.

✔ Section 53 authorizes superintendents to hire principals, who shall be the educational administrators and managers of their school. This section also establishes school councils in all schools comprised of parents, teachers, students, and community representatives and co-chaired by school principals.

✔ Section 55 establishes Charter Schools to stimulate innovation in education and sets limits of 25 such schools which may enroll no more than .0075 of public school students in the state.

✔ Section 61 amends the school choice law by allowing children to attend school in another district that has space available and has not withdrawn from the choice program. Funding transfers to the receiving districts, and districts that spend below the foundation level and lose students are compensated by increased state aid. Participation will be limited to 1 percent of total public school students in FY94, increasing over the next three years to 2 percent in FY97 and beyond.

✔ Section 62 defines the chief executive of the city or town as a voting member of the school committee for school employee collective bargaining.

✔ Section 66 forgives the repayment of emergency education aid authorized by Chapter 493 of 1991. Sixty-five districts and six regional school districts received emergency aid from the Commonwealth totalling $40 million. Repayment was scheduled to begin in FY93.

✔ Section 67 makes all of the bill's provisions binding on all communities in spite of the provision of Proposition 2 1/2 that prohibits unfunded state mandates.

✔ Section 70 creates a commission to formulate a plan to deliver early childhood education services to all three- and four-year-old children at no cost to their families.

✔ Section 72 requires all school districts to submit to the Board of Education by September 1994 their plans to eliminate the "general track" in public schools and establish alternative educational opportunities for students.

✔ Section 73 directs the Board of Education to determine the special education services which are being provided to students as well as the associated costs.

✔ Section 74 establishes a special commission to study the effectiveness and implementation of transitional bilingual education programs.

✔ Section 75 establishes a committee to devise adequate and appropriate funding mechanisms for adult education.

✔ Section 78 requires the Commissioner of Education to file a plan to carry out state assistance for professional development.

✔ Section 79 establishes an education reform review commission to monitor the extent to which the Commonwealth carries out its responsibilities under the bill and the extent to which efforts have brought about educational reform in Massachusetts.

✔ Section 80 directs the Board of Education to prepare a plan to extend the time during which students attend school to reflect prevailing norms in advanced industrial countries and to address students' educational needs. The board also is directed to evaluate and define the amount of instructional time that students now spend in the classroom.

✔ Section 83 provides an early retirement incentive for public school teachers who have taught for at least 20 years.

✔ Section 84 directs the Department of Education to establish a demonstration project to assess models of parent outreach programs in working with families of children 1 to 3 years of age.

✔ Section 85 directs the Commissioner of Education to develop curriculum frameworks for mathematics, science, English and foreign languages by Jan. 1, 1995 and for the arts by Jan. 1, 1996.

✔ Section 86 directs the Board of Education to establish and administer a discretionary grant program to assist cities and towns in initiating Drug Awareness and Resistance Education programs.

✔ Section 87 authorizes a study of the feasibility of establishing regional boarding schools and other educational alternatives for school dropouts and chronically disruptive students.

✔ Section 89 establishes a student initiatives discretionary grant program for conflict resolution and peer training. The program will fund 50 percent of the cost of student initiatives and will be targeted for high-school students.

✔ Section 90 directs the Board of Education to establish new standards for certifying principals and procedures for recertifying existing principals.

✔ Section 93 establishes a commission to evaluate all statutes and regulations related to education and recommend how to reduce the scope of, ease the administration of, simplify the compliance with, and eliminate such regulations, as well as reduce the amount of paperwork required.

✔ Section 95 authorizes superintendents to have access to criminal record information for employees, prospective employees and contract personnel who will have frequent contact with students.

✔ Section 96 requires the Commonwealth to pay the full tuition for wards placed in school districts outside of their home towns.

✔ Section 98 directs regional employment boards to work with high schools and vocational-technical schools to plan for transitioning students into the workforce.

✔ Section 101 directs the Board of Education to appoint an advisory commission that will report on the ratio of students to adults in public schools, assessing the extent of compliance with class size regulations adopted by the Board.

✔ Section 102 establishes a task force on municipal finance to examine all aspects of the delivery and financing of municipal services.

Cellucci to appear at Cohasset GOP event

South Shore residents will be invited to the Annual Cohasset GOP Cookout to be held at the seaside home of Ted and Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Sunday, Sept. 12, 4:30 to 7 p.m. Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci will be honored guest, town chairman Julie Guild announced.

Other invited guests will include Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees of East Longmeadow, House Minority Leader Peter Forman of Plymouth, Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, County Commissioner Bob Stone of Whitman, and potential candidates including former federal prosecutor, Janis Berry. Also invited will be State Committee members Polly Logan of Cohasset and Thomas Barry of Duxbury as well as Town chairmen Harvey Hurvitz of Abington, William Bazley of Duxbury, Donna Hoadley of Hanover, Jeanne Matatall of Kingston, Daniel Webster of Hanson, Richard Walsh of Carver, Bradford Kimball of Dennis, Carl Harris of Hingham, Jean Robinson of Hull, Martin Lund of Whitman, James Kilborn of Norwell, William Dougherty of Rockland, John Clarkeson of Scituate, Barbara Carney of Marshfield, H. Richard Coughlin of Weymouth and Joan D'Alessandro of Pembroke.

Chairman Guild said that President Clinton's tax increase and Governor Weld's tax reduction program have sparked new interest in the Republican Party and GOP candidates; therefore reservations for cookout are limited and must be made by Sept. 8. Donation is $10 per person and for further information call Jean Muir 383-1850 or Polly Logan 383-0031.

Soccer coach likes fresh start

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

For the past 10 years Cohasset's new girls' soccer coach Don Satter knew every player on the team before they were through lacing up their cleats and adjusting their shin guards. There may have been a handful of first-year players Satter had to become acquainted with.

Satter coached at Newton North High School, the Division 1 power that won three state championships during those 10 years.

This summer he coached an under-19 team club, the Greater Boston Bolts. The squad, made up of college players and high school players awarded scholarships, recently returned from a national competition in Phoenix, Arizona. The Bolts are the first Greater Boston team to go so deep into a tournament.

On the first official day of practice Monday, Satter had the girls write their names on a piece of athletic tape and stick it to the back of their practice shirts, which made it easier to identify a player whose skills stood out.

"Normally you're coming into the new season and you just have to learn the new kids," he said.

But Satter sees the benefit of not knowing any of the players. Out go the reputations and laurels of seasons past. Satter will judge his athletes by what they do on the soccer field. Period.

"I tried to use the fact that I have no preconceived notion to an advantage," Satter said. "I'm trying to go by what I'm seeing, rather than someone's telling me about them.

"I'm trying to build it from ground zero."

The girls attended double sessions, for a total of five hours on Monday. Satter was satisfied with the girls' performance on the first day of practice. He says he'll be mainly evaluating the level of talent to determine who'll play on varsity and which girls will be members of the JV squad.

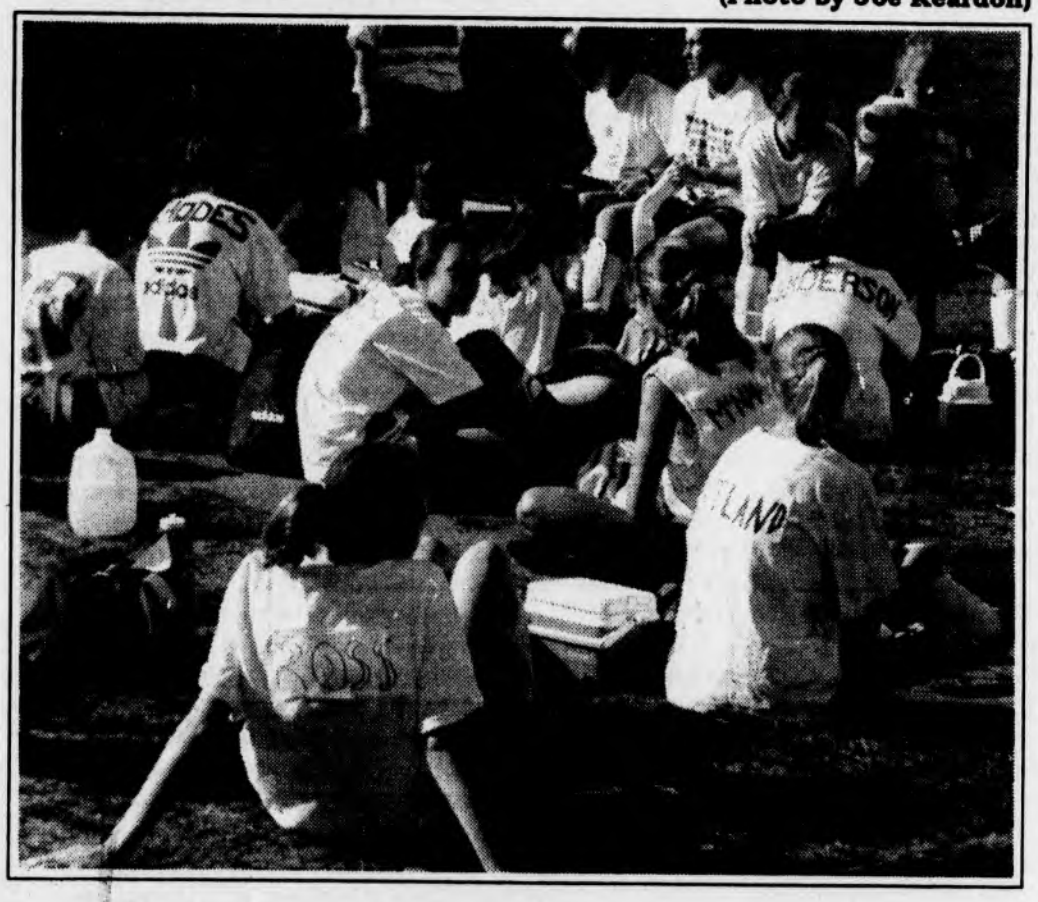
"I'm trying to see where the talent level is at," Satter said. "I was impressed with the talent and technical ability we have.

"I'm very enthused. Even moreso after working with the kids. The kids had a good work ethic."

Satter named juniors Katy Carroll, Erin Murphy and Tracy Conner, and seniors Sarah Atherton and Vicky Maynard as "kids that stood out today."

The new coach in town was expected to learn even more about the club in its September 1 game against Hingham. Friday, the Skippers travel to Keene, New Hampshire for two games over the weekend. Satter also scheduled Belmont and Notre Dame of Hingham for scrimmage games next week.

"Obviously those will give me a better feel of where we're at," Satter said.



Boys' soccer should match top teams

By Joe Reardon

Keith Clark believes it's important to get off to a solid start on the South Shore League varsity soccer season. So Cohasset's head coach has amassed a tough preseason schedule. In short, Clark is wasting no time throwing his squad headlong into game situations.

The Skippers, 14-3-1 in '92, were scheduled to take on Division 1 Wellesley on September 1, followed by games against Holbrook (Sept. 3) and Duxbury (Sept. 7). Cohasset opens its regular season at Norton on Sept., 14.

"We're going to have a very competitive preseason," Clark said. "It's important to get out of the blocks quick because the following week (after Norton) we have Abington, Norwell and East Bridgewater."

Despite losing 11 seniors from last year, including SSL All-Stars Mike Connor and Doug Ellinger, the Skippers return a several key players from their Division 3 tournament season.

Chris Goodman has a year of experience behind him as the starting netminder, while both SSL All-Star Chris Kondrat is back at midfield and '92's leading scorer, Chuck Endris, is also on Cohasset's roster.

"I think we'll be a skilled team that can control possession of the ball," said Clark. "We're losing the defenders but I'm optimistic."

Brian Duffy is back at defense and midfielder Jeremiah Stevenson, who came on strong during the second half last season, should also give Cohasset a mix of both experience and talent. Another returnee is sophomore goaltender Chris McKenna, who Clark said should challenge Goodman for the top spot.

Swing players who spent parts of the season on varsity and JV include Dave Nothnagle, Ben Redfield, Tom Grecco and Chris Adams.

Clark is more concerned with getting his team ready for its South Shore League season than worrying about the other squads in what he calls a "very competitive league."

"To be honest," Clark said, "I don't study (other teams). I don't know who lost players. Based on past seasons though, Norwell, Abington and Scituate should be tough.

"And we'll be there.

"I wouldn't say any team is out of it, except maybe Hull."

The days are getting shorter, the tans are fading and pretty soon Jerry Lewis will be begging for money on national TV.

Yes, summer is almost over.

However, it is always a bright and sunny day for the Extra Points Crew.

This week we take a fond look back over the summer with a few brief words on various sports and how they affected people in this area.

Basketball- The big story in pro basketball was the deaths of 27-year-old Reggie Lewis while shooting baskets at Brandeis University and the murder of James Jordan, the father of superstar Michael Jordan.

These deaths put sports and life into perspective for fans everywhere. (Bill Buckner's error doesn't seem like that big a deal compared to the plight of the Lewis and Jordan families).

At the amateur level, the elimination of the open high school state tourney was the big news. Modeled after Indiana's famous open tourney (rent "Hoosiers" if you want to see some Indiana history) this two-year experiment never really grabbed basketball fans.

And with all other high school sports tourneys based on a regular season merit system, it was unfair for basketball to get a free ride.

Baseball- The roller coaster ride of the Boston Red Sox was the big story for professional baseball this summer.

And with Sox players Mo Vaughn and John Valentin living in nearby Braintree, South Shore fans could feel even more closeness to the Pale Hose.

However, like a summer romance, the luster wore off quickly for the Sox as the losses mounted.

It appears the only way the Sox will win their division is if the team planes for the Toronto Blue Jays, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers all collide.

At the amateur level, the lack of interest in American Legion baseball and the petty behavior of Little League officials were the big stories.

Several Legion coaches told the Extra Points Crew that today's high school age baseball players level do not want to make the commitment to the sport that existed in past players.

Many Legion coaches had trouble filling out a line-up card this summer as players either lost interest in playing or moved on to other things — like the beach.

As for the Little League controversy, towns like Hingham showed how politics can ruin a good thing.

Parents and coaches became irate over the selection process for the Little League's all-star teams and dashed off several letters to the Editor at the Mariner.

Some said the all-star selection process was based on favoritism and politics while others said it was only a matter of sour grapes.

In the end, there were only losers and no winners.

It is entirely possible that the petty behavior of Little League officials and extra points . . .

parents is turning players away from the sport.

The apathy of American Legion players may be the crop parents planted years ago.

Cohasset was a different story altogether. The Major League All-Star game showed just how much the coaches do care about their players. The emphasis was placed more on fundamentals rather than how the squad rated in the win-loss column. And with the newly-formed Landsharks squad for high school players, athletes didn't have to travel to other towns to play ball.

The South Shore had its usual amount of medal winners in the Bay State Games, while the Rockland 12-year-old Little League squad captured its third District 8 title in the past six years.

Golf- On the pro level, the play of golfers like Greg Norman, Paul Azinger and seniors Jack Nicklaus and Chi Chi Rodriquez continued to impress fans of the sport.

And the third Welch's Ping Challenge Women's Golf Tournament in Canton was a great success.

At the amateur level, area country clubs' business is booming. Golfers have to call days in advance to get a tee time and think nothing of shelling out upwards of $25-$50 to play 18 holes. (Never mind all those bucks paid to join private country clubs. Poor sportswriters don't join country clubs.)

Also municipal owned courses like the South Shore Country Club in Hingham, are turning back almost $500,000 in profits to the owners, the town's taxpayers.

With the SSCC as an example, municipal owned courses may be the fiscal wave of the future.

Tennis- The stabbing of top women's players Monica Seles by a crazy fan was the top pro tennis story.

Seles' attack was a reality check along the line of Jordan's death.

In today's society, standout athletes are worshipped like Rock and Roll stars and we all know what can happen when fans go overboard for Rock stars. (Hello John Lennon.)

At the amateur level, high schools such as Hingham, Duxbury, Silver Lake and Scituate continue to crank out winning tennis programs despite graduations and coaching changes.

We guess tennis is finally reaching the masses. No longer is the sport reserved for the Chad's, Chip's and Skippy's of the world.

Although the two of us have our byline at the top of this column, we each write our own separate thoughts and views concerning certain topics and issues. When a controversey emerges, however, we both stand by the others' copy, even when it comes to particular statements that are looked on by the two of us as being tongue-in-cheek (ie, Scott Wahle). If we didn't defend the others' opinion, they'd be two different columns. And that's not what we wanted to do. We're both willing to take the heat for what the other has written, and have on a handful of occasions. We just have to grin and bear it. As in sports, teammates stick up for one another. If they didn't, just think of how few bench-clearing brawls there would be. Neither of us, though, want to take on Hingham in a free-for-all on Main Street. Or any other Mariner town for that matter.

Chi Kung event

Visiting Tai Chi & Chi Kung master Wei Lun Huang has been scheduled in a return visit for two workshops focusing on Chi Kung (internal energy practice). The Chi Kung workshop, for which no previous experience is necessary, will be held Fri. Sept 10, 7 to 9 p.m. Cost will be $50. This workshop is beginner level and open to the public.

Sept. 11/12 Master Huang will teach part one of the rare Liu He Ba Fa form, which blends the distinguishing features of China's three internal treasures, Hsing I, Ba Gua and Tai Chi. Previous martial arts experience is recommended.

The cost $145.

Preregistration is recommended.

For further information contact John Loupos at WLA, Cohasset.

Bike Fest set

Local cyclists of all levels are invited to join the 5th annual Oceanside Bike Fest, North & South, Sept. 18 and 19. The bike event, which is offered by the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is the only local tour to offer cyclists a scenic, oceanside route on either the North or South Shore.

Funds raised from Oceanside Bike Fest, North & South, will help the Massachusetts Chapter provide vital support services to thousands of local families affected by MS, as well as support the national MS research effort.

For information about the Oceanside Bike Fest call the MS Society at (617) 890-4990.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS SUPERIOR COURT NORFOLK, ss.

No. 93-1874

To JOHN STUART DEAN AND MIA Y. DEAN and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended

GREETING:

Cohasset Savings Bank Claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in Meadow Lane, Cohasset, County of Norfolk, Massachusetts given by John Stuart Dean and Mia Y. Dean to Cohasset Savings Bank dated April 14, 1978 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in book 5452 page 698 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before October 8, 1993 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, Robert L. Steadman, Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 19th day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Newcomers to meet

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its 1993-94 kick-off social Sunday, Sept. 12 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

The gathering will provide an opportunity for all members to get together and discuss upcoming events. All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents experiencing a change in life-style are invited to join. R.S.V.P. by Sept. 9. To R.S.V.P. or for more information, please call 383-6078.

Piano lessons available

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, has resumed her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset.

Mrs. Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member and past president of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood, and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts.

For further information, call 383-1487.

September blood drive

The American Red Cross will sponsor a Blood Drive Tuesday, Sept. 28, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Cohasset Comm./Unitarian Church, 23 No. Main St.

DEPRESSION

My roommate was depressed. More than the blues. I mean seriously depressed.

She always looked sad. Cried a lot. She couldn't sleep, eat, or do any of her work.

Treat it! Defeat it!

Most of the time she wouldn't talk to me. I just couldn't reach her.

I figured she needed to get professional help, before her pain got worse. So I checked it out.

I was amazed. Once her depression was diagnosed, treatment was effective and began to work within a few weeks.

Red Fox Lane homes on the horizon

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The prospect of new houses being built on Red Fox Lane has come one step closer to reality.

Tuesday night the health board gave the property owner David G. Mitchell variances for two of the three lots which are on a cul-de-sac off Route 3A near the Super Stop & Shop. The subdivision is

New cable-TV rates impact Cohasset customers

Cable bills for most customers in Scituate, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Hanover and Norwell have changed.

Continental Cablevision implemented a new cable rate schedule effective Sept. 1 to comply with new Federal Communication Commission (FCC) regulations.

Some subscribers will see rates decline, but the impact will vary from customer to customer.

"The precise impact of these changes will vary according to the particular cable services and equipment purchased by each subscriber," said Joseph Hayes, general manager for the six-town system. "Bills for some subscribers will dramatically decrease, while bills for other subscribers will increase or show little change.

"Continental will not benefit financially from these changes," said Hayes.

The changes include adjustments in rates for cable service packages and equipment fees, elimination of some fees and the introduction of new options for customers.

Under the new FCC rate regulations, cable operators must adjust their rates to either a "benchmark" or average rate determined by the FCC or a rate based on the actual cost of providing a particular service.

"We will not longer charge a monthly fee for an additional cable outlet, a savings of $7.95 per outlet and the cost of remote control drops from $1 to 21¢," said Hayes.

"On the other hand, the actual cost of some services is higher than what we've been charging, so those prices will rise. For example, the cost of standard cable service (52 channels), now at $19.95, will increase as much as $3.45 per month."

Congressman Edward Markey (D-Medford) plans to call representatives from the FCC and National Cable-TV Council before his subcommittee to answer questions about new rates.

His office said it was never intended that through re-regulation there would be an increase in basic rates.

As a rule of thumb, the savings will be greatest for those subscribers who spend the most on cable service and equipment, while the subscriber with a minimal level of service will see a higher bill. Under the new regulations, Continental no longer has the flexibility to subsidize the cost of lower level services by charging more for other services.

"Continental has brought all of its rates into compliance with the FCC regulations in each of our local communities," said John King, company vice president. "Although an individual's cable bill is likely to change as a result of these new rate regulations, the average customer's total monthly bill will not increase, and Continental will not receive any additional revenue. We will continue to do our best to provide quality

Cheerleaders hope to break stereotype

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

One didn't want to get her hopes up too high and the other believed her chances were nill when she became sick.

But Cohasset Junior/Senior High School cheerleaders Melissa Vanderworth and Becky Callentine reached their year-long goal of being selected to the Universal Cheerleading Association All-Star team.

With the prestigious selection, the pair of 17-year-old seniors will travel to London, England the week of December 26 to January 2, to perform in the Lourde Mayor of Westminster New Year's Day Spectacle Parade.

The trip is all the more satisfying because neither Vanderworth nor Callentine were picked last year during the cheerleading camp they attended at Emmanuel College.

"When you get picked as a U.C.A., cheerleader you're considered one of the best cheerleaders in the world," said Callentine, who moved to Cohasset from Ohio, two

Cohasset's week

Train group to meet

The citizens' advisory committee for the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush corridor transportation improvements will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 9 at Scituate High School on Route 3A, behind town hall.

The agenda will include a presentation of the supplementary draft environmental impact statement/report addressing potentially affected resources in the corridor.

In addition, John Greene of the Plymouth & Brockton Street Railway company will discuss commuter bus service.

For further information about this meeting, call Joseph Connor, MBTA project manager, at 722-3422.

Hazardous Waste Day

So for the second year in a row, the health department will conduct a hazardous waste collection day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 11 at Cohasset High School.

This year for the first time the event includes paint recycling. Laidlaw Environmental Services, Ltd. — the vendor hired by the health department to conduct the event — will recycle the paint for reuse.

The event is for Cohasset residents only. If residents don't have a beach or dump sticker, they'll be asked to show a driver's license, vehicle registration, or some kind of identification that shows a Cohasset address. There is no charge on the day although residents are paying for the hazardous waste collection through their property taxes. Town meeting voters appropriated about $15,000 for the purpose last spring. For more information, please call the health board at 383-9900.

Special town meeting

Special town meeting is Oct. 25. The special town meeting warrant will open Sept. 13 and close at 4:30 p.m. Sept. 20. Articles shall be submitted to the selectmen's office signed by the requesting department or the department's authorized agent.

Petition articles require the signatures of 100 registered voters.

Hingham man hurt

A Hingham man is in fair condition at South Shore Hospital following a three-car accident on Rte. 3A by the Super Stop & Shop in Cohasset last week.

Norman B. Caradonna, 69, of Harborview Dr. in Hingham, was making a left turn into the Super Stop & Shop parking lot at about 7:55 p.m. Sept. 2. Police said Caradonna failed to yield to northbound traffic.

Caradonna's car was struck by one driven by Geoffrey T. Englert of Scituate. Englert's car was then struck by one driven by Kerry Finnarty of Scituate. Englert and Finnarty were not injured, police said.

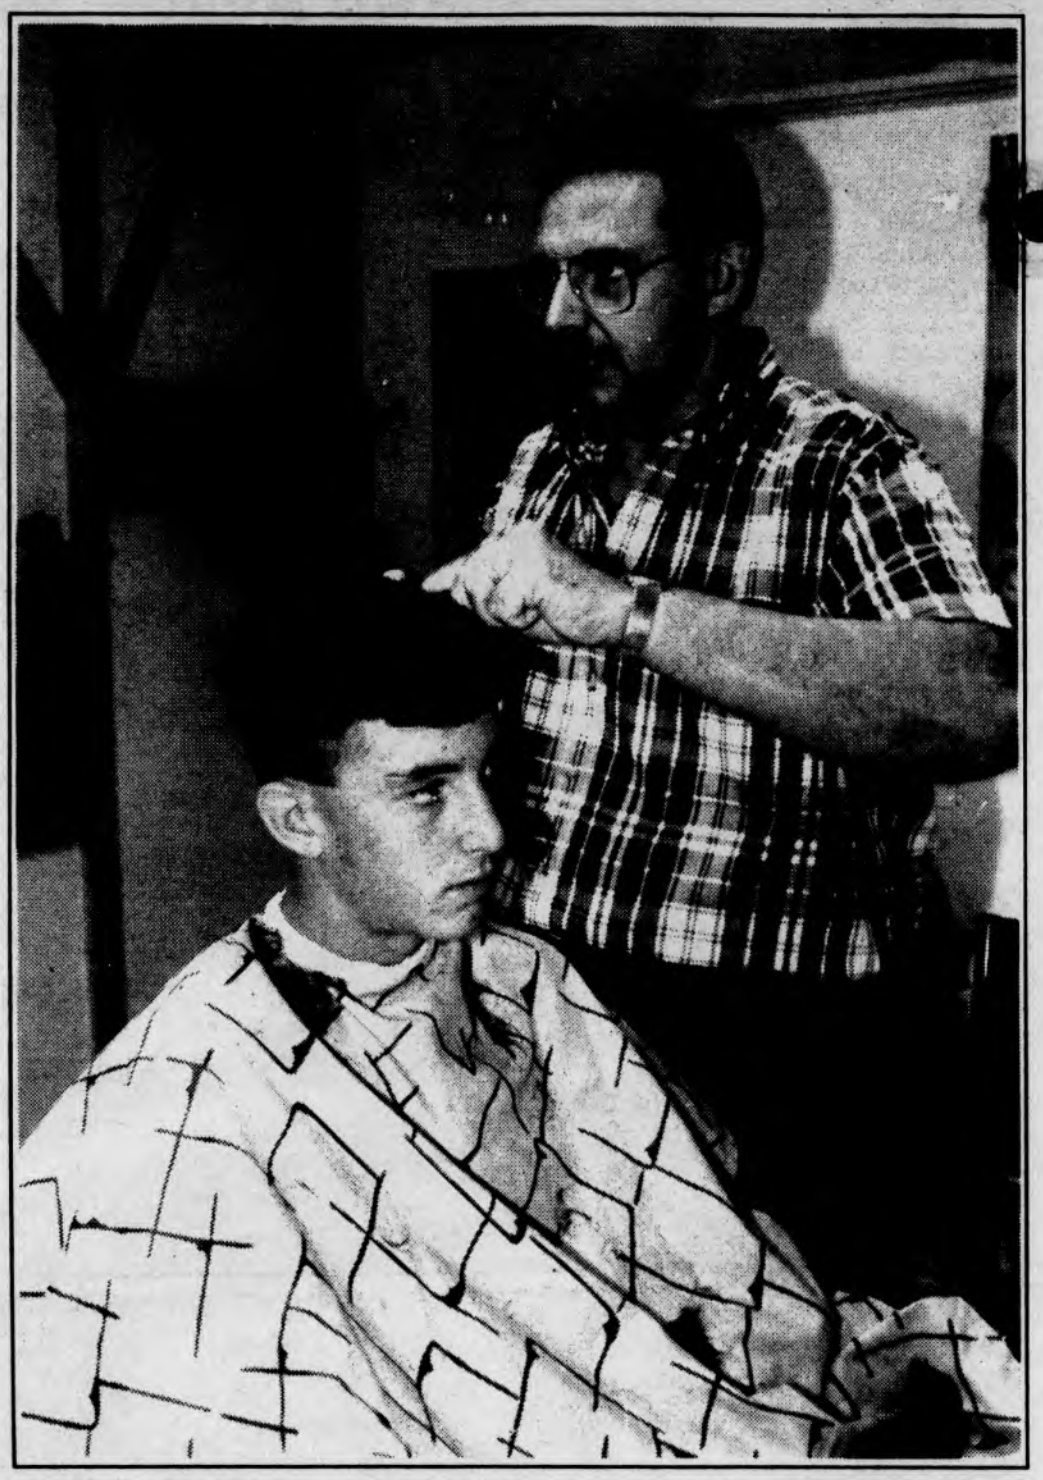
Sgt. David J. Pomarico said the accident is still under investigation but it appeared Caradonna cut into the path of oncoming traffic. Pomarico said the lights at the intersection were working properly.

Waste bans in effect

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

April 1 two more so-called "waste bans" went into effect. The substances which will no longer be accepted at SEMASS, the town's disposal facility, are glass and yard waste. At the present time there continues to be small quantities of glass and yard waste mixed with the rubbish.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.



Cohasset kids started school Tuesday — but last week, they were busy getting ready for opening day. Here John Blante gives Cohasset High sophomore John Whitehouse a back-to-school haircut at Pats Hairstyling for Men.

Viper is bound to bite true sports car enthusiasts

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

In real life a viper is a venomous snake. But in the fantasy world Viper has a whole new definition.

The one that surfaced in Hingham last week is sleek, fire-engine red, expensive and fabulous.

It's a sports car with the price and prestige of a Porsche but with one important difference — this one is 100 percent red-blooded American.

And it's a Dodge.

Dodge, a division of the Chrysler Corporation, wants to revolutionize its image as provider of family transportation into also being a maker of sports cars.

"Dodge wants to get back into the high-performance market," explains Jim Perri, general manager at Weber Dodge on Route 3A. "And this car has really done it."

The Viper has an 180-mph speedometer, a 7,000 rmp tachometer, and has so much horse power in its V-10 engine that Michelin created a 17-inch wide rear tire especially for the Viper, Perri says.

"In the high-performance market, people like muscle cars," he notes. "People want something exotic."

The giant console and bucket seats make the interior look more like the cockpit of an F-14 Tomcat jet fighter than a car.

The 1993 Viper is definitely for the true high-performance car enthusiast with some extra dough. This year's model isn't a car you'd drive everyday — it has no side or rear windows and no roof — and comes with a sticker price of $54,800.

With limited production — only 150 were made in 1992 and 750 in 1993 — the demand has exceeded the supply.

"Only certain dealers can get them," Perri explains. He says the reason Weber was able to obtain a Viper is the dealership's high rating with the public.

For the past two years, Chrysler has presented Weber Dodge with an Award of Excellence for being tops in customer satisfaction. Chrysler officials make this determination from surveys new car owners send to the company.

The Viper, designed by Carroll Shelby, is the product of Chrysler's new Technology Center — a site big enough to accommodate seven Rose Bowls and high-tech enough to turn dreams into reality. One of the cars that Shelby is noted for designing is the 1960s' Shelby Mustang which had a cobra insignia.

The brochure describes the Technology Center as "the place where dreams of future products really can come true."

"The car is the product of cooperative design and development effort put forth by about 80 people known as Team Viper," Perri says. "It was hand built and is not the product of a production line."

Perri, who took the car for a spin, says it handles like a gem.

"It's indescribable," Perri says.

"It's a fun, high-class, look-what-I've-got, one-up-man-ship, kind of car," he adds. "There's been a crowd around it all day."

'It's a fun, high-class, look-what-I've-got, one-up-man-ship, kind of car,'

— Jim Perri, Weber Dodge general manager

being developed by Rader Properties.

The variance waived the two-year statute of limitations required by the town for percolation tests done by the prior owner. There were no significant changes in the plot plans, the health board said.

"All this is, is a time lapse," member Tom Cook said.

"We grant the variance (s) because the plan provides equal environmental protection and (denial) would present undue hardship."

Drainage on one of the two lots granted a variance is creating problems for an abutter, Jim Tyeryar of Chief Justice Cushing Highway. But Tyeryar and the developer planned to meet to try and work out a solution.

The hearing on variances for the third lot was continued until the health board's October meeting. The board discussed potential problems with pervious material under a retaining wall on the lot. Members were concerned that effluent could leach under the wall into Peppermint Brook which leads to Lily Pond, the town's water supply.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik suggested the owner determine where there is an impervious strata and tie the wall into that.

The granting of variances opens up a new chapter for the subdivision. The prior owner went bankrupt and then the bank that foreclosed on the property was taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

• In other business, the board also discussed potential repair of the leaching field at Super Stop & Shop.

• The board also voted to raise the fee from $65 to $75 dollars-a-ton for trash haulers who use the dump.

Teachers' 3-year contract inked and about three percent in the second and third years.

Special town meeting voters will be asked to appropriate $160,000 to cover the teachers contract and contracts for school secretaries and custodians which are expected to follow the same percentages as the new teachers' contract. The money for the contracts is in addition to the $5.9 school department budget approved at the annual town meeting last March. The special town meeting is Oct. 25.

Under the new contract, a first-year teacher with a bachelor's degree will receive $23,234 up from $22,448. At the end of the three-years, a first-year teacher with a bachelor's will start at about $24,000. Teachers who hold doctorates and are at the top step will earn $46,839 this year up from $45,255. At the end of the three years, that teacher will earn $50,200, Supt. Stephen Hart said.

Highlights of the contract include up to two years of unpaid leave for new mothers or fathers, including leave for adoption.

Eligible teachers may also take advantage of an early-retirement incentive which includes a one-time payment of $9,000 at retirement.

And the contract includes a comprehensive new plan for teacher evaluation, Hart said.

Fine manners are noted at the Junior Cotillion

Britt Covell of Cohasset was honored at the Junior Cotillion of Greater Boston Spring Ball held recently at historic Old Derby Academy in Hingham. Britt was the most prompt in responding properly to a formal invitation. Ryan Staszko of Cohasset has participated in the Hingham program for two years. He joined fellow students at a formal five-course dinner held before the Spring Ball. The dinner gave the students an opportunity to practice the table manners and formal place setting skills they learned as part of the Junior Cotillion program. Students enjoyed an elegant evening of games and dancing, complete with dance cards, favors and prizes.

The Junior Cotillion of Greater Boston is a chapter of the National League of Junior Cotillions, headquartered in Charlotte, North Carolina. This etiquette and ballroom dancing program is currently held in Hingham, Cohasset and Milton for sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students. Students learn the customs and courtesies that will serve them from a lifetime.

Topics covered include table manners, writing thank you notes and responding to formal invitations, in addition to many other social skills that will make life more pleasant for them and for those around them. Most importantly, the students learn to feel comfortable in formal social situations.

Registration is taking place now for the 1993-94 cotillion season which begins in late September. Classes are held one evening per month from September through April at the Community Center. Students practice the skills learned in the classes at semi-formal balls which are held in December and April. For more information, please call 749-1836.

around town

❑ Wow, do the Besticks have stories to tell! I'm talking about Earle and Todd! Earle was part of the national staff at the Boy Scouts Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill in Virginia, in the trap shooting area. This happens every four years, and Todd Bestick was one of the members sent to Virginia. There were 35,000 scouts there, with 5,000 staff men. It was tent city, as you can well imagine. There were 1,000 scouts a day trap shooting, so you know that Earle had his hands full.

Imagine 40,000 men and young men, then picture them all with candles one night during their stay! Must have been some sight! We are hoping for a picture when they get developed. Both Earle and Todd (who is in the seventh grade) cannot wait to get back there; they had a wonderful time indeed.

❑ Lots of gals were thrilled last Wednesday, that's when Doris Flint hostessed a tea at her beautiful home on Border Street. Doris, along with her co-host, Alysa Goodrich, invited members of the Amateur Garden Club of Cohasset to a delicious tea, overlooking her gardens (so beautiful) and the gulf. Everyone can take a lesson from Doris, that's for sure. Her gardens are spectacular!

A grand time was had by all, and they are hoping that Doris and Aylsa will do the same thing next year.

❑ Yeah, Phil Smith! He has participated in this year's Designer's Showhouse X in Barnstable, presented by the Conservatory Guild to benefit the Cape Cod Conservatory of Music, Art and Dance. Phil designed the grandchildren's theater/playroom, the kitchen, and a totally new concept in stress reduction and relaxation — a meditation room and spa. All of this is in an oceanside estate and you can still go to see it!

Anyone who knows Phil knows his ideas are wonderful, and his fabrics and designs unique. You can visit the Designer's Showhouse X through Sept. 12. Make plans to go to Barnstable and make a day of it! You know that you will be glad that you did.

❑ Finally, don't forget that Saturday, Sept. 11, is Hazardous Waste Day, to be held at the high school. Get rid of your old paint, cleaning fluids, etc. It is worth it for all of us!

❑ Hope you all had a wonderful long weekend. We sure would love to hear all about it! Give me a call!

Webb/Hooper

At an August 14 ceremony at St. Stephen's Church, Anne Leighton Hooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Hooper of Cohasset, became the bride of Judson Chambers Webb.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Grieve, Santa Monica, California.

The bride's brother-in-law, the Rev. Andrew Carré Hamersley, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Albany, New York, was the officiant. A reception followed at Old Derby Academy in Hingham.

Prelude music was provided by the bride's sister, Ethel Farny on the flute; the bride's nephews, Nathaniel Farny, violin and Caleb Farny, organ; and the bride's nieces Suzannah Farny, viola, and Evelyn Farny, cello. The organist was Robert Barney.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bride's sister Mrs. Rosamond Hooper-Hamersley, Delmar, N.Y., served as matron of honor. John Aach of Brookline was best man. The bride's niece Emily Lange Porter of Saratoga Springs, N.Y. was the flower girl.

The bride is a graduate of The Mannes College of Music in New York City and is employed as a free-lance violinist. She is a member of the Pro-Arte Chamber Orchestra, the Boston Philharmonic Orchestra and Tullochgorum, a Scottish Country Dance Band.

The groom holds a doctorate in philosophy from Case-Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. He is a professor of philosophy at Boston University.

After a wedding trip to Prince Edward Island, Canada, the couple will make their home in Quincy.

Mr. and Mrs. Judson C. Webb

Long division

Remember that teacher that you can't forget? You may not be sure why — but something about the teacher, that year, and what you may have come away with has stayed with you as time goes by.

My fourth grade teacher in Scituate "Miss O'Hern" was one of those special teachers.

In physical size, she was smaller than most of us fourth graders. She wore very, very high heels, had white hair, and seemed ancient to us. Her years as a teacher were like a badge of honor. Nary a day would pass that Miss O'Hern didn't remind us that this (1958-59) was her 26th year in the classroom.

Miss O'Hern loved math, especially long division. And we did a ton of it.

At least twice a day Miss O'Hern would say "I have to go see a man about a horse" and she'd give us several long division problems to cipher while she was out of the room. These weren't long division problems for the weak at heart. We did long division problems that had divisors and dividends that looked like the national debt figure. A single problem could go on for several sheets of paper.

And while Miss O'Hern was out of the room, we knew she really wasn't buying a horse — she was in the teachers' lounge taking a cigarette break. But she didn't have to be there to control us. For the most part, we dutifully worked our long division problems until she returned.

I don't know if kids really do long division anymore. They seem to have calculators for all that. And I can't say for sure if those hundreds of problems done and the keeping all those rows of numbers straight have helped develop my character.

But one thing I do know — is that times were simpler when education and common sense were synonymous.

In a scene that's sure to be repeated in nearly every city and town in the Commonwealth, some of Cohasset's best minds from an array of town boards sat in the town offices last week with a local expert from the Massachusetts Municipal Association to try to come to grips with the Education Reform Act.

The Act — all 100-plus sections with its miles of funding formulas — is now law in our fine state and its repercussions have yet to be defined.

The law is so complex that a cottage industry of consultants has developed to help superintendents and school boards understand all its implications.

Sitting in the meeting in Cohasset, I couldn't help but wonder where we went wrong. When did educating our kids become so difficult that the state with its infinite bureaucracy had to step in?

Maybe the answer lies somewhere between calculators and long division.

Bill for Ed. Reform comes due

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

John Robinson, a representative of the Massachusetts Municipal Association, tried to explain the repercussions the new Education Reform Act will have on Cohasset taxpayers to town officials last week.

But after seeing the perplexed looks from members of the town's long range financial planning committee as he delved into the law's funding formulas — Robinson noted that coming up with numbers for Cohasset was comparatively easy.

"Cohasset has probably the easiest calculations to understand in the state," Robinson said. Many larger towns have more than one school district to deal with.

There are two formulas that each town will grapple with under the new law.

One formula determines the town's foundation budget, a target figure that the state says a particular town should be spending on the schools. This figure is determined independently of what the town is actually spending and will be adjusted each year after any increase in student numbers and inflation are figured in.

In deciding on the foundation budget for each town, the state makes certain assumptions about things like reasonable class sizes and teacher pay.

This year the foundation budget is supposed to grow 2.64 percent. Right now Cohasset's school budget is about $125,000 shy of the foundation amount. Voters a the special town meeting Oct. 25 are expected to appropriate about $160,000 to cover the new teachers', school secretaries' and custodians' contracts — which will put the town over the foundation budget.

Robinson let the panel know that reaching the foundation amount isn't a choice.

"This is not a local option statute," Robinson explained.

Not only do towns risk losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in state aid if they don't comply — but they could face legal action.

"The state calculations are what must be spent on schools — if you don't spend that, the attorney general can get a court order," he said.

The second formula determines a standard of effort.

"The standard of effort is a measurement of how hard you're trying," Robinson explained. In other words, it tries to estimate the community's ability to pay. The formula ties personal income and the property tax rate per $1,000 of assessed valuation to school spending.

The state standard is $9.45 per $1,000 of valuation. Cohasset only spends $3.53, Robinson said.

But Cohasset isn't alone in having a large discrepancy which is common among school districts where the property value is high and tax rate low.

Robinson said different rules apply to each community depending on where it falls with the two formulas. As long as Cohasset meets its foundation budget figure, the town doesn't have to worry about spending more to show effort, he said.

If a town cannot reach its foundation amount — it must find the money from some other part of the town budget, school transportation (which is excluded from the foundation budget), or through an override. Robinson said towns that run into trouble can apply to the state for a waiver.

Elders' driving refresher offered

By Kathy Bryanton
COA director

As negative articles once again surface in newspaper columns about the quality of driving of senior citizens, your Cohasset Council on Aging is taking steps to make available to seniors an opportunity to refresh their knowledge on driving techniques so that they may be aware of some of the failings of us seniors as the aging process sets in.

We are of the position that age is not an item to be placed in the criteria used to determine one's ability to drive, rather it is one's functional ability that should be a determining factor. We acknowledge that some seniors should not be driving. However, we know of other seniors who are 90 years old and both physically and mentally alert and excellent drivers. Is it fair to punish them because of their age? We think not.

However, we believe that all of us seniors should enter into the "55 Alive Program" sponsored by the AARP that is geared to jar us into a state of mental alertness as we get behind the wheel. This program, which will be sponsored by the COA and held at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main Street on Sept. 22 and 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at no cost to our volunteer drivers and $8 to others, should make us more alert to driving hazards. A refreshment break will be provided. To register for the classes call the Council on Aging office 383-9112.

GOP to quiz Cellucci

School bells will ring this week and so will telephones as South Shore GOP members call independents and newcomers to meet and discuss Massachusetts' economy outlook with Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci at the annual Cohasset GOP cookout to be held at the oceanfront home of Ted and Julie Gulla, 365 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Sunday, Sept. 12, from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

All South Shore residents are invited to attend but by reservations only. Donation is $10 per person and those interested may call Jean Muir, 383-1850, or Polly Logan, 383-0031. Limited tickets at the door will be $12 per person.

Historical walking tour

Cohasset Historical Society will hold a historical walking tour Sunday, Sept. 19, featuring Cohasset's historic Town Common and the town's village center. The common features early homes, the earliest dating from 1713, and the 1747 Colonial Meetinghouse. Cohasset's common is an original New England town common, dating from earliest days of settlement of Conahasset. Buildings ringing the common include houses dating from the early 1700s to the early 1900s, representing several different architectural styles. An 1824 Federal style church, an 1850s Italianate town hall and a 1900 English Gothic church are among those to be seen.

The village center is an early residential and business area, with the old Colonial Inn dating from a 1704 farmhouse. Buildings at the center span nearly three centuries of the town's history; those that started as residences long have been combined with small businesses to form the shopping center of Cohasset early and modern days.

The tour will meet at the Common Pond at 2:30 p.m., will view the common, then the center, and will end at the Society's Maritime Museum, Elm St. in the village. The tour will be led by the Society's curator, who will narrate items of historical importance at both the common and center.

The Society's phone number is 383-6930.

Cub signup night

Cub Scout Pack 38 will hold registration for all boys in grades one through five Tuesday, Sept. 14, at 7 p.m. in the Deer Hill School cafeteria. Grade one boys sign up for Tiger Cubs, grade two for Wolf, grade three for Bear, and grades four and five for Webelos Scouts.

Boys who are 11-years-old or older may sign up at this time for Boy Scout Troop 28.

Chamber music, Sept. 18

In celebration of the 15th Birthday of the Unicorn Singers, instrumentalists who have accompanied the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers have joined forces to present a concert to benefit the organization.

A catered champagne reception will follow the concert, which will be held Saturday evening, Sept. 18, at 8 p.m.

Music of Bach, Vivaldi, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms and jazz composer Claude Bolling will be offered by a trumpet duo, a wind trio, a piano-string trio, a four-hand piano duo, a vocal quartet with piano four-hands, and a jazz flute quartet.

The roster of talented performers includes: Ted Haines and Dan Lasdow, trumpets; Christa Larkin, flute; Sally Davenport, oboe; Eric Oddleifson, clarinet; Pamela Johnson, violin; Jane Hallet, cello; Tim Maynard, drums; Carolyn Curtis, Judy Hardy, Dawn MacGarvey, and Lydia Madrick, piano.

The vocal quartet, members of Unicorn Singers, are: Jeanne Scammell, Susan Chapman, Stephen Tooker, and Christopher Pitt.

Reservations for this concert which will be held at Broad Cove House in Hingham, are a donation of $15 per person (check to: BCC/US Chamber Music) mailed to 66 Lincoln Street, Hingham 02043.

Checks must be received before Sept. 16. (Late reservations, by phone at 749-6561, will be accepted Sept. 16 and 17 at $20 if any space remains available.)

For more information, call 749-6561.

AAUW pot luck dinner

The Hingham Branch of the American Association of University Women begins its 26th year with a pot luck dinner. The event will take place at the Plymouth River School Sept. 14, 7 p.m.

Reservations: 848-8122, Membership: 749-5851.

Current members and their guests, as well as all South Shore college graduates who are interested in learning about the benefits of AAUW membership are invited. An evening of good food and conversation will launch another interesting year.

A few of the topics and groups to be offered this year include Women as Investors, Sexual Harassment, antiques, book discussions, gourmet cooking and Spanish and French conversation.

AAUW, founded in 1881, is open to all college and university graduates. The organization is dedicated to promoting equality for women, lifelong education and self-development and positive societal change. A recent example of AAUW's focus was the 1992 national study on gender bias in our schools.

Dance season begins

Donna Joyce and Tiffany Zaniboni Madeiras begin their second season directing the Dance Program at the Cohasset Community Center by having an Open House Wednesday, Sept. 15, 3 to 4 p.m. at the Teen Depot in Cohasset. Call for more information, 383-0088.

Donna Joyce began dancing at age seven. She has studied with Adrienne Hawkins, Jeanette Neill, Richard Jones and Naomi Turner. Miss Joyce received her B.F.A. in Dance from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1982. Since that time she has been a member of the Clé Douglas Dance Theatre of Boston and the Viva Dance Company of Cape Cod. Donna is now director and choreographer of Dance Visions Dance Company based in Hingham. Miss Joyce is also an AFAA certified aerobic instructor and is CPR certified.

Tiffany Zaniboni Madeiras began dancing at age three. She has taught all levels of ballet and jazz at the Plymouth Academy. Tiffany has pursued dance throughout college completing programs in technique and choreography. Tiffany is certified by the American Red Cross, Heart Association and is also a certified aerobic and fitness instructor.

Donna and Tiffany will be offering a variety of classes for tiny tots to teens in ballet, jazz, street funk and creative movement. There will also be an adult jazz class Tuesday evenings at 6 p.m. The community center dance program offers a relaxed atmosphere of learning and creativity in dance for all levels. Classes begin the week of Sept. 20.

Donna Joyce, dance instructor at the Community Center.

Register for Junior Voices

The South Shore children's chorus called Junior Voices begin soon in Hingham, with Tuesday afternoon rehearsal classes for children seven to 13 who love to sing and perform.

Music reading skills are incorporated into the program so new music can be learned by reading notation, not just by ear.

Each hour's activities include games, songs, exercises, and drills, taught with enthusiasm and energy to improve reading and the ability to sing with proper voice production in two and three parts.

Separate levels for beginning younger children (Grades two through four) and older and returning singers (Grades four through seven) will be scheduled, with an over-lapping full group time in which all the children will sing together.

JV's instructor/conductor Margo Euler is the founder and director of The Broad Cove Chorale and The Unicorn Singers. She received her music education at Smith College and Harvard's Graduate School of Education, and has taught music at all levels in the public schools.

Registration for the Fall 1993 program will be held Tuesday, Sept. 21, at Second Parish Church (685 Main St. in So. Hingham).

Junior Voices will be performing as a chorus several times a year. A serious commitment to the weekly rehearsal/class is required. No audition is required, but children considering enrollment should have a strong love of singing, good attention span and ability to match pitches accurately.

Please call Margo Euler for more information about the program at 749-6561.

VFW yard sale Sept. 25

The Cohasset VFW Post #9146 will hold its annual Yard Sale to benefit the Cohasset War Memorial Saturday, Sept. 25, at the rear parking lot of Stop & Shop.

Donated articles may be left at the trailer in the Recycling area on Cedar Street.

Anyone wishing to join in the yard sale or who needs articles to be picked up, may call Louie Longo at 383-0925.

Clothesline art exhibit

The annual "Clothesline Art Exhibit" is Sunday, Sept. 12, from 1 to 2 p.m., weather permitting, in Hingham. Current and former students are welcome. After the outdoor exhibit, some art will be at the Hingham Public Library. Students participating in the Children's Summer Creativity Workshops will have paintings, jewelry, sketches, sculpture and collages on display.

Register now for fall workshops. For information, call instructor Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453.

Youth directors named

First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset is pleased to announce the appointment of Elizabeth and Peter Sandblom as First Parish Youth Directors. Liz and Peter, graduates of Cohasset High School, currently reside in Weymouth. Liz, a graduate of Northeastern University, is employed by the South Shore Mental Health Center where she works with the Emergency Service Department. Peter, a Colby College graduate, is a marketing rep for the Collection Company of America.

The Youth Program began its season with a late summer barbeque held Thursday, Sept. 2, to which all First Parish high school youth were invited. There will be a planning meeting held soon to map out the 1993-94 activities and events. Any youths with questions about the program may call Peter or Liz at 331-5168.

New programs offered

Be ready to fall into new and renewed exciting programs this autumn at the center. Course offerings include pre-school gymnastics, dance, Gym Dandy, For Kids Only, puppet shows, science and nature, and Cooking for Tots. Some programs for older children are Kids and Sewing, bowling clinic, PSAT and SAT math and English prep, Kids' Holiday Crafts, keyboarding, and the Junior Cotillion of Greater Boston. Adult classes include Lotus, WordPerfect, Computer for the Novice, yoga, aerobics, bridge, Tai Chi, CPR, quilting, cooking, and financial seminars. One day workshops will allow adults to bring home their own fall or Christmas centerpiece.

To register for these or many other courses or for more information, call 383-0088.

Cheerleaders hope to break stereotype

years ago. "And I think that's just such an honor."

Vanderworth and Callentine's selection to the national squad marks the first time a Cohasset cheerleader — let alone two — has ever made the team.

Each girl, though, will tell you it came as somewhat of a surprise.

All the cheerleaders at the camp had the option of trying out for the all-star team in the hopes of being one of 1,000 of the best high school cheerleaders in the country on the team.

Vanderworth, who like Callentine is fairly new to the area, having moved from Phoenix, Arizona last year, had her try out with one other cheerleader in front of 300 people. When the pretty blond finished her routine, she was satisfied with her performance.

What neither girl knew was that their cheerleading skills had been noticed during the week of camp and the judges had jotted down their names as two to watch when the tryouts came along.

"I knew I did the best I could," Vanderworth said, "but I had no clue they (judges) had watched me beforehand.

"I didn't want to get my hopes up," she continued, "but it was something I really wanted to do.

"I'm a real determined person. So, I decided I was going to keep trying out until I made it."

Callentine's pick to the team was a huge surprise — at least to her.

The brunette had gone to the camp against the wishes of her doctor. She hadn't been feeling well in the days leading up to when she was scheduled to attend, but decided to give it a go anyway. Unfortunately, the heat only made Callentine become faint and she was forced to go home. She thought her chance at the all-star team was over when she left.

"I was a mess," Callentine said. "I had been working on all-stars. That had been my goal all year, so it was a letdown."

The judges, though, thought different. They told Callentine's high school cheerleading coach, Janet Gillis, that they were in agreement that she was good enough to be included on the squad travelling to London.

Now that they can lay claim to being among the best in the United States, Vanderworth and Callentine hope they can do what they can to break down what they both agree is a stereotyped view of gymnasts in the New England area and at the high school. Both agreed, however, the view of the other students toward cheerleaders at Cohasset has gotten better.

"It's (stereotype) huge here (New England)," Callentine said. "They think you go out for it because you can't play any other sport or make any other team.

"The first year I cheered everyone laughed at me. They thought it was so uncool to be a cheerleader."

"When you make an all-star team you play in a game," Vanderworth pointed out. "We get to go to London."

Cheerleading, Vanderworth and Callentine said, is held in a higher esteem than it is in the Northeast and it is much tougher to make a high school team.

"The tryouts themselves are incredible," Vanderworth said.

Vanderworth tried out for cheerleading as a sophomore at her former high school. Cheerleaders from the University of Arizona went to the tryouts and told the girls what would be expected of them. Among the pre-requisites to even be considered for the team was the ability to do two dances, two cheers, two different splits, kicks "and any gymnastics that we could do."

A combined 170 freshmen and sophomores tried out. Vanderworth was happy to be one of 15 picked for the JV squad.

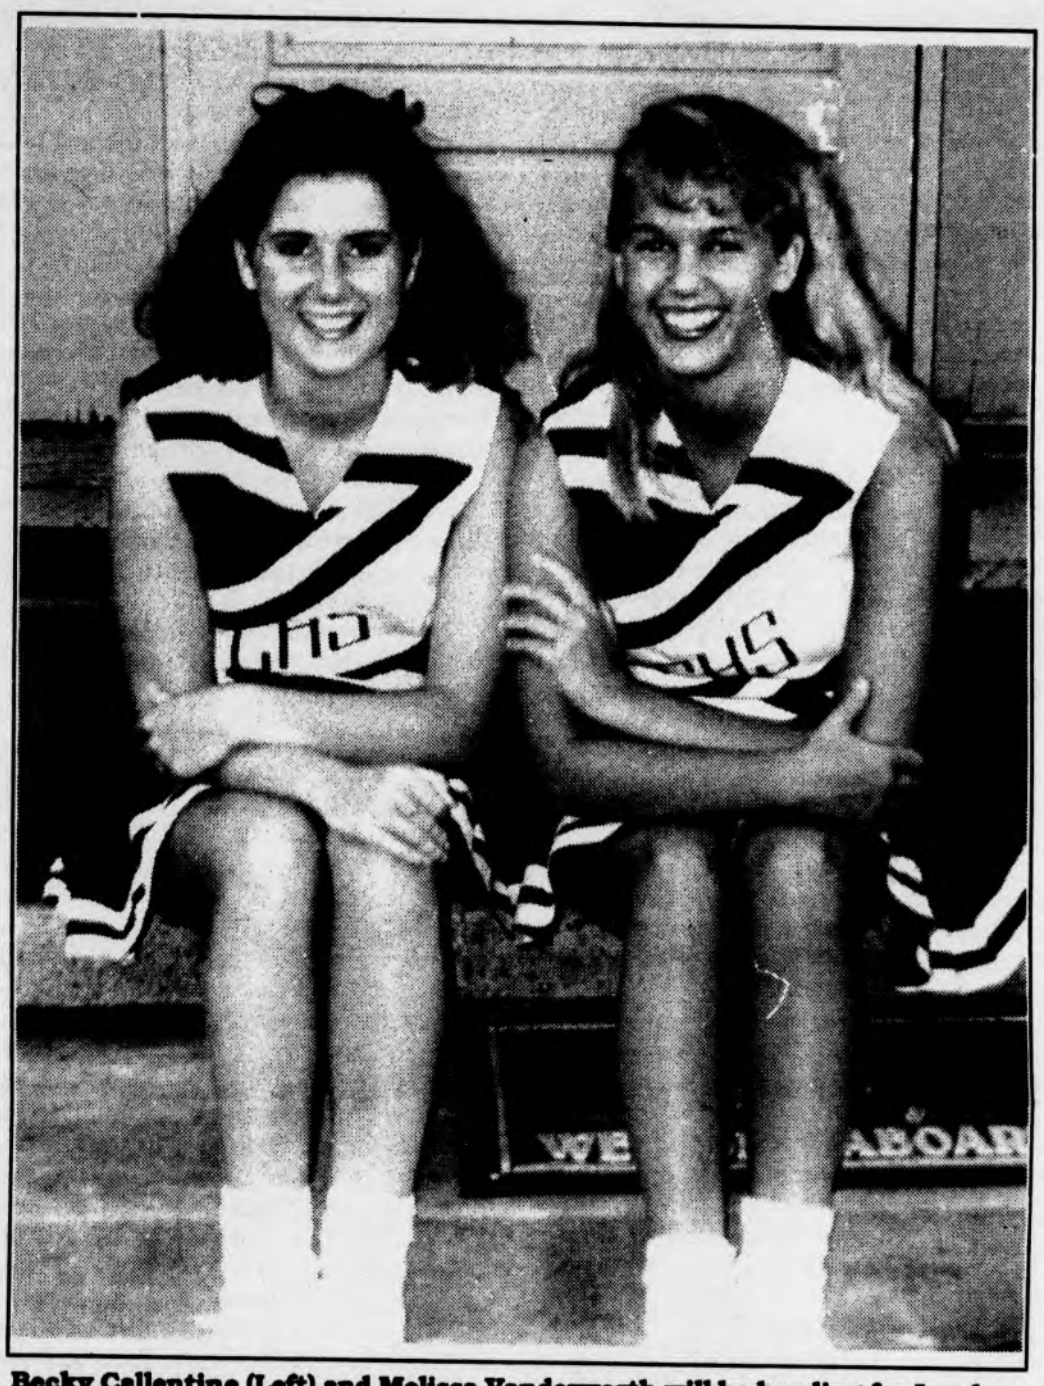
Callentine, who began cheering as a third grader in the Pop Warner League said Ohio was no different.

"It was exactly the same," she said. "When I was a little girl I was told I was going to be a cheerleader."

Callentine has been the co-captain of the football cheerleaders since her sophomore year. Vanderworth was busy moving to Cohasset the same time cheerleading tryouts for the basketball team were taking placing last year. She desperately wanted to be a part of the winter squad so she sent a video tape of her cheering. Her performance was more than good enough to get her selected.

Although cheerleading is not as big in

(See page 14)



Becky Callentine (Left) and Melissa Vanderworth will be heading for London, England after being selected to the Universal Cheerleading Association All-Star squad. The pair are co-captains of the varsity football cheerleaders at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School and the first Skipper cheerleaders ever to be picked to the prestigious team.

Marshfield Road Runners enjoy their in-town workouts

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

MARSHFIELD—You know a running club has a good thing going when runners, not even affiliated with the group, join club members for a workout.

Who could blame any distance runner from the South Shore for wanting to drive to the high school on a weekend morning with the option of running the course of his or her choice with the Marshfield Road Runners.

And that's one of the main reasons runners who spend most of the week training by themselves meet with the group. The number of runners who show up for the weekend runs vary anywhere from 20-25 on Saturday to 35-40 on Sunday.

"There are big numbers on Saturday," said Mike Carroll, who joined the club in 1981 and is one of 95 club members. "And even more on Sunday."

Having other runners to chat with during a workout is appealing enough. But the courses they frequent make waking early on a weekend well worth the effort.

What is more American than going to a nice local tavern having a cold one or two and watching a sporting event on TV?

Nothing the Extra Points crew can think of.

What follows is the report of one Extra Points member who is constantly searching for fun and excitement in taverns across the South Shore.

This report, which took years to research, will discuss local taverns and the sports memories they have provided.

Playoffs-Weymouth

Just last Thursday I was at this Route 53 bar dancing up a storm with a Fly Girl wanna-be when I noticed New England Patriots Andre Tippett, Bruce Armstrong and Chris Singleton stroll in. They were not hard to miss as both Tippett and Singleton stood 6'3" and weighed at least 230 pounds while Armstrong goes about 6'5" and 280.

All three were well-dressed and were checking out the babes big time.

I did not see them drinking.

During a break in the music I went over to Singleton and asked where Leonard Russell was. (Earlier this summer Russell was stabbed outside a Boston night club).

Singleton gave me a look that would have made John Elway wet his pants.

I cleared my throat and quietly walked back to the girl I was dancing with. She asked what happened.

"Those guys are on the Patriots and I wanted to wish them luck on Sunday against Buffalo," I said.

It was not the first time I had seen local athletes at Playoffs. I saw former Celtic Dennis Johnson and Tippett at Playoffs for Sugar Ray Leonard's last fight a couple years back. I actually got DJ's autograph. He was a nice guy.

As for Tippett, I stayed away from him that night and last week as well. He has a black belt in Karate and once mopped the floor with a wise guy at Playoffs. You don't mess around with black belts.

As for Playoffs itself, it has a lot of TV's and usually has specials for big games like the Super Bowl.

However, the crowd can get a little rough and the beer is over-priced.

The Varsity Club-Hingham

This is a great place with a nice sports setting. The walls are plastered with covers from Sports Illustrated and there are numerous large screen TV's and cheap draft beer.

I remember watching the Pittsburgh Penguins clinch their first Stanley Cup over the Minnesota North Stars with a couple friends at this Route 3A establishment.

It was a rout and after every Penguin goal I celebrated by ordering another beer.

Two years ago Boston Celtic Kevin McHale signed autographs at the bar and I was there to write a story.

It was funny because McHale walked in with a couple friends and immediately sat down for a nice 45-minute, free dinner complete with many beers.

He did not sign an autograph until he was finished with the feast.

As for autograph session, he signed for twenty minutes and then shut everyone off. He then was handed a microphone and thanked everyone for their support and said it was great to be in Quincy.

Someone quickly corrected him.

stretch along Route 123 in Norwell, the MRR can boast some of the most scenic routes on the South Shore.

"I'll tell you," said Carroll, "they come from all over. And they're not necessarily club members either.

"It's probably the area we run in. There are fairly quiet roads and there are so many distances."

Carroll pointed out that the runners come from towns "that have their own running clubs."

The MRR host several events during the year, and the biggie is just around the corner. The 20th annual Marshfield Road Runners 20K is scheduled for September 26. Carroll expects a field of at least a couple hundred after the '92 race drew 152 entrants.

Runners familiar with Sunday's 15-mile run Marshfield will recognize the 12.4-mile route immediately. The race includes the downhill section of Valley Path and two challenging hills in the one-mile climb up Pine Street and the always intimidating hill on Highland Street. Runners then head up Pine Street a second time before making their way along Forest and School Streets to the finish at Heaven's Gate on Route 139.

"It's tough and it has got some challenging hills," Carroll said.

Over the years the race has attracted a crop of the best local runners on the South Shore. Dick Mahoney still owns the course record of 1:00:42 he set in '79, the year he placed 10th in the Boston Marathon. Kingston's George Rose won in '82 and again in '85 — defeating Mahoney in the process.

Former University of Lowell All-American Dave Dunham of the Lowell Road Runners was victorious in '87 as several members of the club entered the race that year.

The 20K isn't the only event the MRR host. During the summer there is an eight-week youth program for kids from age 3 through high school. The weekly track meets have been extremely popular and have been held for the past 15 years. Carroll used to run the program, which is currently coordinated by Steve Erickson.

A turkey trot, where the tasty Thanksgiving birds are given as prizes, is held for kids in the fall.

There are also specific training runs held 2-3 times a year when club members are busy gearing for a particular marathon. Dubbed the perimeter run, the 23-mile course follows Marshfield's border to the surrounding towns.

Various relay races, including the 24-hour Nova Scotia Relay in May and an 88-mile relay in New Hampshire in early September are favorites of the club. The relays are not limited to just a handful of runners either. Five to six, eight-member teams enter the New Hampshire event every year. Distances range anywhere from 4-13 miles per runner.

The club also can be found on the New England cross-country circuit during the fall and the track in the spring.

The MRR, however, is as much a social club as a competitive one. Carroll says he has made several new friends since joining the club.

"A lot of friendships are developed through the club," he said. "It's a lot of fun for a lot of people.

"You get a lot of opportunities to ru[illegible] with a lot of people.

The backgrounds of the various club members are as diverse as the athletes' abilities. Dentists, doctors, the unemployed, attorneys; they're all an accepted part of the road runners.

"It's truly a cross section of America," Carroll said. "I have to believe it's good therapy for a lot people."

The club is currently in a transitional phase, according to Carroll. Officials are trying to recruit college-age runners after they graduate and are left to train on their own. With the club made up of mostly of middle-aged men, the push for younger runners is essential in staying competitive with other quality running clubs in New England.

"We'd really like to recruit a lot of the college kids when they're getting out," Carroll said.

A training run over the club's favorite stomping grounds could just be what's needed to convince the youngsters Marshfield is the place for them.

Cheerleaders hope to break stereotype

this section of the country as it is in the central and western areas, the Cohasset squad takes cheering seriously. The team has the distinction of being the only Skipper squad to practice all summer. They met twice a week before upping their practices to every day for two hours at a time.

Callentine has added push-ups and sit-ups to her training and it has had a trickle-down effect on the rest of the team. The girls have expressed a desire to do conditioning three times a week for added strength.

Vanderworth agrees that to be successful at cheerleading, a good dosage of resistance work and endurance is needed.

"It does take a lot of strength," she said, "and I'm not a big person."

Choreography is also a major part of cheering and must be done to perfection for the safety of the other cheerleaders.

"Timing has to be perfect or you can really hurt someone," Vanderworth said.

Vanderworth and Callentine hinted there will be some pleasant changes for football fans during the half-time shows this fall. The cheerleaders will perform more dances and there will be a marked, overall enthusiasm through each and every game.

Both girls have a serious desire to eventually coach a high school squad, but they want to cheer in college first. They realize it would be practically impossible, though, to aim for a big Division 1 power. Instead, Vanderworth and Callentine are focusing on more realistic goals.

"Cheerleading here is nothing like going out for an Ohio State," said Callentine, who wants to attend UMass-Amherst and major in communications.

"I'd rather try out for a smaller school and be a cheerleader than a larger school and not be able to cheer."

And although neither of them are the least bit overweight and look like athletes to begin with, they know a case of adding the Freshmen 15 would work against if they want their names on a cheerleading roster.

"On a college squad," Vanderworth said, "they won't pick you if you're overweight or out of shape."

College still seems like light years away for the talented pair. They are both excited about the upcoming season and the once-in-a-lifetime trip to Europe during the holiday season.

More important than the trip and the impressive itinerary packed with shopping excursions, a disco cruise down the Thames River and numerous other events, is the fact they both realized the goal they set for themselves.

"I don't think I'd have appreciated it so much if I made it last year," Vanderworth said.

"It'd be hard to go to London for a week with no one you know," Callentine added.

Unlike the try out for the team, now the pair from Cohasset don't have to worry about a thing. And more than likely, they'll change the way some of the locals view cheerleading before they're through.

Soccer registration set

The time and dates for fall soccer registration have been changed. Registration for the Saturday program for grades 3/4 and 5/6 will be Thursday, Sept. 9, 7 to 8 p.m., and Saturday, Sept. 11, 9 to 11 a.m. at the Recreation Department, Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for this program will be $15 with an optional $5 for a T-shirt. Checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. The first game will be Saturday, Sept. 18.

Registration for the Sunday travel team for ages under-12, boys and girls, will take place at the same time. If you are interested in registering for this program, you will need two checks at the time of registration. One check for $15 should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Another check for $35 should be made payable to Cohasset Soccer Club and will be held as a deposit for the uniform. Upon receipt of the uniform, your check will be returned to you.

The annual Pancake Breakfast tickets will be available. The Soccer Pancake Breakfast will be Sept. 19.

Any questions, please call 383-6113.

JV cheerleaders to hold fundraising night

Fundraising night at Papa Gino's for the CHS JV cheerleaders will be held Monday, Sept. 13, from 5 to 10 p.m. Come in or ask for delivery. Call 383-6303 for dinner. Help support the cheerleaders. If you would like to make a donation — make check payable to CHS Cheer Club, c/o CHS, Pond St., Cohasset 02025.

Roundabout race, Sept. 19

The 6th Annual Minots Light Roundabout rowing race will take place Sept. 18 at noon.

The race is 5 1/2 miles long. Rowers start at the Breakwater in Cohasset Harbor, proceed almost due NE to the gong IDL which is rounded to port, then over to Minots Light which is also rounded to port, then back to the finish at the Breakwater. The race is sponsored by Jack Hubbard and Paul Mogan, the local dealer for Martin Marine Co. manufacturers of the Alden Ocean Shell which will be prominently represented in the race. In addition to the Aldens, a contingent of fixed seat rowers, members of the Cape Cod Vikings is expected together with rowers from the Hull Lifesaving Museum. All of these folks are ardent ocean rowers.

All other rowers are welcome but it is very important they be experienced in ocean rowing conditions. The seas around Minots Light can be pretty rough this time of year.

After the race a light lunch and refreshments will be provided at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

For more information, call Jack Hubbard, 383-0586.

It would be great to have some local South Shore lobstermen come row with us.

New location for Yoga center

By Lynn Iannucci
Special to the Mariner

The Yoga Center begins its fall semester in a large and sunny new location in the Jonathan Livingston Plaza on Route 3A in Cohasset. The move is one of several changes the center has made for the fall.

"The new space is perfect for yoga," says Yoga Center owner Lynn Iannucci. "It has huge windows that let in lots of light, it has beautiful views of the woods out back and it is very quiet and peaceful." Iannucci goes on to say that there are several other changes in store for students this fall as well. "I've also expanded the class schedule to include more evening classes and I've added several beginning level classes in response to student requests. I think we now have a good mix of classes for every level student at convenient times throughout the day and evening."

The Yoga Center offers instruction in the style of B.K.S. Iyengar, the world's foremost exponent of yoga. Classes incorporate the use of props to help students realize the benefits of yoga without strain. "I've found that students of all ages and all ability levels can enjoy our classes. Yoga offers a way to stretch out, increase flexibility and build strength, while also providing a sense of inner peace and tranquility — something we all need in today's hectic world."

For more information about the fall schedule, call The Yoga Center at 383-3141.

Church to gives lessons

The Community Center offers tennis lessons with Amanda Church beginning Sept. 13 and 14. The eight-lesson program is for children and adults. Beginners will learn the basics and intermediates, will review backhand, serving, footwork, and court coverage. Pre-registration is required. The fee is $44 for eight classes. For more information, call 383-0088. Remember, tennis is for all ages.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 93P2083E1

Estate of ETHEL R. EDWARDS late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that NANCY SAUMSIEGLE of WELLESLEY in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on October 6, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-seventh day of August, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Pierson-to-Person talk-TV season opens

Thursday, Sept. 9, host Wigmore Pierson opens his television season on Pierson to Person with three women representing the South Shore Women's Business Network: Jeanne Yocum, President of the Network and principal in the firm Tuscarona Communications, Ltd.; Vicki Donlan, Executive Director of the Network; and Ellen O'Connor, president of an insurance agency.

Topics include the Network itself, the business climate on the South Shore today, and why women who are in business should join such an organization.

Pierson's second segment guests will be talking about their home-built electric vehicles and why they believe electric powered vehicles are the cars and trucks of the future.

Guests scheduled are Cohasset SAAB Sonett owner Walter Kern; and Hanson Mazda Pickup Truck owner Roy Tassinari. Both vehicles have been converted to electric propulsion and both will be on display outside the studio on Gannett Road in North Scituate for public viewing during the live broadcast.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham, and on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information call the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-2500.

Young readers' news

On August 27, the library hosted a celebration for children who had participated in the summer reading program. The children's room was decorated with balloons, door prizes were raffled, and refreshments were served. There were 134 children who participated in the summer reading program and many earned free books by completing more than 20 books. Mrs. Terry, the children's librarian, would like to remind those children who have earned books to pick them up at the library, if they have not already done so. In addition, Mrs. Terry will present summer reading certificates at the Osgood School and at the Deer Hill School.

Brian Krupczak won the goldfish contest with his guess of 927 goldfish. There were 922 goldfish in the bowl. Nichole Needl was runner-up with a guess of 909.

In appreciation, the Puzzle Club participants presented Mrs. Murphy with a copy of the popular book The Secret Garden signed by all of them. They also gave her two tickets to see the movie currently playing in local theaters. Again, a very special thanks to Mrs. Murphy for her enthusiasm and energy in making the Puzzle Club a super success.

LIBRARY STORY HOURS

Registrations are currently being accepted for the fall series of preschool story hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will begin Oct. 7 and 8 and will last for six weeks. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Registration is limited to 15 in each group, and children must be at least 3 1/2 to participate.

To register call the Children's librarian at 383-1348.

Summer library hours

Summer hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Sunday.

Five-town fire study shows scant savings

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Representatives from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate boards of selectmen set an Oct. 15 deadline for deciding whether to pursue plans for regional fire service.

Selectmen will take a closer look at the advantages and disadvantages in regionalizing fire and emergency medical services in consultation with their fire chiefs and administrators. Even if they like what they see, voters at town meeting must support the concept and the state legislature must approve it before the five fire departments will swap their individual logos for a new, regional design.

Consultants from Management Development Institute, Inc. of Lake Oswego, Oregon, hired by the five towns for $18,600 to be paid for through a $30,000 state grant, delivered their findings and recommendations Thursday, Sept. 9. In a 250-page report and at an open meeting, they presented the towns with three options for the future of fire and emergency medical services: maintaining the status quo, pursuing a range of joint ventures and instituting a regional fire district.

Consultant Dan Olsen said the recommendations outlined by MDI "are very visionary . . . planning for fire protection and emergency services that will take you into the next century."

Bird flies in path of railroad plans

An endangered water fowl, the pied-billed grebe, which inhabits the Weir River in Hingham, may be a roadblock to the restoration of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line.

Members of the citizens' advisory committee learned that the greme is the only endangered species along the Greenbush right-of-way, but Sverdrup Inc., which is conducting a further environmental impact statement, found that inland sections of Scituate and the North River which courses through Scituate and Norwell also provide habitats which support animal life.

The environmental impact of the Greenbush railroad project could delay, but not halt the project, according to MBTA officials.

The state-mandated CAC, composed of members from affected communities, meets monthly to review the feasibility study for Greenbush.

Last week John Mahoney of Sverdrup, the consulting engineers for the project, examined natural and cultural resources within a quarter mile of the right of way and Theresa Wilder reads mock charges against outgoing administrator Roberta Dufresne in the 'Cohasset Knoll jail' during the Country and Western barbecue at the nursing home last week. The fund-raiser consisted of issuing a 'warrant' for someone's arrest and posting bail to get out of jail. For more photos of the barbecue, please see page 14.

New fashion fads don't phase Cohasset teenagers

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

While some area teens go for 'grunge dressing' — wearing new, expensive clothes that look old and cheap — Cohasset high schoolers are a flash from the past.

A quick glance down the hallways of Cohasset Junior Senior High School reveals that little has changed in the way of clothing in the past decade.

The staple is, was and according to some, will always be jeans.

"I bought jeans and flannels," freshman Andrea Freeman said.

Senior Sara Belson noted that both genders rely on dungarees more than any other clothing item.

"Converse All-Stars (sneakers), T-shirts and jeans — worn out jeans" is the look for male students, she said.

The sneakers, she added, were an "in" item several years ago and now were making a comeback.

Assistant Principal at Cohasset Junior Senior High School Jack DeLorenzo said Cohasset students have maintained the same style of dress, more of less, since he came to the school eight years ago.

"I don't think they follow the major trends," he explained. "We are basically a preppy-style school and our kids dress pretty conservatively."

Record crowd attends Republican party

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Hundreds of Republican supporters turned out for the annual GOP fund-raiser cookout at the Guild residence on Jerusalem Road, Sunday

Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci, State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and House Minority Leader Peter Forman were among the party dignitaries who spoke at the event.

Host Ted and Julie Guild said the cook out has become an annual end-of-summer tradition for the past five years.

"There are 250 people here today," Ted Guild said. He noted that Sunday's turnout was the largest ever.

Prior to that, 162 was the record for attendance. "And that was during an election year," he added.

State Committeewoman for the GOP Polly Logan said the turnout was heartening.

Cohasset's week

'Drug Fighter' noted

The town's Drug & Alcohol Committee has been recognized by the Massachusetts Governor's Alliance Against Drugs and the Drug Enforcement Administration, New England Field Division with the 1993 Drug Fighter of the Year Award.

The D&A committee is one of only nine groups selected throughout the state for this year's award.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan nominated the committee for the award.

"They are a tremendous group," Noonan said. "They are finally getting the recognition they deserve for all the work they've done."

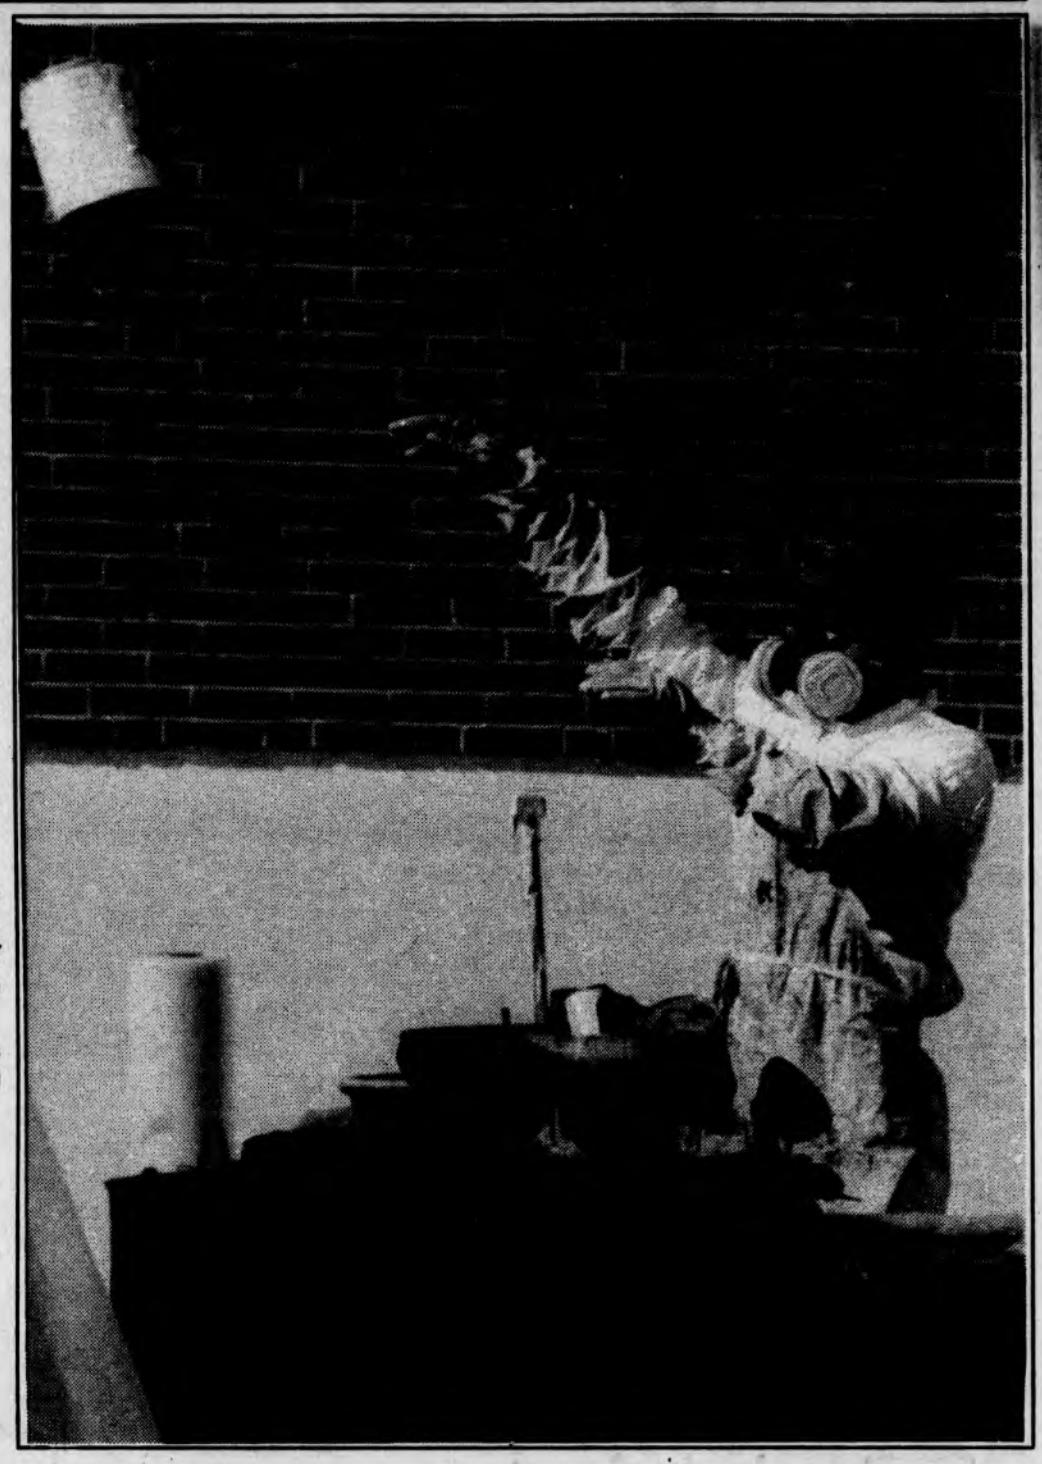
The purpose of the award is to honor individuals, community groups and organizations who are committed to creating a drug-free society.

In Noonan's nomination, he noted that the D&A committee is responsible for coordinating the Safe Homes program which provides information on alcohol abuse and a network for parents of teens; the committee spearheaded the town's Tag-a-Keg program in 1990; it sponsors a drug-free weekend annually; and it presents graduating seniors with commemorative key chains with the reminder that "Friends don't let friends drive drunk."

The awards ceremony is from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday Oct. 25 at the John F. Kennedy Library.

Selectmen praised the D&A committee for its work and noted the award at their meeting Monday.

"It's quite a wonderful thing," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said.



Scott Kendall of Laidlaw Environmental Services, Ltd., tosses an empty paint can away during the hazardous waste collection day at the high school Saturday. For the first time, paint recycling was part of the annual event which is paid for through tax dollars. Town meeting appropriated $13,000 for the purpose last spring. Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the turnout was steady. About 39 containers of hazardous waste were collected.

Tax setting time due

The annual tax classification hearing with selectmen and the board of assessors is planned for 8 p.m., Oct. 4 in the selectmen's office. Cohasset's single tax rate for FY'93 was $13.46 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, Assistant Assessor Appraiser Joseph DiVito said.

At the hearing, the pros and cons of a single vs. a split tax rate will be discussed, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Cohasset has always had a single tax rate, DiVito explained. He said the town is about 10 percent commercially zoned. Towns with a split tax rate (different rates for residential and commercial property) are usually more than 15 percent commercially zoned, he said.

Reserving town hall

The annual flu clinic sponsored by the Social Service League (SSL) is slated for 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday Oct. 30 and Sunday Oct. 31 at town hall.

Selectmen approved the request of the SSL to reserve town hall for the clinics at their board meeting Monday.

The board also voted to allow the Multiple Sclerosis Society to use town hall during the society's second annual benefit walk "Cohasset by-the Sea" April 10, 1994.

The 15-kilometer walk, which begins at town hall, is expected to draw 300 participants, organizers said. Walkers are asked to raise money on a per kilometer/pledge basis.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club also obtained permission to use town hall from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday (Sept. 19) to conduct a preliminary rehearsal.

Generators are dimming

In a letter to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield said that as of Sept. 1, the highway department has only one working generator that is used for lights and radio transmissions during emergency situations.

He said the second generator found at the Deer Hill School was recently serviced and found to be irreparable by Mass Generator and Marine Engines, Inc.

"The generator was built sometime during the 1950s and although it hadn't been used until recently, there was no maintenance manual with it and parts are unavailable for repair," Litchfield said.

Kudos for housing effort

The Massachusetts Housing Partnership Fund commended the Cohasset Housing Partnership for its continuing efforts to develop and preserve affordable housing in town.

Rita Farrell, director of the organization's community outreach and services, said the MHP is able to provide cities and towns with a wide range of financing and services without any impact on the state budget.

"Local housing partnerships such as yours have had a dramatic impact on the way affordable housing is developed, rehabilitated, and financed in Massachusetts," she said. "Through your affiliation with MHP, you have regular access to our staff, receive publications and information about workshops and conferences that we sponsor, and are eligible for MHP's financing and technical assistance programs."

Live from Cohasset, it's Monday night!

Continental Cablevision has corrected the source of a recent spate of problems in televising selectmen's meetings live, said Wendy Copithorne, program director.

The board's Aug. 30 meeting experienced both audio and visual problems. And in March modulator problems over a two-week span scratched televising the meeting live both weeks.

A replacement modulator, new clip-on microphones for board members, and technical checks Monday mornings should keep further difficulties to a minimum, Copithorne said.

"Live television is always subject to more problems than usual due to added equipment needed and the additional routing of the signal to produce it," she explained.

Selectmen also made it clear that any problems are not their fault.

"We want people to know this is not our show," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said, adding that the board wants the program "to be good."

Goedecke said the show has a following.

"It's nice to know people are watching. We get a lot of comments," she said.

The problem of viewers having to look at the backs of those attending the meeting can be solved by moving the camera to the side, Copithorne said.

It wasn't clear if the board was in favor of being televised from the side and if there is enough room to the right of the board's desk for the camera.

Copithorne said she'd give Robert V. Davenport, who volunteers his time to work the camera for the board meetings, the beeper number of the technician on call so he can get help if cablecasting problems should crop up during a meeting.

Selectmen meetings at 7:30 p.m. Mondays are cablecast on Channel 3.

Waterfront owners alert

Waterfront property owners from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull to discuss Mass. General Law Chapter 91.

Special meeting for: Thursday evening, Oct. 7, 1993, Hull Town Hall, Lewis C. Costa Meeting Room, 7 p.m.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Republican, 3rd Plymouth District, has made arrangements to have a representative from the DEP Waterways Division available to answer any questions concerning Massachusetts General Law Chapter 91 as they pertain to waterfront structures (ex. piers, wharfs, seawalls, or fill). Many waterfront structures are properly licensed, some have not received authorization under Chapter 91.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray felt that this would be a good opportunity to address the concerns of the many constituents who have been in contact with her office. If you have any questions concerning this meeting, please call Rep. Murray's office at 722-2400.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

ZONING AND THE LANDOWNER

QUESTION: How carefully should a landowner, who intends to build a home on that land, look into local zoning laws?

ANSWER: Very carefully! You may find it's impossible to build the home you plan. Zoning laws may require a specific amount of acreage for one-family zone. If you own a smaller lot than required, you may not be able to build the house you want on your lot.

Also, look into the type of home which is allowable in your zoning area. You may plan to build a second floor apartment, possibly for another member of your family or for rental purposes. If the property is a one-family residential zone, you may be out of luck.

New fashion fads don't phase teenagers

The consistency in fashion includes hairstyles, he said.

"Even boys, with long hair. They kept it short. And the girls, well there has always been ponytails here. They don't change much."

DeLorenzo said the only sweeping fashion change he's seen in the schools has been the addition of the baseball cap to nearly every male wardrobe.

"Everybody wears them, even in the cafeteria," he said. The capped head phenomena is beginning to cross gender lines, too, he added.

"Three years ago we had a rule you couldn't wear a hat in school, but the Student Council came to the administration and said they would take responsibility if the hats were thrown around or grabbed," DeLorenzo explained.

"So we allowed it and we haven't had a problem since."

Attentiveness to current trends also seems less pronounced among older teens.

"People (seniors) are less concerned (about what they wear) because we're older," senior Becky Golden said.

Age also seems to lessen the influence name brands have on the students.

"I used to care more about labels," senior Jessica Sammon said. Sara Belson agreed.

"I used to be embarrassed to go to Marshalls, and now I love it," she said.

"To save $10 on jeans — I'm psyched," Sammon added.

Belson, who wore wide leg pants and a silk blouse, said she buys most of her school clothes after she starts school.

"People put a lot of emphasis on first-day of school clothes," she said. "But its better to wait and see what's there and then go shopping."

In addition to jeans, Belson, Sammon and Golden said between them they tapped some of the current fashion rage: platform shoes, clogs and wide leg pants.

They said bucks are still a popular shoe, as well as the more trendy, and clunky, Doc Martin black leather shoes.

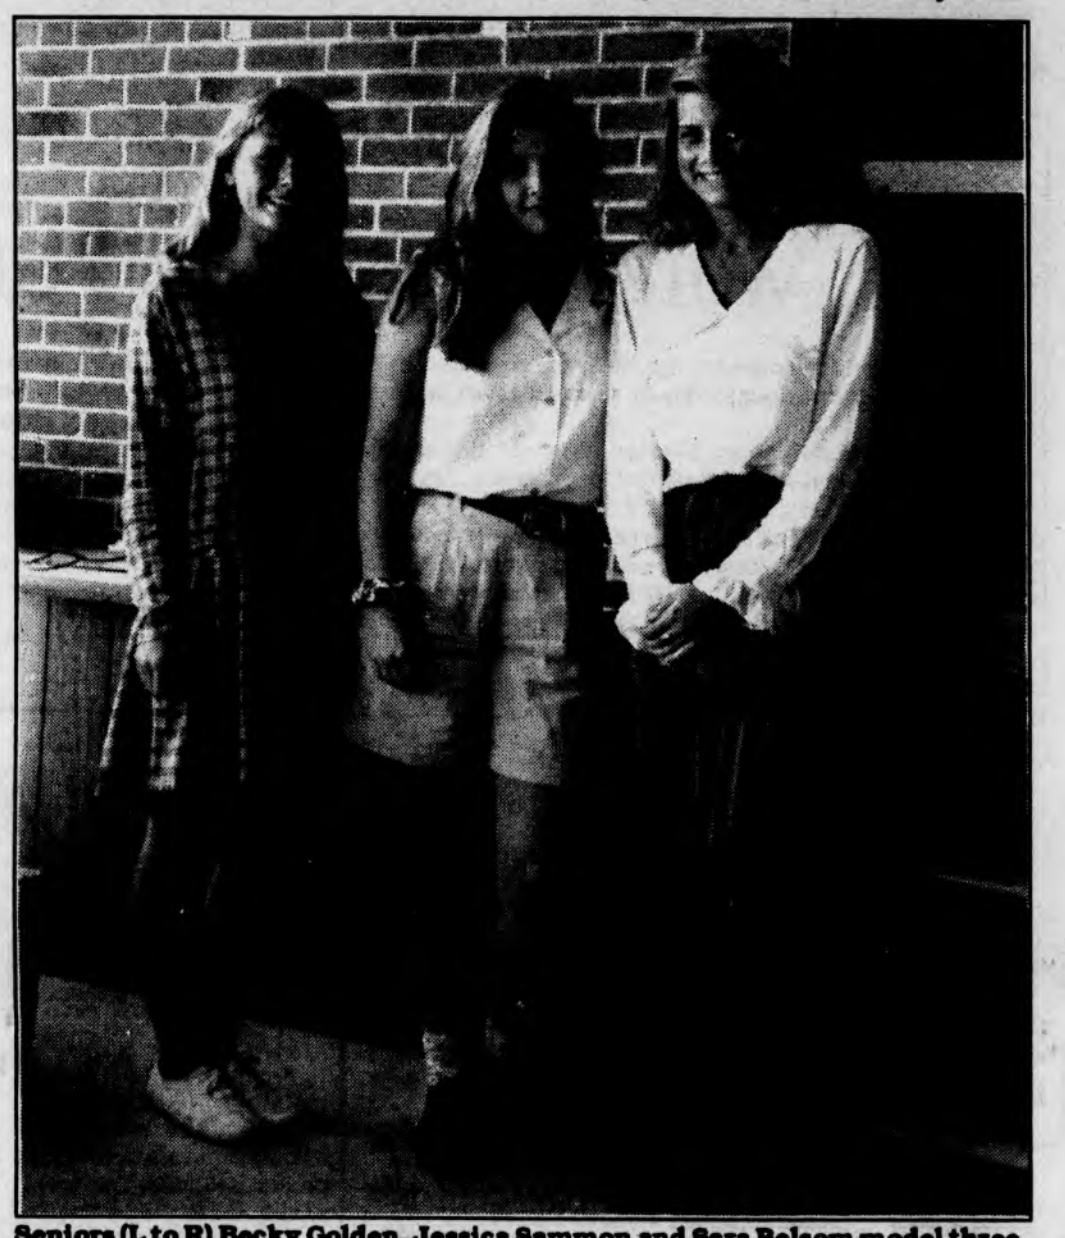
"And Tevas (sandals) for girls," Belson added.

Freshman Monique DeVoe, 14, sported a floral outfit — similar to the granny dresses popular in the 60s — she said she bought for going back to school.

"And I bought a crochet vest and clo[illegible]," she added.

Rachael Bloom, a freshman, said she geared up for school by buying three pairs of jeans.

And freshman Andrea Freeman added that body-suits are also a trendy item.



Seniors (L to R) Becky Golden, Jessica Sammon and Sara Belsom model three different styles of dress for school this fall. The three agreed that the tone of dress at Cohasset Junior Senior High School was decidedly casual with jeans being the most worn item by both sexes.

Bird flies in path of railroad plans

demographics of the towns through which the Greenbush line would run — Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate — and neighboring towns of Marshfield, Duxbury and Norwell.

Unlike other communities for which the train is bound, the Greenbush line lies almost entirely in the coastal zone, with large portions in the floodplain

"The railway nearly defines the coastal zone," Mahoney said. The Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management would have to approve any construction within its limits.

The Weir, Herring and North Rivers are subject to water-access laws, under Chapter 91, which would prompt review by the state waterways division.

Wells and wetlands must have bureaucratic clearances before construction could begin, said Mahoney. Cohasset and Weymouth have wells close to the train's path and Scituate has several wells near the Greenbush terminus at the landfill.

One area which calls for special consideration is at the junction of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, where "a lot of resources come together," said Mahoney. Here, the Weir River dumps into wetlands abutting the ocean.

While wetlands are more fragile than solid ground, these wet areas are less likely to suffer "annoyance vibration" as the train passes, Mahoney said.

Vibration caused by the train would be at an "annoyance level," over bedrock, as in Hingham and Cohasset.

By definition, neither vibration nor noise level would affect land use in any of the communities, with the exception of Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham, which was built purposefully in a quiet area, Mahoney said.

However, the MBTA would consider the impact of vibration and noise in all the communities along the Greenbush line.

The state also measures air quality in terms of emissions of ozone and carbon monoxide, both of which come from all transportation vehicles.

In an argument for public transportation, Mahoney pointed out that fewer vehicles would lessen overall threats to air quality.

In a survey of aesthetic regions, Sverdrup identified Norwell Center, Hingham Square, the Herring Brook in Weymouth and the Herring River in Scituate, which is situated at the end of the proposed line.

Historic areas include Lincoln Natural Historical District in Hingham Square, the only federally protected area, and Cohasset Maritime Historic Area. Other historic sites on the South Shore are not in the train's path.

Exhibit of cut paper

Cut paper, drawings and illustrations by James Wirth are on display in the reading room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library this month. Mr. Wirth's technique is a mixture of methods taken from drawing, printmaking and painting.

While obtaining his degree in art and anthropology at the University of Massachusetts, Mr. Wirth explored the deconstruction of images in one format and their reassembly in another.

Using his computer as his primary drawing tool, Mr. Wirth creates the same stylized renderings as in charcoal or pastel but in a computer format. This process simplifies the color separation and allows for multiple renderings of a single design.

Mr. Wirth's illustrations have been sold to The New Yorker Magazine, The Oxford American Magazine, Vic Firth Inc. and Goodwin Graphics.

Pratt photo is needed

The Friends of the Paul Pratt Library are still searching for a photograph of Paul Pratt, other than the one photograph on display at the library.

If anyone has a photo of Mr. Pratt that they can loan the library, the Friends would be greatly appreciative. Please call Patty Lambert at the library, 383-1348.

cohasset's week

Skunk problem unsolved

Susan M. Ceci said she has had an ongoing problem with a skunk spraying in her yard.

In a letter to selectmen, she said she left a note for the dog officer on or around Aug. 1 asking for help. Ceci said she followed up with phone calls but has had no reply.

While she is sympathetic to the dog officer being part-time and therefore having limited time available, she'd at the very least like a response.

"I understand all this BUT I would like to think a two-minute call to say whether or not he could help or the office that could help would be considered a simple thing to accomplish," she wrote. "We are still having a problem with skunks and I am still waiting for a return call."

Animal control officer William Quigley could not be reached for comment.

How about some hose?

The fire department has about 500 feet of 1-1/8 in. forestry hose which has outlived its usefulness, acting Chief Roger W. Lincoln said.

At Lincoln's request, selectmen declared the hose surplus at their board meeting. Once declared surplus, town equipment can be sold, given away, or taken to the dump, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Lincoln suggested the hose be offered to the harbormaster and/or the sailing club to protect of boats, piers, and floats.

Selectmen Merle S. Brown put out a call to gardeners. "Anybody need a lot of garden hose?" he asked.

around town with Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Cohasset lost two fine gentlemen last week, Bob O'Hayre and Bill Malloy. Both of them did so much for all, they were kind and loving. It is hard to imagine not seeing them around town, they will be missed!

At 80 years old Bob was always driving around in his blue caddie, and always knew exactly what was news and checking up on his buddies, still active at Boston College.

Bill Malloy was known as "the Dean of Beacon Hill Lobbyists", and for how much he cared about his family and friends. Everyone loved him!!

❑ Happy belated birthday greetings go to Shirley Laidlaw, her birthday was Sept. 4. We hope that your day was a happy one!

❑ The 14th annual soccer pancake breakfast, sponsored by the Cohasset Soccer Boosters, will be held Sunday, Sept. 19, from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School. Tickets are available from any member of the soccer team, or at the door for $3 — preschoolers are free. This is the one major fundraiser held for Cohasset Soccer Programs at CHS.

Profits will be used to provide sweatsuits and end of the year awards to the 120 members of the teams. Please take this opportunity to say yes to Cohasset youth athletes.

❑ Let us give a grand Cohasset welcome to Jay Matthew Salerno, son of Matt and Heidi J. Salerno. Jay was born July 3 and weighed 9 lbs. 1 oz.

You can bet that his grandparents, Trudy Chase and Nick and Trudy Salerno, are positively thrilled with little Jay!

That's not all the news as far as the Salerno family goes. Nick and Trudy also had a big event Aug. 15 when Meghann Elizabeth Salerno was born to Tim and Liza Salerno.

The Salernos must have had quite a Labor Day cookout! Don't you envy them?

❑ And Trudy Chase will have a full house too. Hannah Carver Chanatry was born May 8. Hannah is the daughter of Holly (Chase) and David and from what we hear she is precious!

My goodness, I cannot imagine all of these grandchildren, how lucky you all are!! Have fun!

❑ The Little Harbor Bookstore had a grand event last weekend (Saturday, Sept. 11). Cohasset's own Deborah Joy Corey signed her new book, "Losing Eddie."

❑ Speaking of Sept. 11, happy birthday greetings went to our little Kelsie, who turned four. Kelsie spent her birthday in Florida visiting, Mickey Mouse. We adore you, Kelsie!

❑ Good news from Hingham about a Cohasset native. Lisa McCarthy is doing wonderfully at her store, Crossing Main. If you haven't been there yet, don't miss it, truly grand! Lisa also opened a store (same name) on Martha's Vineyard. Wonder if Hillary Clinton went there! We are sure Lisa will let us know.

❑ Fred Nardo, Tillie Nardo's son, who lives in Germany, had devastating news to report home recently. The farm he lived in burned down, everything that they owned is gone! It is so hard to imagine watching everything you own burn away, but Fred does have his memories.

We'll bet that he would love to hear from you, call Tillie Nardo at 383-1784 or Janice Batts at 383-0142 for Fred's address, he is in Hochenschwand Germany at Amrigschwand # 23.

❑ Matthew Collins makes the news this week, he was a member of the American Team that won a gold medal in Prague, Czechoslovakia. He was part of the four-man lightweight crew competition. You had better believe that mom Gail, and dad, Francis, are pleased and proud of him! As are Matthew's grandparents, Eleanor Collins and Dan and Mary Kearney.

It's back to the drawing board for Matthew now, he is a student in Medical School!

❑ All of you yard sale enthusiasts take note, next Saturday, Sept. 25th, VFW Post 9146 will be holding their annual sale at the Stop and Shop parking lot and the Cohasset Community Center will be holding their tag sale on the Common.

The VFW Post would like your donations, you can leave your fall cleaning treasures at the recycle center (there is a trailer), or if you want your own table get in touch with Louis Longo at 383-0925.

Crafters and sellers are also welcome at the Community Center's sale, call the Center at 383-0088. Both start at 9 a.m., go to each and have a wonderful time while supporting two grand organizations!

❑ Janine Di Tullio, popular stand-up comedienne on the New England College and Prep School circuit and comedy clubs, is touring Amsterdam and Rotterdam, Holland, for two weeks, performing in front of audiences with Jimmy Tingle, another Boston area native. She is also appearing on T.V. on the "Comedy Central" station.

Janine, a graduate of Phillips Andover academy and B.U. School of Communications, is a native of Cohasset and the daughter of Dottie Di Tullio. "Break a leg, Janine" and show them American comedy at its best!

❑ Julienne R. Guemere, daughter of Kathleen Guemere, has been given the Perrella Foundation Scholarship in Music at Hartwick College. The scholarship is awarded to a student who has demonstrated academic achievement and promise in the field of music.

❑ Rebecca Lynn Jordan, a junior at Dickinson College, is going to have a wonderful experience this year, she will be attending the Dickinson Program in Malaga, Spain. Rebecca is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Jordan Jr, you can bet that they will miss her like crazy!! Perhaps a trip to Spain will be in order!

Meanwhile Rebecca, keep us informed of your new college lifestyle!

❑ Brian Hayes and Meredith Baker-Hayes are happy to announce the arrival of Lauren Michelle Hayes. She was born at South Shore Hospital August 11 at 7:25 p.m.. She weighed 7 lbs. 8 ozs. and was 21" long.

Her brother, Christopher, is happy to have a little sister to play with and her friends on Surry Drive look forward to seeing her in the neighborhood. Grandparents, James and Florence Hayes of Boston, are thrilled of course!

❑ That's the news from here for the week, we'd love to hear yours! Please give me a call.

Robert O'Hayre Sr.

Robert J. O'Hayre Sr., 80, of Cohasset, a veteran of World War II and a salesman for Shaw-Walker Office Furniture and Equipment, Brighton, for 40 years, died Sept. 5 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Mr. O'Hayre was a member of Hatherly Country Club and Golf Course in Scituate. He graduated from Boston College and was active in the alumni association.

He was born in Charlestown and lived in Cohasset 35 years. He retired in 1981.

He leaves his wife, Genevieve K. (Knight) O'Hayre; a son, Robert J. O'Hayre Jr. of Cohasset; two daughters, Jane M. Hamilton of Cohasset and Kathleen Kester of Greenville, Maine; five grandchildren and many cousins. He was the father of the late Elizabeth O'Hayre and Mary O'Hayre.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Sept. 8 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Central Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center, 376 Washington St., Hanover 02339, or the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 106 S. Main St., Cohasset 02025.

John Peterson

John Peterson, 86, of Cohasset, a retired mail clerk and railroad employee, died Sept. 1 in the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Mr. Peterson was a mail clerk at the South Postal Annex in Boston and worked for the former New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad before retiring.

Born in New Haven, Conn., he lived 60 years in Weymouth and five years in Rockland before moving to Cohasset a short time ago.

Mr. Peterson was a member of the Congregational Church in East Weymouth and the Crescent Lodge of Oddfellows in East Weymouth.

He leaves two sisters, Dora Elizabeth Stanberg of Cohasset and Flora Daw of Weymouth, and several nephews, nieces, great-nephews, great-nieces, great-great-nephews and great-great-nieces.

A funeral service was held Sept. 4 in the Mortimer N. Peck Funeral Home, 870 Broad St. Burial was in Fairmount Cemetery, East Weymouth.

Charles L. Stoddard

Charles Lincoln Stoddard, 79, a World War II veteran and a retired meter reader, died Aug. 31 at his home.

Mr. Stoddard was born and educated in Cohasset and lived in the town all his life.

He worked for the Hingham Water Co. from 1945 to 1976, retiring as a meter reader.

An Army veteran of World War II, he served with the 157th Infantry in Europe and Africa. Mr. Stoddard was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Cohasset.

He leaves his wife, Florence R. (Cummings) Stoddard; two sons, Thomas C. Stoddard and Robert W. Stoddard, both of Cohasset; a daughter, Barbara Stoddard of Pembroke; three brothers, Sheldon Stoddard of Portsmouth, N.H., Elmer Stoddard of Norwell, and David Stoddard of California; five sisters, Lilian Lincoln and Mildred Salyards, both of Cohasset, Nellie Lincoln of Weymouth, Olive Morris of Hingham, and Hannah Sawyer of Chelmsford; and eight grandchildren.

A funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Stephen S.J. Hall of the Beechwood Congregational Church Sept. 4 in the McNamara-Sparrel Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Donations may be sent to the Beechwood Congregational Church, Church Street, Cohasset, 02025.

Helen Howard

Helen (Peers) Howard, 81 of Cohasset and Palm Beach, Fla., a champion woman golfer on the South Shore, died Sept. 6.

Mrs. Howard was women's club champion at the Cohasset Golf Club and Weston Golf Club and was women's South Shore champion several times as well as south Shore "Athlete of the Year."

She took part in many Massachusetts golf tournaments. In Florida, she was women's champion at the Everglades Club in Palm Beach and Seminole Club in Jupiter.

Born in Boston, she lived in Cohasset many years.

Wife of the late James H. Howard, she is survived by two sons, Richard A. Howard of Marblehead and Charles P. Howard of Boston; seven grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Barbara Howard Doble.

The funeral service was private Arrangements were made by J.E. Henderson Funeral Home, Everett.

No free lunch

What the new five-town fire department study tells us may not be what we want to hear.

In these financially strapped times 'Regionalization' has become a concept that taxpayers look to for answers about how costs can be cut.

But the recent regionalization study for the fire departments of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, and Norwell will have little downward effect on taxpayers' wallets.

Estimates are that about $400,000 could be saved by the towns' providing fire prevention through a joint 'Seaside Fire and Rescue District' — a drop in the bucket when compared to the $115 million the towns spend annually in their municipal budgets for all services.

Those savings would be obtained by closing stations and reducing the number of fire trucks, the study says.

But if a new central station on Route 3A is built, then taxpayers would surely have to shoulder the construction costs.

And not surprisingly, the study found that towns are currently understaffing their fire departments.

"Staffing levels have been stripped, there's no excess. There are certainly no savings in personnel costs," consultant Dan Olsen said.

A regional district could add to costs by eventually boosting the total number of fire-fighters in the five towns by increasing the size of the engine companies.

Yet regionalizing fire prevention and protection shouldn't be tossed out because it's not the bargain taxpaypers hoped for.

Fire-fighter safety, efficient service, and having a trained team available for an immediate response to emergencies — are important pluses to consider.

Many questions — ranging from the issue of on-call fire-fighters to how towns would be assessed for regional coverage — still need to be addressed. And all-out regionalization may not be the answer. Towns might be able to reach agreement on joint ventures without dismantling the way fire service is currently provided.

We hope the fire district study will be the catalyst to get these topics on the table.

Cohasset selectmen have called for a meeting with their counterparts in the five towns to set the stage for a joint resolution due Oct. 15. The resolution would establish task forces to study all aspects of regionalization.

We hope citizens, fire fighters, and officials will keep an open mind as the process unfolds — because the time has come for us to think less about providing the cheapest public safety services and more about providing the best.

Community Lights

Here is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• If you've ever wondered how you can help even in a small way in the fight against cancer you can get the answers at a Volunteer Opportunity Meeting from 6 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 30 at the Cohasset Community Center. Representatives from the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will review the many services the Society performs through volunteers in nine South Shore communities. Light refreshments will be served. For information, please call 617-341-4210.

From providing information on cancer prevention and healthy diets, to help with free mammography clinics, friendly calls on mastectomy patients, and free transportation to hospitals, American Cancer Society volunteers serve thousands yearly. Don't miss this opportunity to see how you can make a difference!

• The Cohasset food Pantry is serving an increasing number of local families. On the basis of current and expected future needs, food pantry organizers are recruiting additional volunteers to handle collection and distribution of food. The pantry, which is supported by local churches and social services is located in the rear of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. next to Town Hall and distributes food each Tuesday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 7-8 p.m.

At present the pantry helps about 20 local families by providing good, quality supplemental food and household supplies. The food comes from donations by churches and other organizations, individuals, and through purchases at the Boston Food Bank.

Volunteers are needed especially for the hours when the Pantry is open and are asked for only a minimal amount of time convenient to them. Anyone wishing to learn more about volunteering at the Pantry, may call Annette Sawchuck at 383-0050.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

Volunteers are asked to pledge only one trip per month scheduled at their convenience and are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• If you have some time to share and want to make a difference in your town — then how about volunteering to serve on a town board?

The following committees have vacancies: cable-TV council (4); handicapped commission (1), zoning appeals board (1 associate), school facilities committee (1), Government Island study committee (1), water resources protection committee (1), and mosquito control committee (1).

If interested, please stop by the selectmen's office or call 383-9900 and leave you name and phone number. The member of the board of selectmen, who serves a liaison to the committee you're interested in serving on, will get back to you.

• Compassionate human services professionals and other caring special persons needed to volunteer as facilitators for self-help parents' groups in the Weymouth area. These groups provide support for parents under stress who want to improve their relationships with their children. One evening a week commitment. Training and support provided. Call 337-7916 or 1-800-882-1250.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Regional fire district stats listed

• Cohasset has 7,500 people spread out over 10.3 square miles. It spends $1.047 million to provide fire and emergency services.

The fire department consists of a fire chief (position currently filled by an acting fire chief), four shift captains, 20 career firefighters and 24 call firefighters. The department has a part-time secretary working 15 hours a week on ambulance billing.

In 1992, the department responded to 105 fire calls, 505 medical calls and 590 other calls. There have been three fire deaths in the past 10 years.

• Hingham has a population of 20,000 spread out over 22.56 miles. The town appropriated $2.725 million for the fire department.

The department consists of a fire chief, deputy chief, six captains, six lieutenants, 36 career firefighters, 12 call firefighters (six active), four dispatcher-firefighters and a full-time secretary.

In 1992, the fire department responded to 244 fire calls, 1,161 medical calls and 701 other calls. There have been six fire deaths in the last five years.

The consultants also noted the town pays a private water company $481.11 for each fire hydrant just to be assured they will have water in case of an emergency. The consultants called this fee "exorbitant."

(See page 9)

Five-town fire study shows scant savings

Although describing the five towns as "very well served" because of the dedication of firefighters, they said communities consistently underfinanced and undermanned their departments leaving them on the brink of disaster. At the same time fire chiefs are forced to cut budgets, residents weaned on television shows about state-of-the art rescue services expect the high tech gizmos and paramedics will arrive at their door in a crisis situation.

The consultants say the solution is in regionalizing the service to avoid unnecessary duplications of expensive equipment, telecommunication systems and training. At the same time, the departments will be able to decommission outmoded and worn out equipment, apparatus and stations, thereby saving money on repairs, maintenance and insurance costs.

Although a regional department will be able to deploy firefighters regionwide, firefighters don't need to fear for their jobs.

"Staffing levels have been stripped. There is no excess," Olsen said. "There are certainly no savings in personnel costs."

Under a regionalized service, chiefs were told they would be able to end the practice of sending out fire trucks with only one or two firefighters on them. According to professional standards, a fire at an occupied structure requires at least eight to 16 firefighters to prevent further loss of civilian life and additional property loss while minimizing the risk to firefighters.

After the meeting, Hull Fire Chief J. Nicholas Russo said he knows first hand what happens with Hull's status quo. He said he once responded to fire alarm at a fully-occupied eight-story condominium with only four firefighters. He is sold on the regional concept as a way to provide Hull with the kind of fire service it needs and deserves.

The fire chiefs also believe better staffing levels will save them money. Currently they are forced to deficit spend to cover shifts. Line of duty injuries strip budgets when understaffed departments send out too few firefighters to emergency medical calls.

"We've reduced the injuries from smoke inhalation and burns," Russo said. "We suffer too many back injuries when we don't have enough firefighters to lift a heavy person."

Although MDI representatives say the towns stand to save money while improving fire and emergency medical services with a regionalized approach, not everyone was convinced. Norwell Selectman Richard Merritt and Scituate firefighter Tom Gotter think those savings could prove elusive at best, if not illusory

Merritt added up the $442,000 in savings listed in the MDI report and compared it to the $115 million the towns spend annually.

"That won't even show up in the quarterly tax bill," Merritt said. "We have to shift away from talking about saving money. It should be sold honestly to the public."

Gotter questioned the experts' math. They had touted savings from reducing the fleet of fire trucks from 22 to 14 and the number of fire stations from 14 to 10.

Gotter added up the number of manned trucks and stations and came up with 11 and 9 respectively.

"These stations are already closed that you are talking about," he challenged the consultants. "Where are the savings? I don't think the savings are here."

The consultants were unable to provide Scituate Firefighter Richard Yanosick with an answer when he asked how many firefighters are employed by the five towns now and how many are necessary to meet the minimum staffing envisioned under MDI's action plan.

Yanosick calculates there is no way the five towns have enough manpower to meet the standards MDI promised.

"I don't think you can do it," Yanosick said. "I think you'd have to add a lot of men. And we're just talking fire suppression."

Consultant Don Milligan defended their calculations by saying many of the cost savings would come in the form of avoidance of future costs for maintenance, repairs and insurance.

"Saving money was never the issue," Norwell Executive Secretary Annette Sexton said later. "Providing a better services and greater safety for the firefighters was."

Other issues also could derail the plans strongly recommended by the fire chiefs and town administrators. Some call it turf, others call it old-fashioned Yankee independence. However it is defined, political realities and prejudices will have to be addressed.

In some instances, selectmen or town meeting may find they do not want to relinquish home rule. Others may feel a regional service gives their community short shrift. Still others may worry about the effect a regional system will have on the tradition of call firefighters.

The consultants call for a network of strategically located fire stations to better serve the region. A new station located in Cohasset on Route 3A near Crocker Lane is planned to serve as headquarters for the fire district. The recommendations also call for upgrading facilities in all five communities and decommissioning several outmoded stations.

In addition to the new headquarters, fire stations will be located at 44 Elm St., Cohasset; 230 Main St. and 847 North St. in Hingham; 671 Nantasket Ave., Hull; 83 Washington St. and 677 Main St. in Norwell; 600 Chief Justice Cushing Highway and 149 First Parish Road in Scituate. Call fire stations will be located at 131 Spring St., Hull and 4 River St., Scituate.

> "That won't even show up in the quarterly tax bill. We have to shift away from talking about saving money. It should be sold honestly to the public."
> — Norwell Selectman Richard Merritt

On the list for oblivion are the fire stations in Minot and Humarock in Scituate as well as 338 Main St., Hingham; 253 Atlantic Ave., Hull and 50 Pine St., Norwell. The Minot, Hingham, Hull and Norwell stations are already closed while the Humarock station is served by a skeleton crew.

In analyzing the Humarock station, the consultants noted the station served a very small population and had a low call volume. They pointed out the geographical reality that Humarock is contiguous to Marshfield but not Scituate and currently could not be accessed by the quickest route from Scituate because of an unsafe bridge. Their report recommends phasing out the station and serving Humarock through an intergovernmental services agreement with Marshfield.

Humarock residents are likely to find that recommendation disconcerting, but shouldn't start panicking yet.

"That is their fire station," Milligan conceded. "The politics of the situation are tough to grapple with."

Scituate selectman Joseph Norton promised his board would look out for Humarock's interests by taking a very cautious, thorough approach to regionalization plans.

"Any talk about closing Humarock is really, really premature," Norton said. "We have a responsibility. Humarock is part of Scituate."

Norton also said paying Marshfield to cover Humarock calls would add a financial burden that Scituate might be unwilling to pay as a condition of being part of a regional fire district.

At least two of the fire departments in the study rely heavily on call firefighters. In Cohasset, a concerted effort has been made to beef up the call force to reduce what some residents think is a far too expensive fire department. According to the consultants, Cohasset residents are paying $144 per capita in comparison to the average $46 per capita in other communities.

Cohasset selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby asked about the fate of a call force in a regional system.

"You can roll a call force into any one of the levels of service," Milligan said. "You can use them at an operational level or for emergency response only."

Milligan left it to the call firefighters and the communities to decide what role, if any, they would play. He did note call personnel are routinely unavailable during week days or must travel such great distances that their contributions are minimal. Generally, he said, call firefighters must be recruited from blue collar workers with jobs in the community in order to make emergency response viable. Communities, like Cohasset, with so many residents commuting to professional jobs in Boston find a call force unworkable, Milligan said.

"It's not impossible," Milligan said, "but it is not your highest option."

Several firefighters expressed the opinion that the communities must boost the number of firefighters to make a regional system work. Trying to regionalize with existing personnel, they contend, would have the effect of reducing the level of services enjoyed by Scituate and Hingham in order to serve the remaining communities.

In an interview after the meeting, Sexton said she had heard firefighters voice that complaint in the reverse, saying Norwell would give more than it it would be getting in a regional system. She said some additional firefighters would come from regionalizing the dispatch system.

A unified dispatch system would free some firefighters for active duty who currently operate the dispatch consoles in the individual towns. Officials and consultants also concede the regional plan may require additional firefighters for full implementation.

Sexton also expressed surprise at media accounts that local firefighters have felt slighted and ignored in the two year study.

"They have been invited to every session," Sexton said. "They chose not to attend."

Firefighters representing their local unions had been involved in the discussions early on. The arrangement came to an end earlier this year when town administrators and fire chiefs decided not to allow the state union officials to take an active role in the meetings. They also declined to sign a joint statement with the union, saying it was premature. At that time, union representatives in all five towns announced that until the the state union officials were made official participants and the towns signed a "Joint Statement of Purpose and Organization," the local firefighters would not be active participants.

The parties with the most to lose with a regionalized fire district seem to be its biggest cheerleaders. The fire chiefs have been actively advocating for unification. Under the plans, the fire chiefs would each take responsibility for a different facet of fire and emergency services during the transitional phase. One chief would have responsibility for overall administrative duty. As the chiefs retired or moved on to other communities, they would be replaced at a lower grade level.

Norton said he would like to see selectmen take the next step, but thinks voters may develop cold feet.

"A lot of people talk about wanting regionalization, but when it is put in front of them they are very reluctant to move forward," he said.

Norton said he plans to move very carefully and make sure he has all the answers, before casting a vote.

"You have to do it right the first time," he said. "We need to take a complete look before we proceed. We only get one shot."

Merritt expressed reservations about regionalization. He said he lives in a small town because that's the kind of life he wants for himself and his children.

"I don't want to wake up some morning and find it's all gone," he said. "I need to be convinced."

Hingham selectmen Kathy Reardon and Martin Crane made it clear they want a great deal more information before they will be ready to vote in favor of regionalization, but the consultants said they must turn to their own administrators and fire chiefs for those answers.

"There are too many variables," Milligan said. The ultimate question to be answered, he added, was whether the towns are making the best investment of tax dollars and getting the best service for their dollar.

Getting solid answers for tough questions is the point of the resolution selectmen will be asked to vote on, Cohasset Selectman Jane Goedecke said.

"The extent of the resolution is establishing task forces to study regionalization," she said. "It means we're willing to look further, not that we are ready to go forward. We need to build trust that we will all get something out of it."

Issues selectmen will confront if they move forward include the ever-thorny question of how to divvy up costs.

Olsen suggested town officials might want to schedule a weekend retreat with a facilitator or mediator.

"You need to spend time and hammer out those issues," he said. "We've brought you to the point where the policy makers can take over."

After the meeting Milligan said he wouldn't be surprised if the towns eased into regionalization like a swimmer dipping a toe into the ocean. He said the towns could try joint ventures like training or sharing specialized equipment.

Regional fire district stats listed

• Hull has a population of 13,500 residents. During the summer the daytime population can swell as high as 35,000-40,000. The town covers 2.3 square miles and spends $1.56 million on the fire department.

Personnel consists of a fire chief, deputy chief, a shift commander, three shift captains, a fire prevention captain and 24 career firefighters.

In 1992 the fire department responded to 220 fires, 1,078 medical calls and 715 other calls. There have been five fire deaths in the last 10 years.

Hull also pays a private water company for "standby" water for its fire hydrants.

• Norwell has a population of 9,500 residents and 22 square miles of land area.

Personnel consists of the fire chief, a volunteer deputy chief, two shift captains, 10 career firefighters working days, 30 call firefighters (20 active) who cover night-time calls and a full-time secretary.

In 1992, the fire department responded to a total of 1,293 calls. There have been only two fire deaths in the last 30 years.

• Scituate has a population of 18,000 spread out over 17.07 square miles. The town spends $2.064 million on the fire and emergency services.

Personnel consists of a fire chief, deputy fire chief, four captains, four lieutenants, 40 career firefighters, two call firefighters, 4.5 dispatchers and a full-time secretary.

In 1992, the fire department responded to 133 fire calls, 1,032 medical calls and 858 other calls. There have been four fire deaths in the last 10 years.

Record crowd attends Republican party

"The greatest thing about the attendance was that the people were from all economic backgrounds and ages," she said. "For many people it was the first time there. And there were several young entrepreneurs there."

The higher than normal attendance was representative of increasing interest in the Republican Party, Representative Peter Foreman said.

"The interest is so much stronger this year than it has been before," he said. "There are superb people giving of themselves. We have to recruit more candidates to win, and we will."

Cellucci said the cookout was exactly the type of forum that Republicans should hold more often.

"I'm thankful for this open house for Republicans," he said. "This activism can and will make a difference."

Cohasset Town Moderator George Marlette, who also attended the event, agreed.

"I'm delighted to see the party solidify. It's been a long time coming," Marlette said. "They've overlooked the grassroots support and I'm glad to see the renewed focus, with new people."

Judy Volungis of Cohasset said a big reason for the large audience was the Lt. Governor.

"Cellucci was a big draw."

Cellucci used the occasion to recount the achievements and direction of the Commonwealth's Republican Administration.

"Unemployment has gone from 9 percent when we took office to 7.5 percent," he said. "We are working for welfare reform, child support enforcement, and tax cuts."

He said the Weld-Cellucci record should help pave the way for the election of more republicans.

Pam Guild, at right, applies a name tag to Polly Logan at the Republican cookout at the Guilds' home Sunday. More than 250 party faithful turned out for the annual event which featured special guest Lt. Gov. Paul Celucci.

Ellery Clark honored by N. E. Museum of Sport

Cohasset's Ellery Clark, the 84-year-old track star, was honored by Dick Johnson and his New England Museum of Sport Saturday, Sept. 4.

He was admitted to the museum to the same space his late father occupies, as both Clarks were honored for setting a national track and field record for father-son gold medals in track, with the Hall of Fame Senior winning a career 75 and "Junior" with 99 firsts to date and still after more! Their family record stands at 174.

Ellery Jr. was honored by the Boston Red Sox for helping the Boston team finally get the gold stick pins the 1918 team were awarded for being the world champions, a rightful award they were denied for 75 years.

Harry Hooper, captain of that great team, gave Clark the baseball nickname of "Bulldog" Clark for fighting hard in 1965 and 1956 to get these deserved awards.

But Commissioner Eckert denied them at the time. Hooper's son John received the fourth championship award for the World Series title in 1918, to go with 1912's,·1915, 1916.

Hooper is the only Red Sox ever to be on four world title Boston teams. Mrs. Joanne Ramsden of Scituate also was awarded honors on behalf of the Boston club. Babe Ruth's daughter received hers in memory of her dad who hurled two wins for the Boston club. Other old Boston heroes remembered included Stuffy McInnis of Manchester, Mass.; Carl Mays, the submarine hurler and Sam Jones, obtained in a trade earlier for Tris Speaker.

Boston won the pennant by 2-1/2 over Cleveland. Red Sox polished off Chicago Nationals in six games, as Ruth won two games, 1-0, 3-2, and Carl Mays twice trimmed the Cubs, by 2-1.

As Wally Schang famous Boston catcher wrote Ellery Jr. in 1954, "Well do I remember the 1918 World Series. It hit .444...the greatest play I made was when I got Charley Pick at the plate in a 2 to 1 game." Today Clark, Jr. is very proud of that great team and knew seven regulars on the team very well. Hooper the best.

This is Boston history being made in 1993 both Red Sox and B.A.A. for track. Who says Cohasset doesn't include athletic doers?

Cohasset's Matt Collins rows home the gold in tourney

The Americans won five medals in the first day of finals at the World Rowing Championships and a U.S. gold medal team (lightweight men's four without coxswain) included Matt Collins who grew up in Cohasset. Matt's parents, Francis and Gail, still live here.

Collins teamed up with Thomas Beetham of Wellesley, Jonathan Moss of Tenafly New Jersey and Christopher Kerber of Philadelphia, P.A. for a first place time of 6:03.27 as they won a gold medal in a race they led from 500 meters. The championships were held Sept. 4 in Roudnice, Czech Republic.

While the U.S. was keeping their eye on the Swiss, the British and the Italians, several other crews didn't worry about the Americans who had placed third in each of their qualifying races. Lane six proved advantageous to the crew because the U.S. team could move without being watched.

Moss analyzed the U.S. race plan after the race. "We know that everyone would get to the 500 meter mark fast within one second, so we didn't really try to be the first." However the U.S. team planned and "took a little move at the 750 (meter mark) and at the 1,000 (half way mark) tried to hold any other moves. Moss added, "We set out to be fast to the 1250 and be able to move faster from there to the finish."

In previous races, Collins had been in the fifth place four at the 1992 Lightweight World Championships. The U.S. men have only won bronze medals in the light four prior to this victory in 1974 and 1985.

Matthew (Matt) J. Collins is flanked by his father and mother, Francis and Gail Collins of Cohasset.

Matt, who currently lives in Washington D.C., graduated from Darien High School and did his undergraduate education at the University of Massachusetts. He graduated Cum Laude with a Bachelor of Science in 1990.

He has entered graduate education at the Howard College of Medicine. He has been involved in emergency medicine since he was 15 years old. His brother and sister are also lightweight rowers. He began rowing in 1986 at the UMass and has spent two years on the national team.

His international and national record includes 1993: World Championships, Men's Lightweight Four without Coxswain, first place. , 1992: World Championships, same event, fifth and Lucerne International Regatta, same event, fourth.

Nationally, he was part of the Men's Lightweight Four Without Coxswain and finished second in 1993. In 1992, he was part of the same event which finished third and he also finished fourth in the Men's Lightweight Eight.

In 1991, he finished sixth in the Lightweight Four without Coxswain and fifth in the Men's Lightweight Eight.

In the Olympic Festival in 1990, he finished first in the Men's Lightweight Four without Coxswain and was part of the Men's Lightweight Eight which participated in the Head of the Charles and Dad Vails'.

In 1987, he participated in the Head of the Charles Men's Eight and Dad Vails: Novice Men's Lighweight Eighth, fourth place.

Little League tryouts set for Sept. 26

Sunday, Sept. 26, tryouts for the Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League will be held at Barnes Field from 1 to 4 p.m.

All those candidates with birth dates between Aug. 1, 1981 up to and including July 31, 1985 are eligible to try out for a position on a major league team.

This is a departure from last year's procedure, since those candidates, who will be nine years old (birth dates between Aug. 1, 1984 and July 31, 1985) under Little League criteria are being permitted to try out.

Cohasset Little League directors caution parents of all candidates to determine whether their child is capable by virtue of skill level and maturity to try out for selection to the Major Leagues, since there are potentially more candidates than openings on team rosters.

Current members of a major league team need not try out again.

Those whose surnames begin with the letters A to H should report to the tryouts at 1 p.m. Those whose surnames begin with the letters I to Q should report at 2 p.m. Those whose surnames begin with the letters R to Z should report at 3 p.m.

In the event of cancellation due to inclement weather the tryouts will be held Sunday, Oct. 3, 1993 at the same location and time.

All candidates must be registered prior to the day of tryouts. Registration will be held at the Barnes Field equipment shed Saturday, Sept. 18, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Each registrant should be prepared to complete the registration form, to pay the registration fee and to furnish a non-returnable xerox or facsimile of his birth certificate.

CHS boys' soccer worked out rough spots in Jamboree

The third annual Whitman-Hanson Soccer Jamboree held Sept. 11 gave the Cohasset High Boys' Varsity Soccer Team an opportunity to face a series of challenges against teams from Sharon, Marshfield and Whitman-Hanson High School.

Coming off a disappointing scrimmage earlier in the week against Duxbury, this three-game set allowed the team under second year coach Keith Clark, to work out some rough spots in their game prior to their opening league contest at Norton High School Tuesday, Sept. 14.

Cohasset's first opponent in the Jamboree was a rough and tough Sharon High team. The boys were not expecting what Sharon had to offer. They played with a packed-in defense, not opening up the offense and gave keeper Chris Goodman a number of chances.

However, 12 minutes into the first half, center mid-fielder Chris Kondrat broke the ice with a 25-yard left-footed knuckler into the upper left corner of the net.

From this point on, the team took it up a couple of notches and played a more ball-controlled second half.

The varsity's second Jamboree challenge was Division I powerhouse, Marshfield. Marshfield came out strong and played a ball-control offense, constantly forcing the fullbacks and midfield into a defensive posture. Very little offense was generated due to the constant pressure. However, Marshfield was only able to score once thanks to solid work by Chris McKenna in goal and Tim Brister at stopper.

The final challenge came via Whitman-Hanson. Cohasset took charge of the game with a quick score two minutes into the first half by tricaptain Chuck Endris on a feed from Eric Henry.

A sweet last minute move by Chuck had the keeper out of position, allowing him to bury the shot into the left corner. The remainder of the match saw Coach Clark experiment with some possible combinations that we may see in future games.

Considering the team was without the help of Jeremiah Stevenson, Jim Magner and Dave Nothnagle, (all of whom were sidelined with minor injuries), Coach Clark called on newcomers Kevin McKenna, Brett McQuarrie, Jamey Kondrat and Tom Greco to step in. All performed well at the varsity level.

Youth outdoor recreation programs offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in registrations for fall recreation programs for four- and five-year-olds and Grades K-3.

Programs are scheduled to begin during the week of Sept. 20, continuing for six weeks through Oct. 28.

Programs are as follows:

Monday—Grades K-3, Soccer, Osgood Field, 2:50 to 5 p.m.

Four- and five-year-olds, Low-Organized Games, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Tuesday—Grades K-3, Games & Sports, Osgood Field, 2:50 to 5 p.m.

Grades K-3, Arts & Crafts (girls only), Osgood Field, 2:50 to 5 p.m.

Wednesday—Grades K-3, Arts & Crafts (boys only), Osgood Field, 2:50 to 5 p.m.

Four- and five-year-olds, Kickball, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Thursday—Grades K-3, Kickball/T-Ball, Osgood Field, 2:50 to 5 p.m.

Four- and five-year-olds, Soccer, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Each program meets for two hours weekly for a six-week period. Some programs will have to be postponed should inclement weather dictate. You may call the recreation office at 383-6791 after 1 p.m., if you are in doubt of program status. Children will be advised and sent home should programs not meet.

Children may bring snacks or drinks to programs and all children must be picked up either prior to, or promptly at the concluding program times. Children may stay after school to participate once parental permission is given on the registration form (reverse side).

Please complete registration form, calculate appropriate fee and make checks payable to: Town of Cohasset. Checks and forms may be either dropped off at the Recreation office or mailed to: Cohasset Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, 02025.

FEE SCHEDULES

One child in any one six-week program: $23.

Four-day program, 1 child $65, second child $30, third child free.

Three-day program, 1 child $55, second child $25, third child free.

Two-day program, 1 child $40, second child $20, third child free.

Jewelry Jottings
Sapphire is the traditional birthstone for September. Sapphires do come in colors other than blue, such as pink, purple, yellow, orange & green. These are not as well known as the blue variety, the color range of which is a pale blue to a midnight blue. The most desirable color is a slightly violetish blue of a medium dark tone. The toughness of the stone is considered excellent, making it desirable for everyday wear.
According to folklore, it protected kings from harm and envy and was a symbol of truth and constancy.
If you or a loved one have a birthday this month, come in and see our large selection of sapphires set in earrings, pendants and rings.

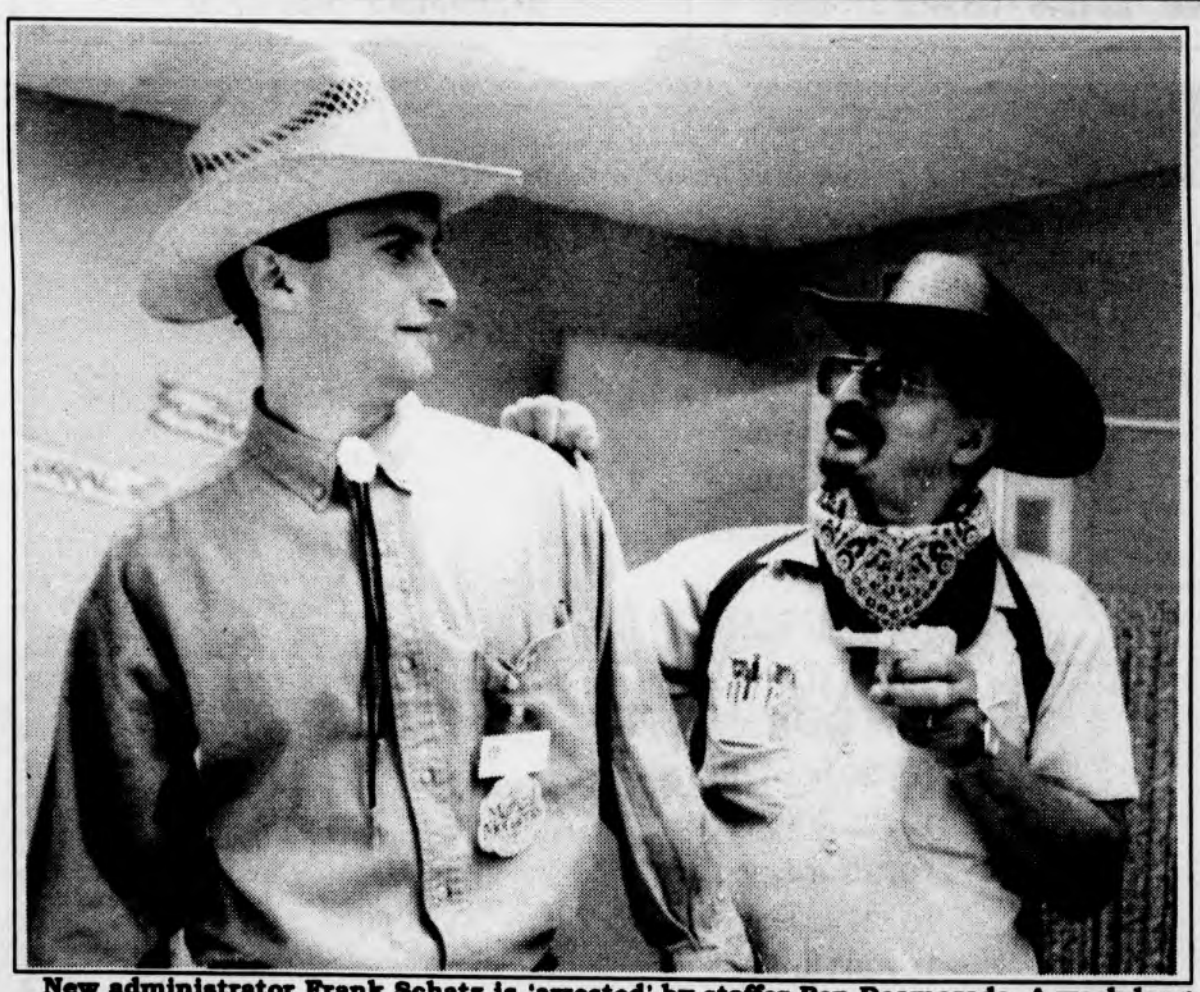
Country Western Jamboree comes to Cohasset Knoll

Staff photos/ Alan Chapman

'Buckaroo' Mauricio Capelluppo claps along with the Country & Western music provided by entertainer Judy Long at Cohasset Knoll's western-style cookout last week.



New administrator Frank Schatz is 'arrested' by staffer Ben Deamorade. A week-long fund-raiser was held in conjunction with the jamboree to benefit the resident's council. Warrants were issued and those arrested had to post bail to get out of jail.

Mary Ward gets into true country spirit at the event which was the highlight of Country/Western Jamboree Week at the nursing home.

Activities Director Mary Steele shares a laugh with Elden Myers. The Western-style barbecue was held for residents and their family and friends. Cohasset Knoll is off Rte. 3A near the Hingham/ Cohasset town line.

$10K grant awarded

Celebrating its first anniversary, the Cohasset Education Foundation this week announced the award of a $10,000 grant for the construction of a computer laboratory at the Joseph Osgood School.

The grant, the first to be made by the local education foundation, was presented by Cohasset Education Foundation president Brian McKenney to School Supt. Stephen Hart and Osgood principal Linda Whitney at a ceremony Monday, Sept. 13, at the elementary school.

"These funds represent contributions made by the directors of our foundation," McKenney said. "Our board members felt strongly that we should demonstrate our personal commitment to our mission before we embark on our other resource development efforts."

The new Osgood computer laboratory, part of a systemwide technology development plan, will be a self-contained learning center with 10-12 computer work stations. "The Osgood technology laboratory," said Whitney, "will provide interactive learning experiences that will enhance our students' cognitive skills in preparation for the 21st century."

The Osgood technology laboratory will cost $25,000. Construction of the computer room has begun and school officials hope to be able to use it by the end of the current school year, Hart said.

With the award of the first grant, the CEF will move forward in other areas it has been investigating during the past 12 months.

Two priorities, the CEF president said, are the establishment of artist-in-residence programs at Deer Hill and Cohasset High Schools, and the creation of a foreign language laboratory at the high school.

The Cohasset Education Foundation will conduct a townwide mailing of its brochure later this month, said McKenney.

Representatives of the 25-member CEF board will engage in a variety of resource development programs targeting alumni, students grandparents, corporations, and foundation grants.

For more information call the Cohasset Education Foundation, which has recently been granted tax-exempt status, at P.O. Box 224, Cohasset 02025, or by phone at 383-2833.

Brian McKenney (far right), president of the Cohasset Education Foundation, presents a $10,000 check for the new computer lab to Osgood Principal Linda Whitney and Supt. Stephen Hart. Students from each grade represented at the presentation were: Maura McKenney (3rd grade), David Santiago (2nd grade), Natalie Balents-Malone (first grade), and Ben Bolster (K).

Girl Scouts to register

Daisy, Brownie and Girl Scout registration will be held in Bates Hall, Second Congregational Church from 6:30 - 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 20. Registration is $6 per girl.

Information will be available for any parent interested in becoming a leader or helping with a troop. Call Patriots Trail Girl Scout Council at 828-3750 or 1-800-637-0070 for more information.

Tag sale Sept. 25

The Cohasset Community Center will be having its annual tag sale on Cohasset Common from 9 a.m. - 2 p.m Saturday, Sept. 25.

Crafters, and anyone interested in reserving a sale space or contributing items for the community center's table should call the center at 383-0088.

Gardeners to meet Sept. 21

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday, Sept. 21 at St. Anthony's parking lot to carpool to the Daniel Webster Inn, Sandwich. After lunch, the group will tour the glass museum.

Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos is hostess for the event and reservations are necessary.

Rep. Flaherty to appear

Rep. Charles F. Flaherty (D-Cambridge), Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, will appear on "Pierson to Person" Thursday, Sept. 16.

Mr. Flaherty will answer questions about educational reform, casino gambling, Massachusetts financial status and politics. Viewers will be invited to call the studio with questions.

The "Pierson to Person" television show is broadcast live from 8 - 9 p.m. Thursdays on Channel 53. The public is invited to be part of the audience at the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision on Gannett Road.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Jane Nylander to speak

Jane Nylander, Director of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, will speak on "Our Own Snug Fireside, Everyday Life in New England 1760 - 1860" at 1 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 14 at the South Shore Art Center.

The lecture is presented by the Cohasset Historical Society's Costume Committee. Refreshments will be served.

Jane Nylander, formerly Senior Curator at Old Sturbridge Village and Director of Strawberry Banks Museum, has written a book, "Our Own Snug Fireside: Images of the New England Home 1760 - 1860," which will be available at the lecture.

Reservations for the lecture and tea are $20 and may be made by sending a check to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset, Mass. 02025. For information call 383-6930.

Art demonstration tonight

Tangents & Resonance, an exhibition by Barrie Andrews and Marie Peters, is on display at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd.

The exhibit features paintings and monotypes on silk and triptychs created by Andrews and paintings and scrolls, with some work incorporating photo imagery, by Peters.

Gallery hours for the exhibition are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 am to 4 pm. Andrews and Peters will give a demonstration complementing the exhibit on Thursday, Sept. 16 at 7:30 pm.

Andrews, who lives in Arlington, has exhibited her work at several Boston galleries including One Boston Place, Gallery Equus, and the Bank of Boston, as well as the Starr Gallery in Newton, South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham, the Coconut Grove Arts Festival in Florida and University of Wisconsin.

This particular exhibition has four main images weaving in and out of the work in a metaphorical way: birds — for aspiration, bridges — for passage, boats — for journey, and bells — for awakening.

The central focus of Andrews' work is a bridge monotyped on individual silk panels of graduated lengths that span about 20 feet. "My work often has to do with passages or transformation," explains Andrews. "I like to play with perspective of time and things, but in a very subtle way."

Peters, an artist living in the Bryantville section of Pembroke, is greatly influenced by nature. "My works reflect nature as it is and man's perception of nature," she explains. Many of her works, which are primarily scrolls in various formations, are born from weathered objects she has sighted during her morning walks.

The recipient of many awards for her photography, printmaking, paper media, drawing and graphics, Peters has exhibited her work at the Danforth and Fuller Art museums, Stonehill College, the Silver Ribbon Gallery in Pembroke and Galleria Mazzuchelli in Florence, Italy.

A Featured Gallery Artists Exhibition with works by Jeremy Barnard of Georgetown, Mary Waring Barnes of Plymouth, Marcia Cannistraro of Raynham, Jean Fox of Stoughton, Carolyn and Robert Harvey of Marshfield, Robert Nason of North Scituate, and Andree Desiree Wilson of Newton Centre will also be displayed.

Both exhibitions are open free to the public. For more information, please call (6 17)383-9548.

Councils may open school doors to community

Principals, parents, teachers, and other community members will soon have more to say about their local schools.

By November "School Councils" must be up and running in the town's elementary and secondary schools.

Under the Education Reform Act — school districts across the state must form School Councils no later than 40 days after school begins.

Councils are to assist principals in: adopting educational goals; identifying education needs of students attending the school; reviewing the school's annual budget; and formulating a school-improvement plan.

School committees have 30 days to review annual improvement plans submitted by councils. If the plan is not reviewed within 30 days of its submission, it is considered to be automatically approved.

School committees may also grant councils additional authority in formulating educational policy except in areas covered by collective bargaining agreements.

Although general duties for the councils are spelled out in state guidelines, Supt. Stephen Hart said it isn't "totally understood how the school improvement plans developed by the councils will be implemented."

Size of the councils is at local discretion but the number of parents on the board must equal the number of teachers plus the principal. Community members-at-large — who are not parents or teachers or students at the school — are recruited by the

Textbook teaching comes under fire

By Mary Ford

The movement toward more hands-on learning and less textbook teaching has educators nervous.

Cohasset school board members are uncomfortable with shifting curriculum and teaching methods if objective test scores — like the SAT — continue to be used as a gauge for how well schools are doing.

The subject came up during discussion of recent studies reviewing Cohasset's science program at the elementary and secondary levels.

Study-team member John G. Mika, Ph. D., science department head at Barnstable High School, stressed the need for more hands-on science and less textbook learning which standardized tests are geared to.

The school department commissioned the study to examine all aspects of science education system-wide.

A major recommendation of the science review is to shift the focus away from

Cesspool regs may pump up home sellers' costs

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Cesspools are on an environmental hit list.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will issue new regulations on upgrading cesspools Friday.

And the news has Realtors and health boards bracing themselves.

DEP engineer Christos Dimisioris said while the details of the regulations — which are a revision of Title V, the state environmental code for subsurface disposal of sanitary waste — cannot be divulged until Sept. 24, the focus is eliminating cesspools.

"It will deal with how and when cesspools will be eliminated," Dimisioris said. "The reason for this is to protect the ground water of Massachusetts."

Among those who are anxious to see the regulations is Realtor Carl Hagopian.

Hagopian is vice-president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors and owns Accord Realty Associates in Norwell.

"I have a lot of concerns," Hagopian said. The real estate industry will be impacted by the regulations because upgrades will need to be made before land is transferred, he added.

"There is a large percentage of homes in Cohasset which would not be up to code — and what about the economic impact on the homeowner?" he asked.

Cohasset Health Agent Joseph Godzik said about 850 homes in town could be affected by the regulations.

Godzik, however, said any discussion of the impact of the regulations was premature.

"Until we get the draft regulations, it is all speculation," Godzik said.

Hingham Health Agent Bruce T. Capman defined cesspool and septic system.

"A cesspool is an underground cylindrical unit made of field stone or granite block. Everything leaches into the ground," Capman explained. "A septic

Golf club hits water hazard in Hingham

By Dori Khoury
Mariner staff

Disputes over water and shared water resources are nothing new to the Cohasset Country Club and the Hingham Conservation Commission.

But Hingham's conservation commission hopes a new water management plan being jointly worked out by both entities will end the confusion.

Conservation agent Pine duBois said the plan is an offshoot of disagreements the commission and the Cohasset Country Club have had over water and adjoining wetlands.

Most recently, she said, the club began digging at a stream that is in a wetlands protection area — without ever notifying the Hingham's conservation commission.

"They had been dredging a stream — and 133 feet of the stream was in Hingham," duBois said.

Cohasset Country Club officials declined to comment on the matter.

Former Hingham conservation agent Joseph Stigliani happened to notice the dredging several weeks ago while doing a site inspection at the club on a separate water issue.

Cohasset's week

Robbery is foiled

Police are investigating an attempted robbery at the Chart House early Saturday morning.

At about 2:30 a.m., Sept. 18 police answered an alarm at the Border Street restaurant.

The burglars, who tried to break into the safe, were apparently scared off when an officer arrived to check the building and left their tools behind, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Officials from the Bureau of Criminal Investigation (BCI) photographed the scene and took fingerprints.

"There are no suspects at this time," Jackson said Tuesday.

Flu clinic planned

The Social Service League plans flu clinics from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 23 and Saturday, Oct. 30 at Cohasset Town Hall.

The date of the second clinic was incorrectly reported in last week's Mariner.

Tax setting time due

The annual tax classification hearing with selectmen and the board of assessors is planned for 8 p.m., Oct. 4 in the selectmen's office. Cohasset's single tax rate for FY'93 was $13.46 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, Assistant Assessor Appraiser Joseph DiVito said.

At the hearing, the pros and cons of a single vs. a split tax rate will be discussed, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Cohasset has always had a single tax rate, DiVito explained. He said the town is about 10 percent commercially zoned. Towns with a split tax rate (different rates for residential and commercial property) are usually more than 15 percent commercially zoned, he said.

Traffic counts coming

The police department has requested Norfolk County Engineers conduct traffic counts on the following streets: Atlantic Ave., Beach St., Beechwood St., Border St., Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Elm St., Forest Ave., Hull St., King St., N. Main St., Pond St. Ripley Rd., Sohier St., S. Main St., Summer St., Pleasant St., and Nichols Rd.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said the studies will help police set up radar in problem areas.

In addition to counts, Noonan said the study can provide a range of information including the speed of traffic and the time of day when traffic is heaviest.

principal and cannot exceed 50 percent of the council's membership.

Hart says the councils may be a way to increase community participation.

"It's a movement towards getting the people who have a direct investment in the school more involved," Hart said.

Parent members are selected by their peers in elections by the parent/teacher organization.

School councils should represent the racial and ethnic diversity of the school and community.

School Council meetings are subject to the "Open Meeting Law" and the "Public Records Law."

The Open Meeting Law requires prior notice of meetings, public access to the meetings, keeping of minutes, and non-disruptive audio and video taping of meetings.

Any documents produced by the councils are public records and may be obtained by the public for a reasonable fee.

Textbook teaching comes under fire

lecturing and more toward doing in Cohasset schools.

But Cohasset kids consistently score well on standardized tests — and are accepted to top colleges.

School board member Ralph Kidder was concerned that Cohasset students are not being prepared for the real world.

The study says "we're doing well on tests — but in educating people to live in a global society, we're not doing too well," Kidder said.

Board member Barbara Bliss said tests don't tell the whole story.

"We should not imply that just because our kids do well on content-driven tests — they don't do well (thinking) critically," she said.

And Supt. Stephen Hart cautioned that studies are intended to be a starting-off point.

"We don't do reviews to paint a perfect picture of Cohasset," he said. "We shouldn't take recommendations for improvement as a condemnation of the system."

Hart said the current movement in educational testing is more toward a process approach.

The format in standardized testing in general is going away from the black and white, content-driven, yes-no, multiple-choice approach to focus more on critical thinking, he said.

Way science is taught needs revamping

Science should not be taught in a vacuum, local educators say.

So there's a move afoot to integrate the science curriculum into other subjects in Cohasset schools.

And recent studies conducted at both the elementary and high school levels say the best approach to science education is less talking and more doing.

The studies, commissioned by the school department, are conducted on a cyclical basis so each subject area is reviewed about every five years.

Reports from both the elementary and high schools emphasize the importance of "conceptual, process-oriented" science.

At the elementary and secondary levels the reports recommend increasing instructional time and finding time for teachers to network and share their ideas.

Double lab periods are recommended at the high school. And the report says there should be fewer "levels" and that students should be grouped more heterogeneously. The report found the curriculum too content-driven and weighted in favor of the life sciences.

On the positive side, the elementary report noted school-wide and classroom science projects and aquaria and terraria in the rooms as evidence that science is alive and well.

But "topics not concepts seem to be the dominate orientation in the curriculum," the report says. "This is not a surprise... since most elementary programs across the country still hold to the traditional topic/content approach."

The high school report noted the strong support for the science program from parents and students. It found that a majority of students are interested in electing more science than the two-year requirement for graduation.

Cesspool regs may pump up home sellers' costs

system begins with a septic tank which separates liquids from solids with the liquids going into a dedicated leaching area."

Septic service provider David Margetts said the cost of upgrading can run into tens of thousands of dollars. Margetts owns E.L. Margetts & Sons in Hingham.

"It could be as low as $3,000 or as high as $50,000 — it depends on the topography of the lot," Margetts said.

President of Home Center Real Estate in Hingham, Gail Petersen Bell fears the regulations will put a disproportionate burden on sellers.

"If sellers are required to upgrade their cesspools, they will realize less profit because they have to install a new system," she said. "Or they will increase their asking price."

Traditionally, Petersen Bell said, improvements to septic systems are not realized at the time a home is sold.

"There may be overpricing by sellers, that's the bottom line," she said.

Hagopian said sellers who bought their homes at the height of the real estate boom will be among the worse hit by the new regulations.

"Say a person bought a home at the height of the market, they are selling at a loss to begin with," Hagopian said. "How in the world will they be able to absorb the cost of upgrading?"

Petersen Bell predicts a difficult road for homeowners and the real estate industry with the new regulations.

"I think it's going to be a nightmare," she said.

Hearings on the regulations will be held throughout Massachusetts Oct. 26 through 28. Times and locations will be posted Sept. 24, Dimisioris said.

Extension granted to license waterfront structures

Owners of small docks, piers and other waterfront structures now have an additional two years to apply for Chapter 91 licenses under the Department of Environmental Protection's amnesty program. The amnesty period, originally set to expire Oct. 4, 1993, has been extended until Oct. 4, 1995 by an act of the Legislature.

Chapter 91, also known as the Public Waterfront Act, protects the public's interest in the waterways of the Commonwealth. It ensures that public rights to fish, fowl, and navigate are not unreasonably restricted and that unsafe or hazardous structures are repaired or removed. Adopted in 1866, it is the oldest law of its kind in the nation.

Chapter 91 licenses are required for such structures as piers, wharves, floats, retaining walls, revetments and pilings on tidelands, great ponds (over 10 acres in its natural state) and certain rivers and streams.

The latest regulations for Chapter 91, adopted in 1990, created the amnesty period to make it easier for people to comply with the law. It is an opportunity for owners of unlicensed structures to apply for licensing without penalty. Qualified amnesty applications are reviewed under the pre-1990 regulations, which generally means lower fees and longer license terms. To date, more than 1,000 amnesty applications have been filed with the department.

Waterfront property owners who would like more information on the amnesty program should call DEP's Waterways Program at a special hotline number, (617) 292-5777, or write: Waterways Program, Department of Environmental Protection, 1 Winter Street, 8th floor, Boston, MA 02108.

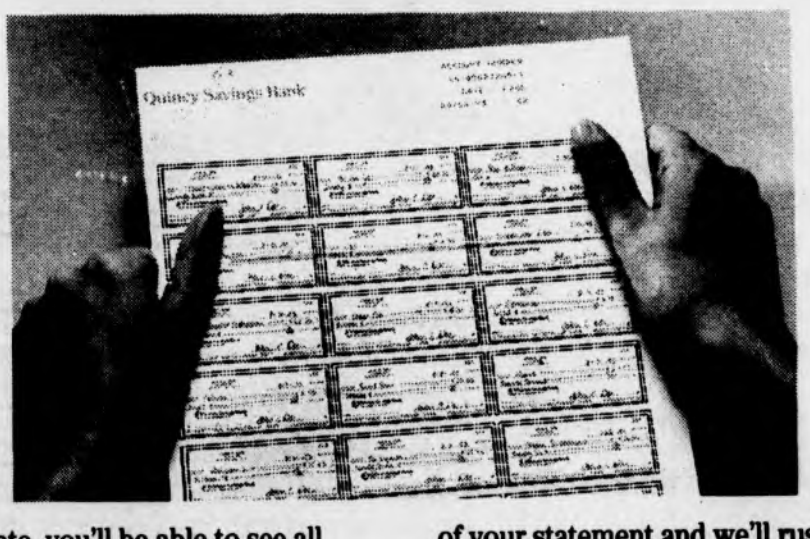
Introducing Check/Mate, an exciting, new option that makes balancing your checking account a snap!



This could be big. Real big!

When you select Quincy Savings Bank's Check/Mate option with any of our regular or money market checking accounts, say goodbye to mountains of canceled checks. Because with Check/Mate, you'll be able to see all your checks in one quick glance.

Check/Mate provides you with pages of reduced, detailed "photos" of each check you've written during the statement period. Up to 18 canceled check fronts per page, already arranged by number.

It's so simple. No more sorting checks by number. No more flipping back and forth between the checks and your statement. No more bulky check storage and filing.

And Check/Mate serves as proof of payment. But if you ever need to have a copy of the front and back of a check, call the customer service number on the front of your statement and we'll rush you a copy.

Check/Mate is an option with every Quincy Savings personal checking or money market account. If you'd like to try it, visit your local branch and ask for a customer service representative.

Check/Mate . . . a big idea that shrinks the hassles of balancing your checking account.

Day trip planned

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset plans an exciting day trip to beautiful historic Nantucket Island, Wednesday, Oct. 6.

Meeting time is 7 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. The bus will take participants to Hyannis to catch the "Eagle," which leaves at 9:15 a.m., arriving at 11:30 a.m.

A full luncheon is planned at the Jared Cofin House. Following lunch, Barrett's Tours will provide a 1 1/2 hour historic tour of the island. Cost is $54 total. Visitors welcome. For information and reservations call Linda, 383-0482, or Leanne, 383-9071. Limited seating.

Flower arranging set

A one-day flower arranging workshop is planned at the Community Center by horticulturist Mary Hickey. Come learn the elements of principles and design. Bring a low container and clippers. The workshop is Sept. 29, 7 to 9:30 p.m. and repeated Sept. 30, 9:30. a.m. to noon. Fee is $12. Cost of the materials is $15 payable to the instructor.

Gardeners meet Tuesday

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 28 at the Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church.

Mr. Tony Todesco, floral designer, will present "Creative Adventures with flowers." Coffee will be served.

Paying those bills

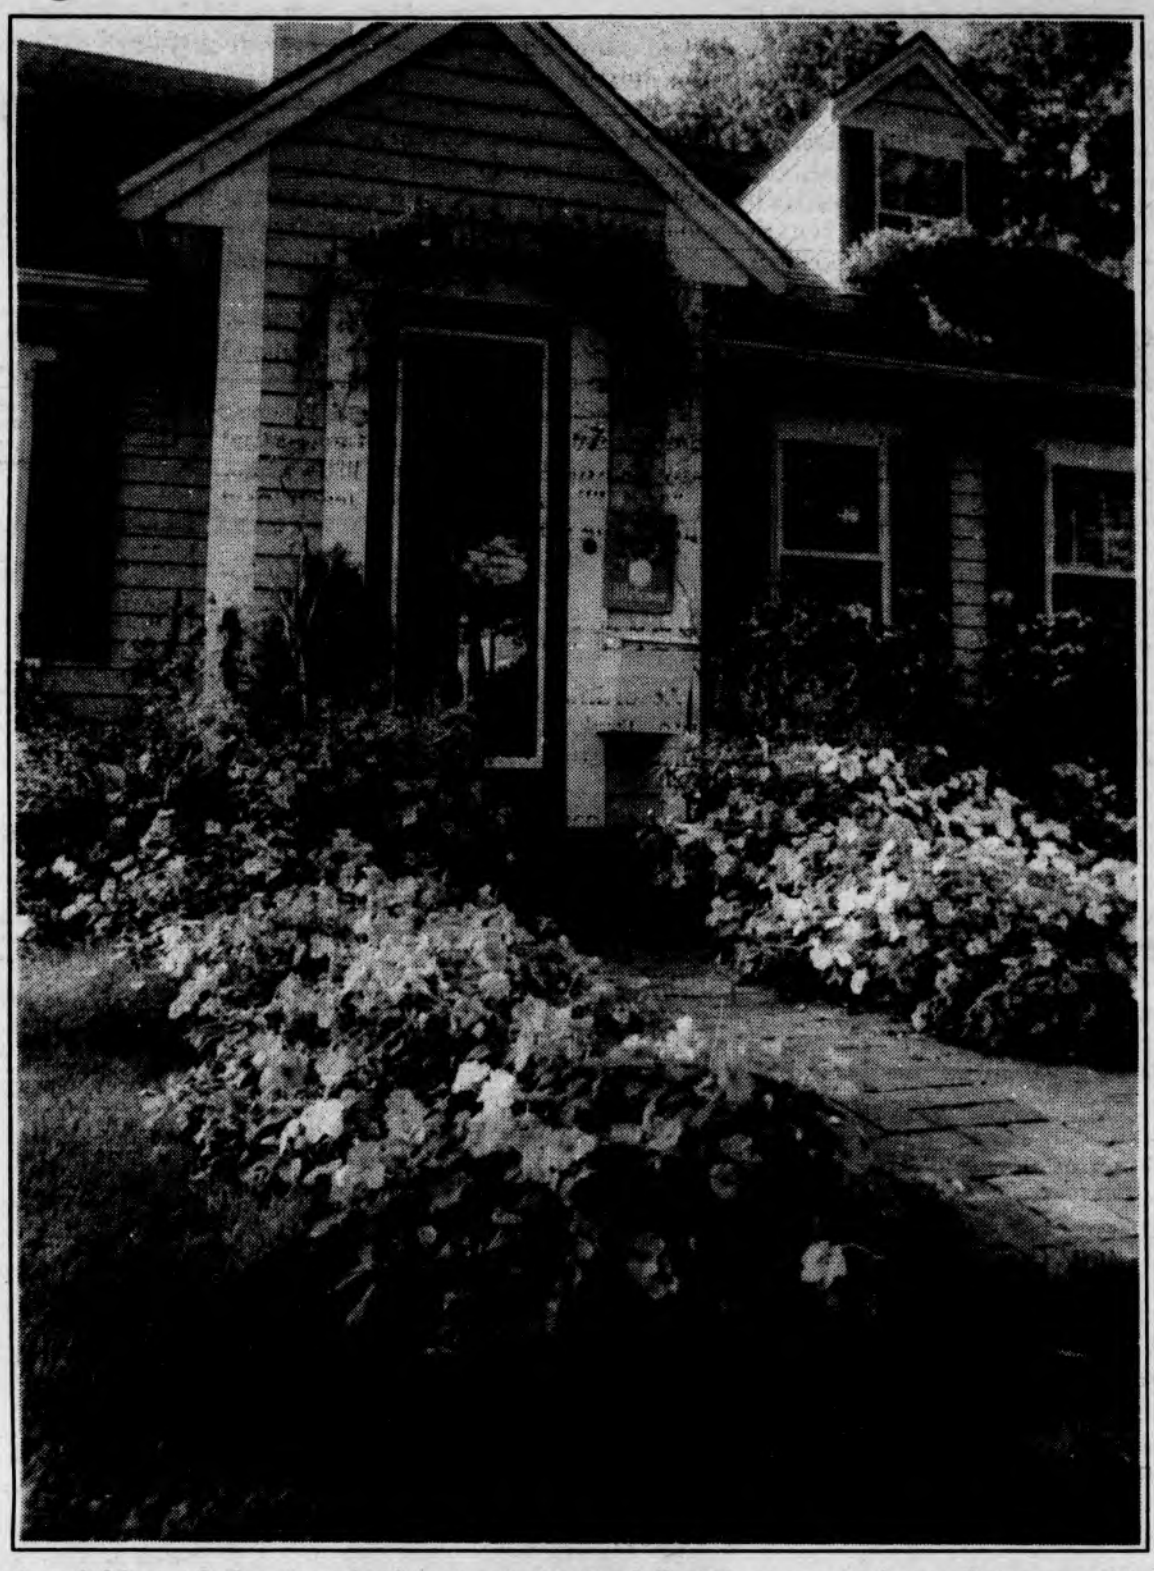
Selectmen approved payment of the following bills this week: $120.40 to Warner & Stackpole for professional services regarding Cohasset Heights; $6,075 to Tucci & Roselli for the town's FY'93 financial audit; $3,786 to town counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services for August; and $48,300 to Tro-Con Corp. for storm damage repair contingent on removal of wood debris. The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is expected to reimburse the town for 75 percent of the costs for storm repairs, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

The board also authorized payment of $7,000 towards a bill of $18,600 to Management Development Institute, Inc., for the five-town fire department regionalization study. The study, is being paid for through a $30,000 state grant. The town has received only partial payment of the grant, Doyon said. The $7,000 being applied to the total bill comes from grant monies received and $3,000 ($600 each) contributed by participating towns."

"The state still owes us funds towards this," Doyon said. "We are not able to draw a check for the full amount."

Selectmen approved partial payment. The balance will be paid when additional money from the grant is received.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863



A neighbor of the Cunningham's at 47 Norfolk Rd. requested we showcase this meticulously maintained home. He said cars come and go frequently to photograph the lovely planting of impatiens. The home is bursting with color from the pink-and-white impatiens to the pink-and-white geraniums spilling out of the window boxes. When I stopped at the house, Sue Cunningham was tacking up the blue Morning Glory framing the teal front door. She has certainly turned her home into a storybook cottage!

Scituate harbor rescue saves beloved Cohasset canine

Pat Hanlon of Beechwood Street is thankful that quick thinking assistant harbormasters in Scituate were able to rescue her beloved golden retriever, Beau.

Beau and Hanlon were enjoying their daily walk Monday in Scituate Harbor when Beau inadvertently walked off the cement walkway and landed in harbor waters. Thinking she could step on the leash quickly if there was a problem, Hanlon had let Beau walk with his leash hanging at his side.

Slick boulders kept the 12-year-old retriever from being able to climb out on his own, Hanlon said.

After hearing Hanlon's cries a couple, who was walking nearby, dashed into the harbormasters' office for help. Assistant harbormaster Mike DiMeo helped Beau from the rocks and Mark Patterson from the boat and they were able to get the 70-pound dog into the boat and back safely to shore.

"I want to thank those young men." Hanlon said.

Hanlon took her shivering retriever home and treated him to warm bath and dried him off with the blow drier.

"We walk in many different places," Hanlon said. "But we're not going that way (Scituate Harbor) for a little while.

"And I'll bring a longer leash next time," she said.

Golf club hits water hazard in Hingham

He informed the country club that they were in violation of the Wetlands Protection Act.

The club has since filed a request with the Conservation Commission to dredge the stream. DuBois said the commission would vote on the filing at an upcoming meeting.

She noted, however, that the filing is simply a formality at this point.

"They've finished the dredging," she said.

The issue however highlights the need for a plan, duBois said.

"It's important we work out a water management plan with them," duBois said.

She hopes the country club will cooperate with the board's request for a plan, but history is not necessarily on her side.

Several months ago, the Cohasset Country Club charged Hingham with impounding water. The site of the impounding was the skating pond off East Street.

According to Stigliani, the pond feeds into Turkey Hill brook which runs through the Cohasset Country Club property.

"They came to us with a request to lower the level of the skating pond," Stigliani said. Lowering the pond's level in Hingham, he explained, would provide more water for the Cohasset Country Club because water would run downstream into Cohasset.

When the conservation commission denied the club's request, the club took Hingham to court.

"And the judge issued an order to release the water," Stigliani said.

After the order was issued, Stigliani went to the country club to monitor how much water actually left Hingham for Cohasset.

"It was while I was there that I noticed the dredging," he said.

Stigliani, who is now the assistant superintendent of public works in Hingham, said he hopes the club will cooperate with the commission on all future endeavors regarding shared water sources.

Melissa Meallo, J.D.

❑ We must begin this by saying that this is a very special day for a very special gal! Today, Sept. 23, is Jen McAuliffe's birthday and we hope that it is the best one that she has had yet.

Happy birthday, Jen!

❑ Hope that everyone got the chance to see Lilly Sestito at Fenway Park last week when she sang the National Anthem before the Red Sox game! She was shown on channel 56 later that night, and she had a huge crowd from our own Cohasset to see her. Lilly moved right up this year; remember we wrote that she sang at Pawtucket this spring?

It's a safe bet that the ball players wish that they'd move up to the big leagues that fast. Congratulations go to you, Lilly!

By the way, Lilly sings for every occasion, and she is wonderful. Any event that you need a singer for, give her a call.

❑ The Sandell household and Cohasset Savings Bank have news to share this week. Natalia Gallego from Madrid, Spain, part of the Cultural Home Stay Institute Career Exploration Program, is here! Natalia is staying with the Sandells and she'll be here until mid-November. Her wish was to learn all about banking, so she will be working at the Cohasset Savings Bank. She began last Monday.

Be sure to go in and give her a Cohasset welcome, and we wish Natalia a grand time during her stay here.

❑ Don't forget that there are two giant yard sales going on this weekend. The Cohasset Community Center is holding theirs on the Common and the VFW Post 9146 yard sale is taking place at Stop and Shop. Saturday, Sept. 25, is the date (VFW Post 9146 will have a Sunday, Sept. 26 raindate), both start at 9 a.m., and both should have lots of treasures for you to purchase.

❑ On the subject of the Community Center, the Senior Citizen Center has a wish list for their kitchen. Anything you might have, from measuring cups to blenders, is needed and would be greatly appreciated.

Please give a call (383-0088) if you have anything.

❑ Received happy/sad news last week. Charlie Stover will be retiring Sept. 1, 1994. Charlie has been a part of the school system for more than 30 years and has surely been more than a custodian. He has been a friend to many, a help-mate and a friend. Charlie is always there to lend a hand!

Be sure to tell him how great he is, and that he will certainly be missed.

❑ Time for belated birthday greetings. Brendan McCarthy was 20 Sept. 17, and we sure hope that his big day was a great one.

❑ The university of Mass. at Amherst sends word of three Cohasset scholars that made the grade last semester. Paul Ford, Charlotte N. Begley and Elizabeth M. Hurley all made the dean's list for the spring semester, and we take our hats off to them for their efforts.

❑ The Cohasset South Shore Hospital Committee invites you to attend an informal reception Wednesday, Sept. 29, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center to learn more about the community services provided by the hospital. Exhibits on display will be Advanced Life Support, Cardiac Catherization, Pediatrics and the Visiting Nurse Association.

A presentation about the Outpatient Rehabilitation Center, in addition to an exhibit by local artists Barrie Andrews and Marie Peters, will also be part of this program. RSVP by calling 340-8856.

❑ Polly Logan makes the news again this week; she sure is one busy lady! Polly introduced Betty Friedan, who spoke at Boston Public Library in the Rabb Lecture Hall.

Ms Friedan is known for her book The Feminine Mystique, and has written the Fountain Of Age (which was what the lecture was about). A book signing and reception followed at the Harvard Book Store. Polly sure meets the best!

❑ Melissa Meallo was awarded the degree of Juris Doctor from Suffolk University last spring and is currently employed as a law clerk for John J. Kerrigan in Boston. She received her BS in management from Bridgewater State college in 1989 and is also a 1983 CHS grad.

Melissa is the daughter of Albert and Paula Meallo, and the mother of Joseph Meallo, age eight.

❑ The CHS Phys Ed department is in need of golf cubs, irons to be exact. Needed are 7, 8, and 9 irons. Just think, your daughter or son could begin his claim to fame at CHS. Call 383-6101 or just drop them off.

❑ John Knott's dance party classes begin Tuesday, Sept. 28. They are open to all boys and girls in grades six and seven. Invitations have been sent to everyone. Mr. Knott is proud that he has taught three generations in Cohasset. That is more than 50 years in the Cohasset area.

Call Martha Equi, general chairman, at 383-0461 for more information.

❑ Happy 50th anniversary to Arthur and Roberta Lehr!

❑ That's the news for this week. Keep it coming so we can all know what's going on in your family!

editorial

Of historical note

"Government Island" is about to turn another page in history.

The seven-acre parcel — which was once the U.S. Lighthouse Service Shore Station, Gulf Island — has been voted eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission voted the property eligible Sept. 8 and has submitted the nomination to The National Register Office, National Park Service, Washington, D.C.

Listing on the National Register should now be only a formality.

As local historian David Wadsworth points out, "it should be clear sailing from now on." The state doesn't spend months reviewing an application and then vote to send it on without being pretty sure the national office will sign off on it, he explains.

The town should hear from the national office within a week or two.

The Cohasset Historical Commission prepared the inventory for the nomination considered by the state. This was no small task — the project took several years. Then the state commission spent about a year reviewing the material and preparing the nomination for the federal review board.

There are about 53,000 properties in the state on the National Register. Government Island will be the first town-owned property to be included. The Caleb Lothrup House, which is owned by the historical society, is listed. And the state is currently reviewing the inventory of the Cohasset Common Historic District for nomination to the National Register.

Benefits of being listed on the National Register include recognition, some tax incentives, eligibility for preservation grants, and protection from adverse effects of projects paid for by the state or federal governments.

So while there is no tremendous tangible benefit to being listed — intangible pluses like prestige and pride can't be measured.

Cohasset citizens owe a debt of gratitude to members of the Cohasset Historical Commission for their tireless work to obtain this recognition for the town.

And hats also go off to the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation for their preservation work on the Lightkeepers' residence and again to the historical commission for its work on the Minot's Light replica.

Listing on the National Register will surely open another chapter for the island which is steeped in Cohasset history.

Support for ed. foundation appreciated

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank the founding directors and the community for their broad support of the foundation's goals for educational excellence in our public schools. In our first year, our directors have worked hard to identify projects which improve educational opportunities for all students and to develop a wide variety of resources to achieve these goals.

This week Cohasset residents received a brochure announcing our mission, goals and objectives, as well as our founding directors and advisors. The directors believe that their efforts will benefit not only Cohasset's children and future generations, but the whole community as well.

The Cohasset Education Foundations' gift of $10,000 for our first project, the new Osgood School computer lab, represents contributions from the community's support of our Aug. '92 Cosby benefit, from local philanthropists, grandparents and individuals, in addition to the directors' gifts. Corporate in-kind contributions will also help equip the lab.

The foundation's corporate partnership and grant writing efforts will provide innovative resources to help fund its next projects, a year-long artist-in-residence program for the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools, and improvements to the high school foreign language lab. As its first school improvement goals, the directors chose projects based on computers, the arts, and foreign languages, because they believe these skills are essential, and the project costs are beyond the scope of the traditional school budget.

The Cohasset Education Foundation looks forward to cooperation with the PSO, town government, the business community, and other local organizations for the benefit of the town.

CDC scholarship is appreciated

(Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was submitted to the Cohasset Mariner for publication.) Dear Ms. Walsh, and Members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club,

I am writing this letter to thank each and everyone of you for the generous scholarship the Dramatic Club gave me in June. I am very proud to say I will be attending the Eastman School of Music this coming fall, and your scholarship will definitely be put to good use.

Also, I am sorry it's taken me so long to get this to you. This summer I've been working on a musical production in New York and so things have been rather hectic — to say the very least!

Again my most sincere thanks for your generosity.

Thanks for Fireman's Muster

To the Editor:

The Second Congregational Church would like to thank the Community Center for organizing a very successful and enjoyable Fireman's Muster. Thanks to the initiative of the Community Center and the enthusiastic support of all those who attended, we were able to raise slightly more than $1,000 for Mid-West flood relief.

Thanks for your support,
Second Congregational Church

Friendly sparring with Flaherty sparks talk show

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

State Rep. Charles F. Flaherty (D-Cambridge) knows the best defense is a good offense.

He wasn't about to let local talk show host Wigmore Pierson get the upper hand — or a direct answer.

During Pierson's talk show "Pierson to Person" last Thursday, the Speaker of the House managed to dodge questions about back-door legislative tactics, term limitations, and legislators' pay raises — by challenging the questioner.

Undaunted, Pierson kept plugging away but didn't get anything in return but a lot of political double talk.

Flaherty deflected any criticism about trying to get pay raises for legislators in through the "back door" — by denying back-door tactics exist in the legislature. He added however that people should be concerned about how "little" their public servants are paid.

The public "isn't crying any tears for the legislators," Pierson countered, saying that many work part-time.

'But I call him 'Gov.,' it rhymes with luv.'
— Flaherty talking about weekly chats with Gov. Weld.

But Flaherty contended that the some of the best don't serve because of the $30,000 annual salary.

"We should want the best people serving. None of us knows how many consider running and don't," Flaherty said.

The Speaker didn't answer Pierson's question whether it's true that "some procedures and processes in the House are not open to public scrutiny."

Instead he talked about citizens' right of free petition: that any citizen can file a piece of legislation.

"I think we're the most open (legislature)," he said.

The speaker — with 27 years in the House — said there's only one kind of term limitation he agrees with.

"It's an election," he said.

The discussion wasn't all politics.

Candidly, Flaherty talked about overcoming an intense fear of public speaking that plagued him in high school and college in order to run for public office.

And Flaherty spoke positively about Gov. William Weld.

"I'm his representative — he's my constituent," Flaherty noted about the Republican governor who is a Cambridge resident.

He said he, Weld and Senate President William Bulger meet weekly for about two hours to discuss issues and concerns.

He said Weld usually calls him, "Mr. Speaker," and Bulger, "Mr. President."

"But I call him 'Gov.,' it rhymes with luv," he said.

Flaherty said Rep. Mark Roosevelt (D-Boston) and Sen. Michael J. Barrett (D-Cambridge) may challenge Weld in the 1994 gubernatorial race. He said Democrats Attorney General Scott Harshbarger and former Lawrence state Sen. Patricia McGovern are also rumored to be interested in a run for governor.

Regarding the proposed 'MegaPlex,' the Speaker said he is not "an obstructionist but is skeptical" about the need for a 'domed' stadium but said Boston does need larger convention facilities.

And Flaherty was upbeat about the Massachusetts economy.

He cited the upgrade in the state bond rating, three balanced budgets, more money for local aid, and a friendly business environment as positives.

And on the Education Reform Act, Flaherty said the true test is if "we muster the political will" to fund the bill two or three years down the road.

Pierson to Person, which is televised to 40 area communities, is shown live at 8 p.m. Thursdays on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and on Channel 53 in Hingham. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday and those planning to attend should be at the North Scituate studio by 7:30 p.m. For more information, please call the show's executive producer, Bob Belliveau at 545-2000.

Community Lights

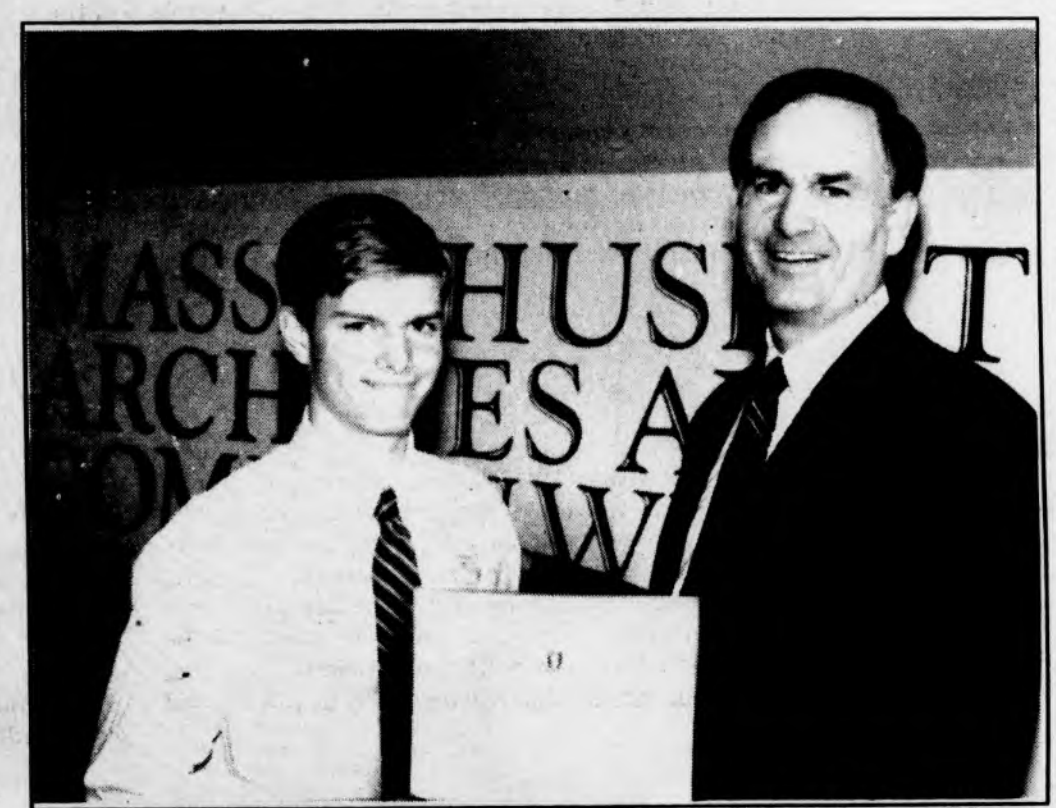
Here is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• If you've ever wondered how you can help even in a small way in the fight against cancer you can get the answers at a Volunteer Opportunity Meeting from 6 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 30 at the Cohasset Community Center. Representatives from the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will review the many services the Society performs through volunteers in nine South Shore communities. Light refreshments will be served. For information, please call 617-341-4210.

From providing information on cancer prevention and healthy diets, to help with free mammography clinics, friendly calls on mastectomy patients, and free transportation to hospitals, American Cancer Society volunteers serve thousands yearly. Don't miss this opportunity to see how you can make a difference!

• Key community organizer needed to help plan and promote "Cohasset by the Sea" benefit walk for Multiple Sclerosis. Work with community leaders, volunteers and corporations to build strong walk committee and follow through with campaign's site logistics. Flexible hours. Good communications skills necessary. Please call Lori at (508) 291-2169 for more information.

• Hospice of the South Shore, a component of South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services an affiliate of South Shore Hospital, offers a direct care volunteer training program starting Oct. 5. The program runs for 12 consecutive Tuesday evenings. Hospice volunteers offer companionship to those who are critically ill and respite to their families. For more information, please call Beth Loomis at (617) 843-0947 ext. 803.



Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly awards a citation of recognition to Nicholas Terry of Cohasset for his outstanding service as a volunteer State House tour guide. Citations of Recognition were awarded to high school students who participated in the Junior Guide Program at a reception recently at the Massachusetts Archives and Commonwealth Museum.

• The Cohasset food Pantry is serving an increasing number of local families. On the basis of current and expected future needs, food pantry organizers are recruiting additional volunteers to handle collection and distribution of food. The pantry, which is supported by local churches and social services is located in the rear of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. next to Town Hall and distributes food each Tuesday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 7-8 p.m.

At present the pantry helps about 20 local families by providing good, quality supplemental food and household supplies. The food comes from donations by churches and other organizations, individuals, and through purchases at the Boston Food Bank.

Volunteers are needed especially for the hours when the Pantry is open and are asked for only a minimal amount of time convenient to them. Anyone wishing to learn more about volunteering at the Pantry, may call Annette Sawchuck at 383-0050.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

Volunteers are asked to pledge only one trip per month scheduled at their convenience and are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• If you have some time to share and want to make a difference in your town — then how about volunteering to serve on a town board?

The following committees have vacancies: cable-TV council (4); handicapped commission (1), zoning appeals board (1 associate), school facilities committee (1), Government Island study committee (1), water resources protection committee (1), and mosquito control committee (1).

If interested, please stop by the selectmen's office or call 383-9900 and leave you name and phone number. The member of the board of selectmen, who serves a liaison to the committee you're interested in serving on, will get back to you.

Lilly steals the show at Fenway

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Lilly Sestito is a good luck charm.

Twice this summer she sang the National Anthem before Pawtucket Red Sox games.

Both times the Paw Sox won.

Then last Wednesday, Sestito belted out that well-known tune before the Boston Red Sox-Baltimore Orioles game.

The Red Sox won making Lilly three for three.

"I guess I should sing before the Patriots game," she laughed. "Maybe they'll win a game."

Sestito, 27, a Cohasset native who lives in Scituate with her husband Joseph, has been singing since she was very young in church choirs and at weddings. But she said nothing compares to singing the National Anthem at Fenway Park.

It was so special that 150 friends and family members bought tickets to the game to watch her strut her stuff.

"It was a dream come true for me," Sestito said. "I had a great time and it was nice having everyone there to see it."

As for her performance, she received a rousing ovation from the 30,000-plus at the game. And as she walked back to her seats, numerous fans in the stands personally congratulated her.

"I think everything went excellent song-wise," she said. "The acoustics are not the greatest at Fenway but I thought it went well."

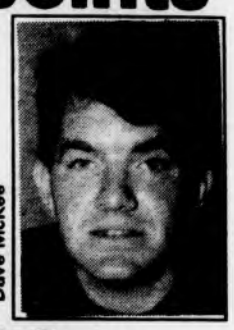
Joe Reardon



Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

David McKee attended last Wednesday's Red Sox game to write a story on Lilly Sestito, a local lady who sang the National Anthem. The following is his report.

One good thing about having to write a story about someone singing the National Anthem is you have to get on the field at Fenway to properly do the job.

Therefore, two field passes were obtained for the game against Baltimore through the Fenway PR department.

I ended up going with my roomie and met him after work.

We drove into Boston and were at Fenway at 5:45 p.m. The game was scheduled for 7:30 p.m. but we wanted to get there early and watch batting practice and hang with Mo and Cal.

We went down to the press gate and obtained the two field passes and headed towards the action.

Only the press and the players were there that early as the regular ticket holders were not in the park yet.

My roomie and I waltzed right down to the front row and opened the gate behind home plate.We stepped on the field and started walking towards home plate where the Sox were taking batting practice.

Ever since I was a kid, I wanted to go on the field at Fenway and now I was there.

I could not believe it. I was having a Kodak moment.

At the cage, Mo Vaughn and Rob Deer were taking batting practice off coach Gary "Mugsy" Allenson.

This dynamic duo hit monster shot after monster shot off the Mugster.

Vaughn hit balls over the Sox bullpen in right field like it was nothing. He was more stocky than I expected and the ball made a loud "whack" every time it hit his bat.

As for Deer, he simply turned on the ball and launched dinger after over the Green Monster.

I know it was batting practice with nice straight 70 m.p.h. fastballs, but I would not want to pitch to either of them. They could really ruin someone's day with a batted ball.

The park itself was beautiful. The grass and infield diamond were impeccably groomed and the Green Monster was even more impressive on the field than on TV.

Along with everyone else, I wanted to grab a bat and take a few swings at the Monster. But the only thing in my way was about 50 baseball players and 25 security guards. I decided to stay back.

I watched the Sox hit a little while longer but I was beginning to melt in the late summer heat. Dressed in long pants and a heavy cotton dress shirt, I was dying. So I quickly dashed off the field and bought a nice cool Red Sox T-shirt at a souvenir stand and ditched the dress shirt. I felt better and returned to the field with my trusty field pass.

When I got back, the Baltimore Orioles were hitting.

Cal Ripken was the star for the Orioles and he did not disappoint. He hit the ball all over the field and even lined two or three into the net in left.

When he was done hitting, he went over and signed autographs for the fans. It was nice to see someone signing autographs and not charging any money.

Skippers too big for Wildcats in opening win

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

WEST BRIDGEWATER—What began as a potential ominous start for the Cohasset football team ended up as being no more than a faint recollection by the time the Skippers ran out the clock for a decisive 21-6 victory over West Bridgewater.

The Wildcats' Will Donahue took the opening kick-off of the game at his own 20 yard line and ran untouched for the 80-yard score; not a great start for head coach Ted MacDermott and his club coming off a 4-6 season last year.

But that would be all the scoring West Bridgewater would do for the afternoon as the extra-point attempt was blocked and Cohasset quickly established its running game behind the running of Scott Theriault (20 carries for 90 yards) and Chris Rolandelli.

That's precisely what Cohasset wanted to execute. They ran early and often. Starting quarterback Jeff Littlehale took to the air just four times all afternoon.

Littlehale, who was starting his first game at quarterback appeared nervous early-on, particularly when he faded back to throw. MacDermott believes it was just opening-day jitters and no real problem with his signal caller.

"Jeff did a good job at quarterback," he said. "This was his first varsity game and he was probably a little nervous.

"He has been throwing well in practice, but this isn't practice. It's a game."

Cohasset's attack plan was to utilize the size of their line to control the ball for as much of the game as possible.

The strategy worked like a charm.

"The game plan was to work behind the big offensive line," said assistant coach Bob Sylvia. "Our strength is definitely our offensive line and backs. We're big up front."

"The defensive line played outstanding all day," MacDermott said.

MacDermott credited the "excellent two-way games" of Dorian Bryant, Brandon DeVoe, Andy Church and Brian Patterson.

It was Bryant who stopped Shawn O'Neil on a first-and-goal sweep from the 3 on WB's most successful drive of the game in the fourth. Two plays later

Netminders make difference

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Don Satter went into the girls' soccer season confident his Skipper squad would fare well in the always-strong South Shore League. There was just one small item Cohasset's first-year coach had to take care of first. Satter needed a goaltender.

After holding auditions, he determined freshman Caty Campbell would get the nod.

"We literally went through a process of looking for an athlete with good hands and reflexes," Satter said of finding a player to guard the empty space between the posts. "She looks to me to have tremendous potential."

Satter's move proved to be a good one as Campbell registered a shutout in her goaltending debut and the offense struck for three goals to drop Norton 3-0 in the season-opener last Wednesday afternoon.

Tracey Connor, Katie Ross and Corinna McMackin blasted home a goal each against the Lancers to give Satter win No. 1 coaching the Cohasset squad.

But Campbell's second game in goal will have to wait a while after she broke a finger on what Satter called "a fluke" during Sunday's practice when she caught a shot on net.

Campbell continued to practice with the injured digit without revealing just how much pain she was in. Eventually, though, she told Satter.

"I didn't even know about it," he said. "She stayed in for another 20 minutes. She's a tough kid."

Back-up netminder Emily Henderson got the nod for the second game against a tough Abington squad in the following game and kept the Skippers in the game against the defending SSL champions.

The Green Wave took a 2-0 lead at the 4:30 mark, but captain Kate Carroll scored on an indirect kick and junior striker Erin Murphy tied the game 2-2 at 16 minutes in the first half.

Abington began to pull away in the second half. They tallied for three more goals, one, on a controversial call resulting in a free kick, to take a 5-2 win.

Satter, though, was pleased with his squad's control of the ball — they outshot Abington 19-13 — and the Skippers' ability to come back after falling behind early against a bigger, more experienced club.

"We showed a lot of character," Satter said. "We have a young team but we did

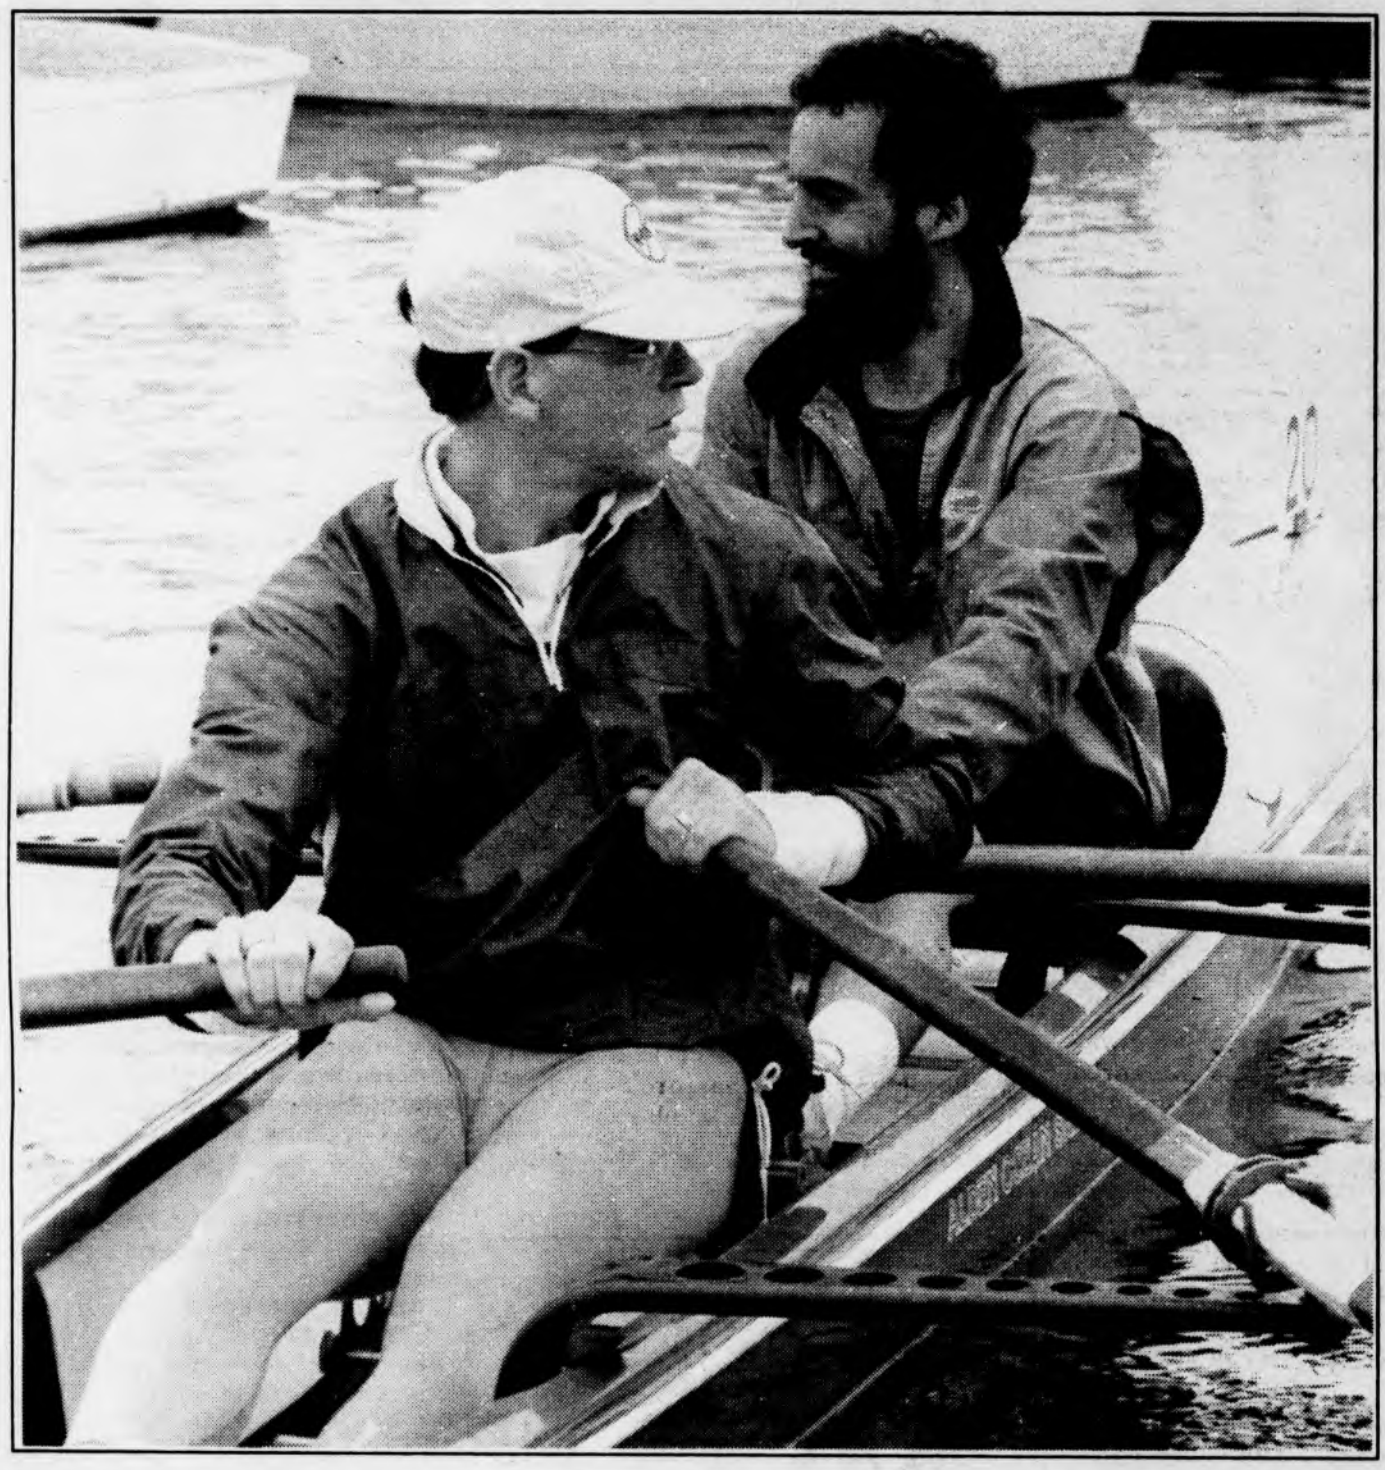
Rowers hit the sea in annual Minot race

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

There was no wind, but the waves were rocking and rolling during Saturday's Sixth annual Minot's Light Roundabout rowing race.

Twenty-four boats, 14 sliding-seat crafts and 10-fixed seats, competed in the 5—1/2 mile race from the Breakwater Inn in Cohasset Harbor, around the buoy that marks Jefferey's Ledge, around Minot Light House and back.

Hargey Heap of Yarmouth Maine had the fastest time of the day, finishing in 55.2 minutes, just in front of race sponsor Jack Hubbard's 55.3.



"Everybody was pretty darn close," said Hubbard, who resides in Cohasset and rows year-round.

The competition had a "head race" start. Rowers began one at a time in a staggered start manner. A seven-second gap seperated the starters, Hubbard said.

"I started quite a bit ahead of him (Heap)," said Hubbard, when asked if the two dueled during the course of the race.

Kate O'Brien of Natick was the top women's finisher (55.65). Other local finishers included Scituate's Kim Latorraca (58.8), Judy Simmons (62.78) and John Howe (78.3), both of Cohasset. The race was Howe's first.

The boat "John Warren" renovated by students in Cohasset High School's alternate program, was rowed by several local women, including some who belong to the "Women with Big Sticks" club.

The Cape Cod Viking Rowing Club organized the fixed-seat section of the race.

Hubbard said the race went smoothly and is already looking to the seventh year of the event in '94.

"It was very successful," he said. "We had a party after at the sailing club and everyone had a good time."

New 'step' workout schedule at town hall

The new schedule for Step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall:

"Fatburner"/intro (beginners to intermediate), Monday and Wednesday nights, 5 to 6 p.m.

"Fatburner"/Power Step (intermediate to advanced), Tuesday and Thursday nights at 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10 session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Judo course begins

Judo classes, taught by Jim Cregg, begin Sept. 25 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for ages 10 and over. Judo training gives an effective self-defense system. Regular training can improve aerobic capacity, speed, power, strength, agility, and flexibility. Call to register or for more information at 383-0088.

Lilly Sestito steals show at Fenway

Sestito, who has a honey-like soprano voice, made it through the song without missing a word or a beat.

Hanover's Rob Giordani was one of the 150 family members and friends at the game. The whole group sat in the grandstand section along right field. The only two who couldn't make it were Sestito's parents who are vacationing in Italy.

"I thought she sounded great," Giordani said. "I snuck down front and saw her up close and thought she hit it perfectly."

Asked if he would have the courage to sing in front of the fans at Fenway, Giordani said, "No way. I can't even sing Karaoke."

The Sox game was broadcast on New England Sports Network and a feature story on Sestito was aired by Channel 56.

"I've heard from a lot of people offering their congratulations," she said. "And I'm hoping I can do it again."

She said the Sox want her to sing again next year. She is hopeful other Boston sports teams will want her to sing as well.

After the game, Sestito met Sox manager Butch Hobson and several players in the clubhouse.

"Butch was great," Sestito said. "I was a big fan of his growing up and it was great to meet him."

Sestito got the singing gig at Fenway through Cohasset's Bill Enos, a retired Sox scout.

Sestito and her husband own J.J.'s Dairy Hut and Enos frequently stops by the shop.

One thing led to another and he asked her for a tape of her singing.

He brought it to the Red Sox brass and Sestito ended up singing in Pawtucket twice before getting the call to the Big Leagues.

When not singing or working at J.J.'s, Sestito sells real estate for Hunneman/Coldwell Banker.

Joseph, owns and operates Sestito Landscaping.

"Joe is my total support system," Lilly said. "Without him none of this would be possible."

extra points

As for media celebrities. I saw NESN's Amy Stone and Bob Rodgers and Channel 56's Frank Mallicoat.

Rodgers coaches baseball at Silver Lake High School when not producing or hosting at NESN.

We didn't get to talk to any players while we were on the field. They were pretty busy and I would have felt cheesy asking them questions when I was working on a story about someone singing the National Anthem.

It was now 6:45 p.m. and all press had to clear the field 45 minutes before the game.

As for Lilly and her singing, I did not catch up with her on the field before the game. I guess the change of shirts threw her because she told me later she was looking for a guy in a red shirt.

Anyway, I met her at the press gate and went onto the field when she sang at 7:30 p.m.

I was standing about five feet away from her during her entire performance taking photos.

There were more than 30,000 people watching her with other countless millions watching on ESPN.

She sounded great.

We watched the game in someone else's seats for a while and then headed out.

Skippers too much for WB

Rolandelli knocked back-up quarterback Kevin Panos out of bounds to hold the Wildcats with Donahue's run as their lone score.

Patterson sacked West Bridgewater quarterback Matt Von Protz for a seven-yard loss on the Wildcats' second possession and then ran Protz down later in the first quarter to force an incomplete pass and a punting situation.

Cohasset scored what turned out to be the game-winning touchdown on a 13-yard run by Theriault off left tackle with 1:07 left in the first half. The run completed a 10 play, 49-yard drive.

The Skippers showed their domination at the line of scrimmage by picking up three first downs on the drive.

On the ensuing kick-off, Church made a heads-up play by making a solid tackle at the Wildcat 13 to kill any chance of giving WB good field position in the final minute of the half.

The Skippers were stopped on their next to last possession of the third quarter, but got the ball back almost immediately when Brian Sasso recovered a fumble at the WB 21. Six plays later and Theriault was in the end zone for the second time, this one coming on a 5-yard sweep down the right side at the 5:56 mark of the fourth.

Rolandelli, who was battling the flu, added a score of his own, bulling his way 3 yards up the middle for the final touchdown.

not back down at all."

Satter pointed out the 19-13 edge in shots the Skippers had over Abington.

"That's a good territorial advantage," he said. "Those are the kinds of things early in the season I'll be looking for.

"We did a lot of things offensively we worked on in practice. I was happy with the way we played because from what I've gathered, Abington is a traditional power in the South Shore League."

He also credited the part Henderson played in goal. She didn't learn, she would be the starting goaltender until Satter called her Sunday evening.

"She went in and did a great job for her first time out," he said.

Rally day planned

Sunday, Sept. 26, the Beechwood Congregational Church will be holding Rally Day. The Sunday School will be starting a new year. A pancake breakfast will be held from 8 to 9:30 a.m. Morning services are at 10 a.m. All children will register for classes during the service.

The Sunday School uses a Bible-based curriculum and welcomes children ages three and up through grade 12. New children are welcome to join the Sunday School at any time. The church is also looking for adults interested in music for singing in the church choir or playing the handbells.

For further information, leave message at the church, 383-0808, or call 383-0362.

Saturday drama workshop

The Cohasset Recreation Department accepts telephone registrations for Saturday morning drama workshops for boys and girls ages seven to 12. Please call 383-6791 to register.

Drama meets from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall, starting Oct. 16 for six weeks through Nov. 20.

The fee is $27 per child.

Elizabeth Deveney will teach acting and play production. The children will perform a play at the end of the session. Parents and friends are invited to attend this production.

Saturday, Oct. 2, the Wildlife Center sponsors a Wildlife Photography Day. Come and have your picture taken with "Clack" the barred owl, "Bob" the porcupine, "B.J." the red-tailed hawk, or "Monty" the 13' long, 75-pound python.

Pictures make wonderful Christmas and holiday gifts. Have this year's Christmas card show your family with a wildlife member. The event will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine. Admission is $5 per person and this includes one free picture by a professional photographer with the animal of your choice. Other photo package options will be available. Bring your own camera. There will be photographers on site to help you with composition, lighting and design.

If this day is inconvenient, look for upcoming dates and places for similar events with the Wildlife Center staff and animals.

Aging parents program

A five-part series on "Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" is offered on Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset beginning Oct. 5. The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations. Suggested donation is $10 for the five sessions. Checks should be made payable to the Cohasset Council on Aging. The general public is invited to attend.

Session #1 (Oct. 5) will discuss the physical aspects of aging, including an overview of the normal aging process and age-related diseases. Participants will be provided with information on making healthy choices in the prevention of illness. Presenter will be Meg Doherty, MS, RN, executive director, Norwell Visiting Nurse.

Session #2 (Oct. 12) will discuss the psycho-social aspects of aging, including changes in employment status, lifestyle, health, and social life of elders, and the need for a shift in family roles and relationships. Presenter will be Carolyn Housman, LICSW, social worker, Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations.

Session #3 (Oct. 19) will discuss legal and financial issues, including estate planning, joint ownership, durable power of attorney, conservatorship, guardianship, health care proxy and trusts. Presenter will be attorney George Hayden, law firm of Nashawaty, Hayden & Rand, Braintree.

Session #4 (Oct. 26) will deal with family members as caregivers, and will discuss teaching family members to assist elders with personal care and methods of improving safety in the home through the use of adaptive equipment. Presenter will be Patricia Clark, MS, RN, CS, Executive Director, Hingham Visiting Nurse.

Session #5 (Nov. 2) will deal with community resources available to older people and their families, including respite, daycare centers, home health services, support groups, insurance matters, housing options, and nursing home placement. Presenters will be Kathy Glenzel, regional coordinator, South Shore SHINE Program; Gretchen Condon, executive director, Hingham Housing Authority; Diane Sargent, home care director, South Shore Elder Services, Inc.; Patricia Carlton, LICSW, Social Service League of Cohasset; and staff members of area councils on aging and visiting nurse associations.

For more information, or to register for any or all sessions, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Alzheimer's on cable

Thursday, Sept. 23, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person are Alzheimer's Association representatives Ellen Kallman and Dr. Paul Raia. The upcoming Memory Walk for Alzheimer's Disease and the symptoms, new drugs and treatments of the disease will be discussed.

For more information, please call 545-2500.

The second segment guest is Norwell attorney William F. Linnehan, III, who will review the legal profession today, elder care and general legal processes.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset.

Learn about Catholicism

Crossroads, an inquiry about the Catholic faith for non-baptized or catholics who have been away and others who wish to learn more, takes place Monday, Oct. 18, 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Rectory, 147 North St., Hingham.

For further information call Fr. John Reardon, 749-0587.

Oklahoma is coming

Hingham Civic Music Theatre's Rodgers and Hammerstein classic "Oklahoma!" opens at Hingham High School Friday, Oct. 22, at 8 p.m. and continues with a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. Oct. 24. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 29 and 30, performances are at 8 p.m. The HCMT production celebrates the 50th anniversary of this landmark musical, which opened on Broadway in March of 1943 and ran for nearly six years.

Hingham High School is located at 41 Pleasant Street off Route 228. The auditorium is handicapped accessible. For further information call (617) 749-0083 or 749-9699.

"Oklahoma!" is set in Indian territory shortly after the turn of the century. The high-spirited rivalry between the farmers and the cowmen provides the background for two lovers' triangles — the romantic trio of Laurey, a pert and pretty farm girl, her handsome cowboy, Curly, and the hired hand, Jud; and the comic trio of man-mad Ado Annie, cowboy Will Parker and Ali Hakim, an itinerant peddler. The score includes such perennial favorites as "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning," "I Cain't Say No," "People Will Say We're In Love," and of course the title song, "Oklahoma!"

HCMT's production of "Oklahoma!" is being directed by Violet N. Vilanni with choreography by Joan Kenney. The music director is Sal Bartolotti.

All tickets are $10 at the door. Advance sale tickets are $8 and are available through Oct. 20. All tickets may be purchased at Hingham Public Library, Nobles Camera Shops and Olden's Pharmacy in Columbian Square, South Weymouth.

Release day slated

Today, Sept. 23, is an early release day in the Cohasset public schools. There are no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior and senior high school, buses depart at noon.

Deer Hill School, buses depart 12:25 p.m.

Joseph Osgood School, buses depart at 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior and senior high schools.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill to use this release day to learn more about the learning styles of their students. In order to accomplish this, a schedule has been established where first grade teachers will speak with kindergarten and second grade teachers. Each grade level team will have a time to share and receive information through sixth grade.

Additionally, all three schools will conduct discussions to determine a model for in-service training including topics to be addressed during this year.

A.D.D. group meets

A support group for parents of children with Attention Deficit Disorder (A.D.D.) meets from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 23, in the Scituate High School Library. A panel of educational consultants and advocates will address how they can provide support and present opportunities for parents' and childrens' educational success.

The following are on the panel: Marge Pacitti, M.Ed., Scituate; Leslie Goldberg, M.Ed., Hingham; Martha Stearns Kapell, Ms. Ed. CAS, Plymouth; Linda Greenwood, Plymouth; and Alice Williams, Hingham.

For more information or directions, please call Tanya at 545-6127.

PSO to meet, Sept. 23

The first meeting of the Cohasset PSO will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 23 at the Cohasset High School Cafeteria.

Wendy Nelson, Ed.D., licensed psychologist for children and families will be speaking on "Busy Children, Busy Families." The session will provide suggestions on balancing family schedules with children's needs.

In addition, Supt. Stephen Hart will present an update on the education reform bill.

public notice

TOWN OF COHASSET
PUBLIC HEARING

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen will hold a public hearing on Monday, October 4, 1993, at 8:00 p.m., in the Selectmen's Meeting Room, Cohasset Town Hall, with regard to setting the 1994 fiscal tax rate for real estate and personal property by classification (i.e., residential, commercial, etc.).

BOARD OF SELECTMEN
9/23/93

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 85P1910A1

Estate of MANUEL MENDES FONSECA late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that DANIEL F. AFFSA of WEYMOUTH in the County of NORFOLK be appointed public administrator of said estate with surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowanee of said petition, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on September 29, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this seventeenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Lillian F. Ketchum has joined the Cohasset office of Prudential Prime Properties as a sales associate.

A resident of Cohasset for 16 years, Ketchum has been active in the community through volunteer work with the schools, the Social Service League, and the Second Congregational Church.

Ketchum holds a masters degree in journalism from Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism and a bachelor of arts degree from Vassar College. Prior to joining Prudential Prime Properties, Ketchum was a freelance writer and editor.

Zigmunt Pozatek, DMD, oral/maxillofacial surgeon of Cohasset, was recently honored at Harvard University's 25-year Recognition Ceremony. The event, hosted by Harvard President Neil Rudenstine, recognized faculty members who have completed 25 years of service and who have made significant contributions to Harvard University's medical and dental schools. Dr. Pozatek, a member of the South Shore Hospital medical staff since 1974, is an assistant clinical professor at Harvard University.

Eldred Wheeler's 15th Anniversary Celebration

Take a piece of the past home with you. For fifteen years, we at Eldred Wheeler have built our furniture in the quaint south shore community of Hingham, Massachusetts, by using the same techniques as our colonial forefathers. We hand plane our exclusive wide boards and use only the finest brass and forged nails. All our fine carvings are done by hand. We utilize time tested joinery, such as scribed dovetails, through pegged mortise and tenons. This Autumn marks Eldred Wheeler's 15th Anniversary! Come on in to one of our Factory Stores and participate in New England's tradition of fine handcrafted furniture.

Village parking problems persist

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Parking along South Main Street in Cohasset Village is hard to get making it difficult for the elderly, a local pharmacist says.

Ralph Harrison, owner of Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, asked selectmen to limit parking to 15 minutes at the four spaces in front of his store.

"The elderly have no strength to walk from the parking lot behind the stores — that's the constant complaint I hear," Harrison said.

Last year after hearing from Harrison, selectmen lowered maximum parking time allowed in on S. Main St. from two hours to one.

But this year, saying what goes for one — goes for all, the board denied his request.

Selectmen did say a public awareness campaign needs to be launched to educate citizens that parking in the village should be primarily for errands and shopping.

Harrison explained that said users of Course leveling to change with Education Reform

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

While South Shore schools systems struggle to meet the October deadline for establishing the individual school councils required by the Education Reform Act, another deadline looms in the distance.

One little-noted provision of the act requires schools to eliminate general track programs. Schools must submit a plan to the state Department of Education outlining how they plan to eliminate those programs and what they will replace them with. The plans are due Sept. 1, 1994.

According to Dan French, administrator for instruction and curriculum services at the State Department of Education, reformers and legislators felt general track programs failed to prepare students for a successful and productive life after high school. One large study called students not in college preparatory programs "the forgotten half."

Education reformers suggested schools might offer vocational education, apprenticeships and training programs, alternative education centers or revamped college preparation programs in lieu of the general track.

Several local school systems feel sure they will have no problems complying with the new requirements.

"We haven't had a general track program at the high school for years," Hingham Superintendent Gary Baker said. Robert Bunnell, superintendent of Norwell schools echoed those comments.

"It really doesn't apply to Norwell. In fact there is no track," Bunnell said. "In Norwell we offer courses with different levels of difficulty. Students self-select their courses except where a prerequisite is required.

Scituate schools have virtually eliminated their gen-

Crossing signs make a comeback

By Mary Ford

Cohasset not only has the classiest crosswalk signs around but the most topical.

Selectmen devoted considerable discussion again Monday to the signs which have dotted area streets off and on for the better part of a year.

The board decided to leave the signs up around the clock and to ask the advisory board for about $500 in a transfer of funds to purchase replacement pins and signs.

Town meeting voters appropriated $1500 toward their purchase at last year's November special town meeting. But since the portable signs arrived they've proved to be problematic.

The two-piece signs are held together with pins which can break if the sign is stuck by a car.

Initially the signs were taken out and brought in by the highway department. But in June, Supt. Harold Litchfield notified the board that his department did not have the time due to road resurfacing and other projects. So the signs were not out for most of the summer.

Selectmen, who hoped the fire department could help, found out that firefighters are not legally allowed to deal with the signs because they are not a fire-related issue.

"We've been blocked at every corner," Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said.

The board received a petition signed by parents of kids at the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School urging that the signs return.

Paula Buick of Highland Ave. also wrote to the board

Hagerty property tour Sunday

The Hagerty committee will sponsor an Open House of the house and grounds only, from 1 to 4 p.m., Sunday, Oct., 3 at the Hagerty Property off Parker Ave. The board welcomes suggestions and input on the property from townspeople.

Annual town meeting voters gave the okay last March for the town to purchase the two-acre site from Mary Hagerty for $450,000. A resident who requests anonymity donated $50,000 toward the purchase and the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private non-profit group, has also donated $50,000.

Cohasset's week

Rock fan defaults

Cohasset police arrested Craig D. Vancura, 22, of Canyon Country, California at 4 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 25, after he allegedly tried to steal a case of steaks from the Super Stop & Shop on Rte. 3A.

Police said Vancura was in the state to see the rock group "The Grateful Dead" who are performing at Boston Garden.

Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said Vancura went in through the loading dock at the supermarket and tried to take a case of steaks. He was apprehended by Stop & Shop employees who held him until police arrived.

"Vancura defaulted on his arraignment (in court)," Jackson said.

Antique firearms found

As the result of a joint investigation by Cohasset and Scituate police, Scituate police arrested Joseph Bird, 34, Sunday (Sept. 26) and charged him with receiving stolen property valued at more than $250.

Bird was also charged with possession of a Class B substance, which was a small amount of cocaine, Scituate police said.

Two antique firearms, a pistol and musket, were reported stolen from the Red Lion Inn, Sept. 25, Cohasset Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Both firearms were recovered, Jackson said. Bird's last known address is 7 Acorn St., Scituate. Bird was arraigned on the charges Sept. 27.

Storm exercise slated

The Cohasset Fire Department plans to participate in a "Storm Exercise" with officials from Eastern Edison Company, Nov. 16, to test the various components of the "Public Safety Phase" of the utility company's storm plan. The focus will be communication of information between Cohasset's dispatcher and Eastern Edison and the response of the wire-down team to simulate wire-down situations.

Alternative date for the exercise is Nov. 18.

☆★☆☆★ A GRAND OPENING TALE ☆★☆☆★

Once upon a time, in a small coastal village, there was a neighborhood pharmacy where the townspeople knew they could find friendly faces, quality service and a good selection of coughdrops.

Then one day, a nice young couple bought this little apothecary known as Brooks Pharmacy and decided to call it Scituate Pharmacy.

"Our motto," they said, "will be 'Big enough to serve you, small enough to care.'" So, even though the pharmacy is Under New Management, customers will still find the same friendly faces, quality service and an even bigger selection of everything - including coughdrops.

The new, improved Scituate Pharmacy offers: a computerized prescription department, $$ competitive pricing, ✆fax service (such a modern idea!), one of those handy nickel self-service photocopying machines, a 💡 utility payment center and prescription delivery. They also accept most prescription plans!

"Let us celebrate!" they said. So they created these Grand Opening Specials just for you!

Cohasset Village parking problems continue the Cohasset Community Center are the worst offenders.

"They are there to exercise but they can't walk to the back parking lot," he said.

Harrison was careful to point out that his criticism was not aimed at the community center itself which he praised for its contribution to village life.

In an effort to curtail the problem, Police Officer Lisa Matos talked to classes at the center.

But Police Chief Brian W. Noonan recalled that class participants were adamant that they had the right to park on S. Main for an hour.

Harrison explained by the time someone parks, attends a class, and returns — all too often, an hour turns into two or more.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said educating the public might make a difference.

"Through public awareness, I think if people know they're in front of a retail establishment for more than 1/2 hour they'll start to think about it," he said

Harrison said the parking problem is worst between 9 and 11 a.m.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke suggested police do more "zealous ticketing" to enforce the one-hour limit.

Chief Noonan explained that police do check and write down license plate numbers when time warrants and staff is available.

Bob Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, said he would try to get businesses together including the community center and arts center to discuss the problem.

"I'm willing to try to get everyone to the table to recognize what each one needs," Martin said.

stating that she believed the signs are effective at slowing traffic down and making drivers more aware of the crosswalks.

Bob Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, had offered to adopt a sign and be responsible to take it out and put it in.

But Martin soon found out "they are awkward and dirty," he said.

Litchfield offered to install permanent reflective signs on posts or poles like the one at the library crosswalk but selectmen opted to stick with the portable signs which are more noticeable.

For aesthetic reasons, special town meeting voters last November voted for the two-piece signs as opposed to the traffic barrels like the ones in Hingham.

The consensus at the time was that the barrels are too ugly for Cohasset streets.

Hose, radio are needed

The town's new pumper needs fire hose and a radio, acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln told selectmen Monday.

Lincoln said he realized the items were missing when he reviewed the "specs" for the new pumper. The cost of the hose is about $6,700 and the radio ranges from $1,900 to $2,700, he explained. The price of the new pumper is $228,907 from the low bidder Pierce Manufacturing Inc. The pumper will be paid for through a combination of a gift and interest-free loan from an anonymous patron. Town meeting voters approved the pumper purchase last March.

Lincoln said most of the cost for the missing items can be covered in the amount appropriated for the pumper due to changes in some of the specifications like the type of tank used.

"We've deleted some expensive items," he said.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon speculated as to why the hose and radio may have been left out of the original specifications.

He said purchasing the items separately may provide pricing flexibility.

"If you keep the hose in the truck — you may pay a higher price," he said.

Selectmen approved the purchase of hose and a radio at their board meeting Monday using $7,800 in left-over funds with the balance coming from gift money available.

Speed posting wanted

Residents of Flintlocke Ridge Road want a 20 mph speed limit posted on their street.

"Our children are in danger due to the excessive speed at which a significant number of people travel," a group residents wrote in a letter to selectmen.

"Further, there is a decline in the road leading to a blind turn as cars travel from Aaron River Road onto Flintlocke Ridge Road. The neighborhood children's lives are at risk as they play and ride their bikes in that area. Unfortunately, given the habits of a number of drivers a speed limit in excess of 20 mph poses risks to the children — even with adult supervision," they said.

There are no sidewalks or traffic lights in the neighborhood.

Copies of the letter were sent to Police Chief Brian W. Noonan and Safety Officer Clifton Jones.

Name: Robert A. Leonard.

Occupation: Plumbing and gas inspector for Cohasset.

[illegible]t day of your life: When I married my wife [illegible]cie Leonard on Nov. 15, 1942.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was in kindergarten, I was chosen to sing "Away in a Manger" for the Christmas Pageant. I got two verses off and then regurgitated in front of everyone.

Goal: To be able to continue to get up every morning and go to work. I thank God every morning that I'm able to do it. (Mr. Leonard is 77-years-old.)

Favorite season: I love them all.

Best vacation: Going to the World's Fair in Montreal, Canada.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: People who think they can do it all — we all need a little help.

Favorite book: Any type of history book.

Favorite movie: "Music Man."

Biggest worry: That I'll unintentionally slight someone.

Favorite place: I love Cohasset.

Favorite junk-food: Anything at McDonald's or Burger King.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Mrs. Kennedy, who lives a few doors up the street from this home at 49 James Lane, wanted to share her lovely view with Mariner readers. She particularly likes the way the late morning sunlight catches the flag and flowers at this charming house. The porch with its white wicker table and chairs is framed by a blue Morning Glory climbing the railings. Bright orange, pink and white Impatiens line the foundation of the house. There is a very interesting Euonymus that has been trained in a tree formation. Mrs. Kennedy referred to the Impatiens as "Patient Lucy's" — a name I must admit I had never heard before — but think it is quite a lovely name for this flower we all know and love. The garage had a lovely planting of Patient Lucy's too.

drama club news

CDC activities noted

Officers and board members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 4 at the home of Lynn Eisenhauer.

CDC member, Dawn Rota will be appearing in "You Should Live So Long," presented by the Stetson Underground Theatre Group in Hingham in October. For information call 545-3195.

Sally Wright, another CDC member, is directing "Run For Your Wife" and member Julia Szulerowski is in the performance. It will be presented the last three weekends in November at the North River Community Playhouse. For information call 826-4276. Sally is also an actor with the Mystery de Jour Dinner Theatre which performs at DeMers in Dedham Saturday night.

Drama officers elected

Cohasset resident Angi Walsh will preside as president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club for the new season. Angi has been an active member and Thespian since 1987.

She acted in the female version of "The Odd Couple;" in "Belles" as the sister; Audrey, the ventriloquist and in June as the memorable Ma Doyle when C.D.C. performed on the common a scene from Irene Egan Bright's "When Johnny Comes Home."

Other officers selected are: vice-president, Joe Rota of Scituate; treasurer, Rick Garland of Marshfield; recording secretary, Lisa Pratt of Cohasset and corresponding secretary, Debbie Carleton of Scituate.

Membership committee members are: Anita Aherne of Scituate and Betty Grant of Braintree.

Board members are Stephanie Pedigo of Hull; Dwight Dibona of Scituate and Mike Nakashima and Lynn Eisenhauer of Cohasset.

CDC auditions tonight

Five men and five women are needed to cast Cohasset Dramatic Club's first performance for the 1993-1994 season, "No Sex Please, We're British." This modern-day, two act comedy will be co-directed by Angie Walsh and Bob Champagne.

Auditions will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 30 at Cohasset Town Hall. Everyone is welcome to try out for a part.

For information call Angie Walsh at 383-2151.

Library news to note

Story hour begins at 10 a.m., Oct. 7. Children must be 3-1/2 years of age. There are still some places in the Thursday session but Friday is full. Please call the library at 383-1348 to sign up.

Calling all kids! Mrs. Terry, the children's librarian, will send summer reading certificates to the elementary schools this week.

All information formerly contained in the card catalogs has been transferred to Public Access Catalog Terminals (PACT). This may surprise some people who resist anything and everything involving computers! But don't worry. There are explicit instructions next to the PACT and the staff will help those

Parking for handicapped

Library Trustees will ask Special Town Meeting voters Oct. 25 for $1,000 to cover materials to create a parking space for the handicapped by installing a sidewalk and repaving the driveway along the new walk so it is level as required by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG).

The handicapped parking space will be the spot nearest the street at the north end of the driveway near the crosswalk, library director Richard Hayes explained.

ADAAG requires a 12 ft.-wide space so there is an access path on each side of the car.

"We can use the existing driveway as an access path on driver's side and the new sidewalk on passenger's," he said.

Hayes said the new sidewalk will be an improvement for all library users as well as a handicapped accessibility improvement.

The highway department will furnish labor and necessary equipment for the project which includes removing existing asphalt, preparing the subsurface, installing two sign posts, and installing drainpipe under the sidewalk.

Fall library hours

Hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.

around town

❑ Lets start this off with a funny story, one that you can remember and learn from! Most know Carole Ciciotte, this is about her! And her cat.

Carole was doing the wash, and had put the first wash in the dryer while beginning to load the washer again. All of a sudden she heard a tremendous THUMP!! THUMP!! THUMP!! She just assumed it was one of her husband Bob's sneakers, so she opened the dryer door to remove it.

Imagine her surprise when she saw one very dazed cat looking at her cross-eyed! Poor Sally sure had a ride, a short one thank goodness! She's fine, and we'll bet she gives the dryer wide berth from now on! Cat owners, check your dryers!!

❑ Many people miss Vera James who passed away recently, and we want to extend our sympathies to her family and her friends.

❑ The Community Service Committee of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors helps the Plymouth Coalition for the Homeless by supplying them with needed articles. Each fall Hunneman & Co. request used winter coats and towels which are badly needed. Hunneman & Co. Coldwell Banker is the drop-off point for these items. They would prefer clean items, which they in turn give to the homeless. The drive runs through the end of October.

If someone is planning to move, this might be an opportune time to clean closets and at the same time provide warmth to someone in need this winter.

The Hunneman Office, 21 South Main St., is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m.

❑ Welcome James Faber, the newborn son of Leslie and Steve Faber. We are sure more information will come about this wonderful event, in the meantime congratulations and love that baby!!

❑ Anne Sexton, a resident of Cohasset, recently joined the Pre-school faculty at Beechwood Community Life Center. Ms. Sexton, an experienced pre-school educator, will teach "Fun Factory", the center's part-time pre-school for children ages three and four.

A graduate of Wheelock College, Ms. Sexton was also educated in England, Vermont and Connecticut. Her most recent teaching experience has been with Kindergarten and Pre-Kindergarten children in Weymouth and Cohasset, and we wish her well in her latest venture!

❑ The time is rapidly approaching when the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce sends their "little piece of home" packages to the 1993 CHS grads that are at college. Gum, candy, pencils, paper, envelopes, mints, etc. are still needed. If your company has a promo item, a give away, sample or even unused stock, let the Chamber know. Contributions from individuals and non profit groups are also gratefully accepted. Call the Chamber at 383-1010, ASAP!

❑ Tonight (Sept. 30) Pierson to Person is having a great show that will teach about life insurance. Anthony Todd, nationally recognized expert on life insurance from Chicago, will answer all of Wig's questions, so tune in. And, the following week should be a great one too. The show will celebrate its 6th anniversary with former "Voice of the Red Sox", Ken Coleman. Such a knowledgeable man, should be great!

❑ Hope everyone saw the picture of Bob Martin on the front page of last week's Mariner sporting the sweater that Jean Salvador knit, it is wonderful! Raffle tickets for it will be on sale through Nov. 13, chances are $1 or $5 for 6. Proceeds benefit the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, and the winner will benefit most of all!! Call Jean for more information.

❑ Hats off to Joyce Hoffman, sales leader for the month and broker of the month for Hunneman & Co. Joyce is a recipient of the Hunneman/Coldwell Banker Bronze Circle Award. They attribute her success to a thorough knowledge of the market, excellent service and consistent follow-up.

❑ Don't forget that the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library are still searching for a photo of Paul Pratt. If anyone has a photo that they can loan the library call Patty Lambert at 383-1348.

❑ Finally don't forget that the PSO is selling Sally Foster's collection of all-occasion and holiday gift wrap and accessories. They come in economy-size rolls and are made out of recycled paper. Brochures and order forms can be obtained at the schools.

For more information call Jan Weisenfeld at 383-0466.

❑ That's the news for this week, hope to hear from you with your newsworthy tidbits!

Consideration

It's time for a little education in consideration for our fellow citizens.

What happens to us when we're in our cars? Do our vehicles give us a degree of anonymity that radically diminishes our tolerance for fellow drivers and pedestrians?

Cohasset Village is one of the most picturesque around. It's no coincidence that Hollywood producers have discovered it as the perfect New England setting..

But its beauty is only skin deep — if we don't show consideration for fellow citizens and respect for the law.

Several issues regarding traffic and parking in the village persist.

One that came up at Monday night's selectmen's meeting is vehicles that park on South Main Street for well beyond the hour permitted. As a result, elderly citizens seeking to refill prescriptions at the pharmacy can't find a space — and some don't have the strength to walk from the town parking lot.

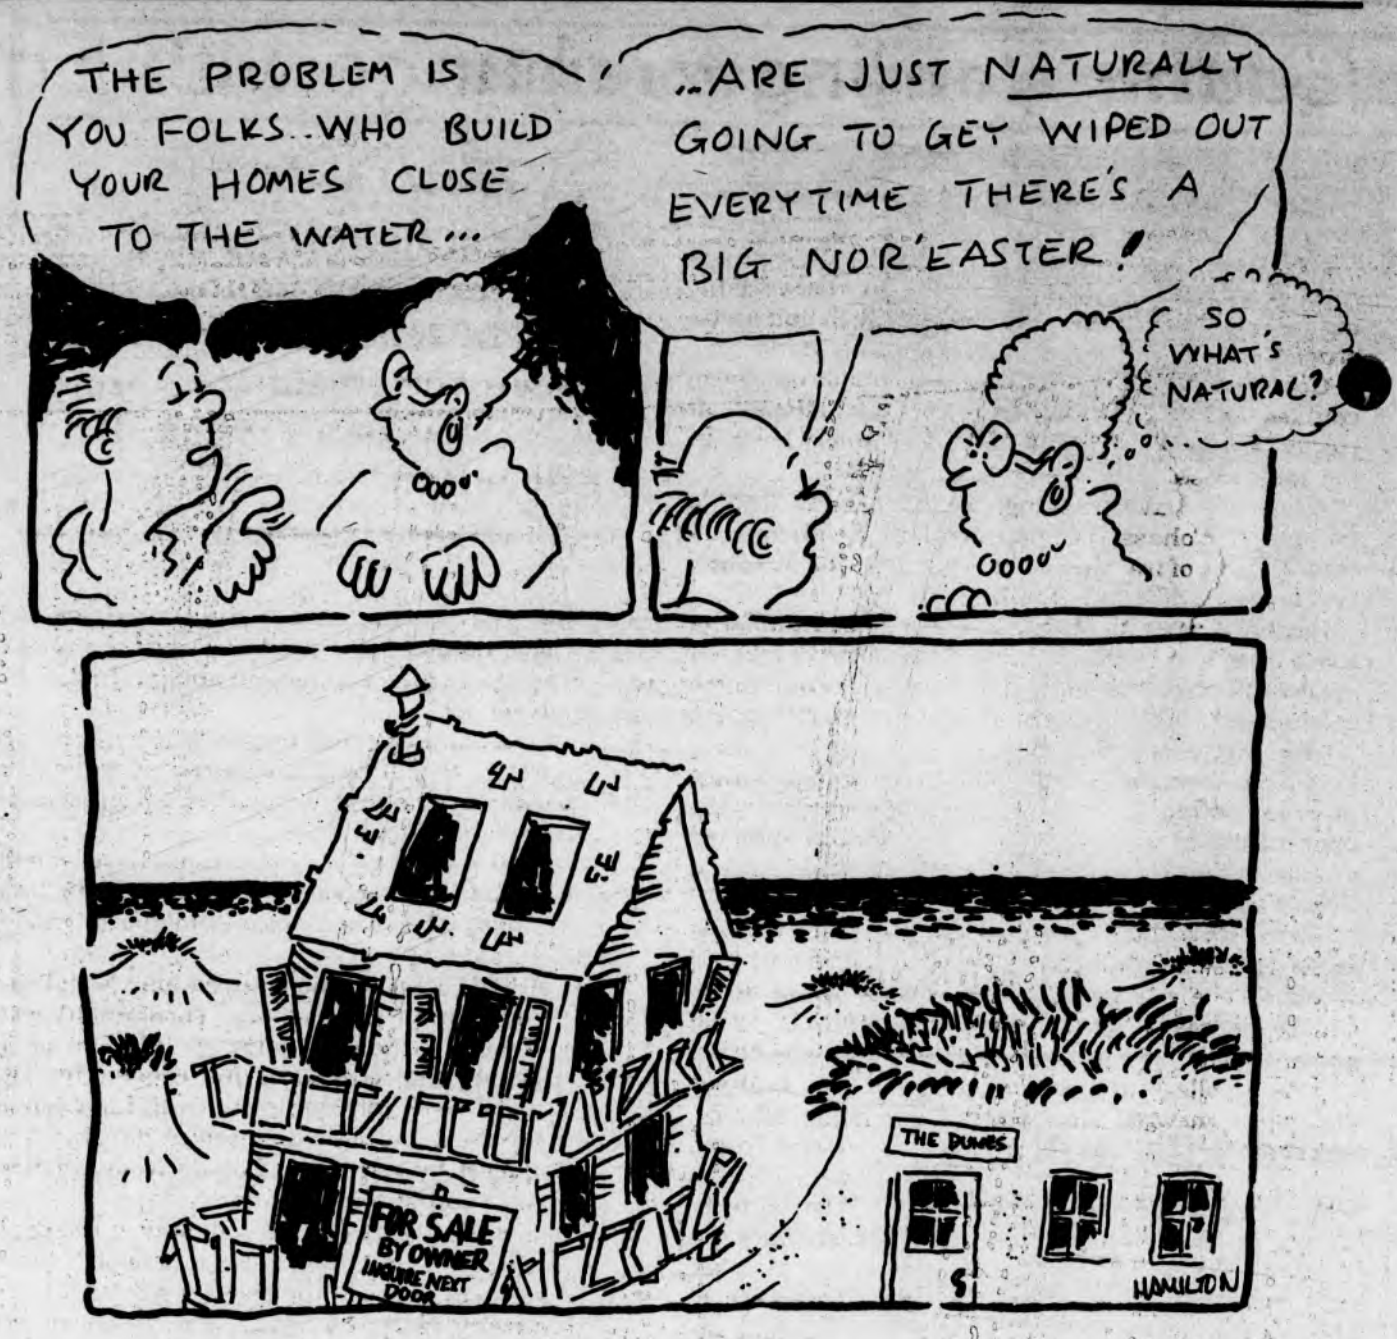
It's time for those of us who have more to do than shopping and errands to take the time to park behind the stores.

And some of us are so worried that the space we seek will be snapped up if we drive around the block that we continue to make illegal left-hand turns into village parking spots. Police Chief Brian W. Noonan says these illegal turns are dangerous and can cause accidents especially to an unsuspecting motorist who is legally backing out of an angled spot.

Finally — the ongoing crosswalk debate. Selectman Chairman Martha Gjesteby recounted a recent incident when she was partway through a village crosswalk and a car screeched to a halt leaving rubber on the street.

How many of us have had similar experiences? For our own protection, we must always cross defensively. But motorists should stop — it's the law.

Our police force doesn't have the manpower to be continually on watch in the Village. So it's up to us to spread the word and demand that our fellow citizens follow the rules of the road and Village streets.



Two good causes

There are two good volunteer efforts going on on Government Island. One is construction of the Minot Light's replica and the other is the renovation of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's residence.

Both projects need money.

Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation (CLC) — the group spearheading the renovation of the lightkeeper's residence — has experienced cost escalations which may indefinitely delay adding a commercial kitchen to the community room as well as some exterior site work.

And the Cohasset Historical Commission needs more money to complete the replica and establish an endowment to pay for future repairs.

Tax deductible contributions may be sent to the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corp. (for the residence), PO Box 514, Cohasset 02025; and to Captain's Walk (for the replica), c/o Noel Ripley, 179 S. Main St., Cohasset.

Both projects are truly worthy of any financial support we can afford.

Chamber of Commerce plans for fall

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 12 at the Chart House restaurant for its annual "School Meeting." The theme will be "communication" with representatives from the PSO, Arts Boosters, Soccer Boosters, Cohasset Educational Foundation as well as two students on the panel.

"Little Pieces of Home" packages will be put together to be mailed to our June graduates in October. Students away at private school can receive these packages as well, just notify the chamber at 383-1010.

The chamber community auction will be held on Saturday, Nov. 13 at the community center. The proceeds will be shared with the Lightkeepers Corporation and Cohasset Youth Resources. Herb Towle has donated a 12" handmade Swampscott Dory to be auctioned. Sealed bids may be submitted for this or any item.

For more information, please call the Chamber at 383-1010.

political notes

Murray picked for panel

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) has been appointed by Speaker Charles Flaherty and Republican Leader Peter Forman as a member of a Joint Conference Committee.

Representative Murray, senior member of the Committee on Local Affairs, was appointed to the conference committee to help iron out the discrepancies between the House and Senate legislation relating to various local violations and state poaching violations.

"The need for this year's corrective legislation was due to the fact an outside section of the FY 1993 budget placed local violation fees and fines in the hands of the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

"Nonpayment would have resulted in the loss of an individual's driving license. These fees and fines should be left to the local committees," Rep. Murray said.

Originally the Committee on Local Affairs recommended legislation that would repeal the 1993 state law relating to the processing of local violations by town clerks.

According to Rep. Murray, "Our town clerks are facing a very ambiguous and confusing situation under the current law. Our priority is to correct this situation and to bring back the prior law in order that towns will clearly know how to process these local violations."

Murray noted, "If poaching violations need to be increased or if stronger enforcement powers are needed, we should address these issues separately. Attacking these substantive changes appears to be somewhat beyond the scope of our original intent."

McDonald supports choice

State Sen. Brian J. McDonald has endorsed legislation calling for "Freedom of Choice" with regard to pharmacy services. H.1109, will enable consumers to buy prescriptions at the pharmacy of their choice.

"The people in my district have expressed a preference for freedom of choice as it pertains to choosing a pharmacy," said McDonald.

The Joint Committee on Insurance reported favorably on H.1109. The bill is now before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Course leveling to change with Education Reform

eral track program, according to Scituate High School Principal Prudence Goodale.

"We have phased out the general track courses through inclusion models," Goodale said. "The remaining general track courses left are in English and social studies only and only for ninth and tenth grade."

Goodale said the school intends to phase out those courses as well. Additionally, she said, almost all elective courses enroll students of all ability levels in the same class.

"We don't have tracking, we have more flexible grouping," Cohasset Superintendent Stephen Hart said. "I think of tracking as kids going in one direction and they couldn't veer from that."

Hart said his schools have reduced the number of levels from four to three and increased the number of courses in business, industrial technology and home economics to better serve students who do not want to pursue higher education.

Cohasset also provides an alternative high school program within the school and offers students the opportunity of pursuing more vocationally directed studies at South Shore Vocational Technical Regional School and the Norfolk County agricultural school.

Yet in these relatively affluent communities, the vast majority of students opt to go on to two and four year colleges. The percentages of students going on to college ranges from 83 percent in Scituate to 94 percent in Norwell and Cohasset. Students who do not choose a college preparatory program may find the pickings somewhat slim within their home schools. The combination of declining enrollments and Proposition 2-1/2 driven cutbacks in education have forced administrators to reduce offerings in industrial technology, business education and home economics.

"We're not as comprehensive anymore," Goodale said. "In 1986 we had three full time teachers in industrial technology. Now we have one teaching architectural design in addition to science. We have no wood lab, no metal shop."

Still administrators in the four towns feel the vocational programs and alternative education centers they have and the existence of the regional vo-tech school offer non-college-bound students the opportunity to prepare for a meaningful and productive life after high school.

'A 1985 study showed 90 percent stay at the same course level throughout their tenure in school. Movement between the levels is minimal.'
— Dan French, Dept. of Education.

While local administrators may feel their schools are sitting pretty, the state Department of Education administrator in charge of instruction and curriculum services isn't convinced.

"Most high schools will say they don't have general track programs," French said. "They say they have different ability level courses for students to choose from."

In most high schools, the courses may be labeled "basic," "college prep" and "honors." Those ability-level courses, French suggested, form an informal or de facto tracking that begins at the elementary and middle school level and continues until high school graduation. Students find themselves directed to a particular level by recommendations from teachers and guidance counselors, he said.

"A 1985 study showed 90 percent stay at the same course level throughout their tenure in school," French said. "Movement between the levels is minimal."

In too many instances, students classified and enrolled in "average" or "low ability" classes are not provided with challenging and enriching opportunities. Teachers and administrators set lower goals for them and then the students fulfill those expectations.

"One result is by high school their knowledge is very significantly reduced, often by several grade levels," French said. "Rigid ability grouping is one primary reason why the United States lags behind other industrial nations in math and science."

French said educational research is full of studies showing that students of all ability levels, even high achieving students, thrive when placed in heterogeneous classes as long as teachers are provided with ample professional development to manage those classrooms.

"We are looking for more innovative, exciting curriculums and instructional techniques," French said. "The ultimate goal is high quality, challenging opportunities for all students."

Getting there from here won't be accomplished overnight. French and his colleagues at the state Department of Education look forward to working closely with local school systems. Training programs for teachers and assessment tests that support creative instructional practices are essential components if the elimination of general track programs is to be successful.

"We see it as a partnership," he said.

Hart said he hopes it works out that way. In the meantime, he isn't sure just what the state expects.

"They really have not well defined what they are looking for," Hart said. He hopes more clarification and direction will be forthcoming.

The administrators also complain they are being asked to make a great many changes in a very short period of time. Many provisions, they say, seem particularly designed with large, urban school systems in mind.

"This reform bill is a great example of the political process," Bunnell said. "It started with the concept "Every child a winner," . . . then they had to get all the factions on board."

In spite of the problems of tight deadlines and lack of clarity, the administrators still felt positive.

"The important thing is it is an attempt to improve things," Hart said. "It shows a real concern for education and students."

Plymouth and Brockton to complement train

If the train comes to Greenbush, it won't put an end to the Plymouth and Brockton (P&B) commuter bus. In fact, it may grow its business.

"We don't want to be put out of business because there are more trains needed. The pie got larger and everybody would thrive under it," said John Greene of the Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway Co.

For many South Shore residents, the P&B is the only public commuter transportation to Boston. But the region hasn't been profitable to the company, Greene said.

"We have stayed here actually in hopes that this transportation development will happen. If we could inspire you to keep us at the top of your list, we'd appreciate it."

P&B would be interested in developing complementary service to the train with service to stations and in providing substitute service for crowded trains, late-night service and return service during rush hours.

With "intelligent fare systems" P&B could provide links to the MBTA and the commuter boat for one fare. But this would require state cooperation.

"The service we operate right now is not subsidized," Greene explained.

The Greenbush commuter rail would impact 40 percent of P&B's business, Greene said. If the state funds the Greenbush project, the MBTA would have to pay a certain amount to P&B in compensation for the deferred business in compliance with state law, Greene said.

"We'd take the damage and buy more transportation," he said. "We'd carve a new niche in the marketplace."

Just as the MBTA's citizens' advisory committee reviewed augmented ferry service at its last meeting, Greene talked about expanding bus service as a train alternative.

"We're not tied to the shoreline or limited to steel rails," he said. The Massachusetts Highway Department is negotiating with P&B for more high occupancy vehicle (HOV) lanes on highways to Boston, which would make a speedier trip for the commuter bus.

Cohasset's week

Rail information offered

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority plans to conduct informational sessions in October to provide citizens of Greenbush Line communities the chance to learn about and comment on the Greenbush Line studies.

The MBTA is currently conducting the environmental and transportation studies required for bringing transportation improvements to the area. The studies involve examination of six transportation alternatives — including surface rail — and the evaluation of a complete range of environmental, social, economic, and transportation impacts.

The Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement/Report which will report the results of these studies is now being prepared and is scheduled for public circulation after review and comment from the Citizens Advisory Committee — of which Cohasset has three members — in early 1994.

Project mangers, engineers, and specialists will attend these informal sessions — which will be widely publicized — to answer questions from citizens in communities in the Greenbush corridor. Project mapping, plans, and explanatory graphics will be displayed to facilitate discussion.

Medicare refunds sought

Selectmen have added a clause to the town's Basic Life Support (BLS) reimbursement contract with South Shore Hospital to include fees charged for defibrillation.

Acting Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said currently the town is not receiving the $60 reimbursement for use of the defibrillator from Medicare patients.

He explained the Medicare patient's bill is sent to SSH and the hospital bills Medicare. Medicare pays 80 percent of the $75 charge.

"South Shore Hospital is not sending us the money," Lincoln said.

Lincoln said in the current contract with the hospital, the standard BLS reimbursement of $269.68 per patient does not include any charges for defibrillation.

Cohasset and SSH have an agreement where the town provides pre-hospital BLS emergency care and the hospital provides pre-hospital Advanced Life Support (ALS) service. The contract states the hospital is entitled to Medicare and third party payors for reimbursement for ALS services and the town for BLS services.

Selectmen approved the transfer of an All Alcoholic Beverage License from Liquors Unltd., Inc., (Robert Anton, president), to Heldan, Inc., (Patrick J. Connelly, president) doing business as Liquors Unlimited, 27 S. Main St.

Connelly, 37 S. Main St., has been manager of Liquors Unltd. for the past four years and is purchasing the business from Anton, 85 Jerusalem Rd., for $185,000.

McGuire is appointed

Jacquelyn McGuire, 3 Reservoir Rd., is a member of the personnel board. Town Moderator George Marlette appointed McGuire to a one-year term effective Sept. 19. She will replace Barbara Moore who recently stepped down from the board.

Advisors have organized

The officers of the advisory committee are Nan Roth, chairman; Roger Whitely, vice chairman; and Richard Flynn, secretary.

Common used okay'ed

Selectmen gave The Community Center of Cohasset permission Monday to use the south side of the Town Common from noon to 4 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 31 for the annual Halloween Fair conducted by the nursery school at the Center.

Jackson will pinch hit

Sgt. Robert W. Jackson will serve as acting Chief of Police from Oct. 15 through Oct. 22 while Police Chief Robert W. Noonan is on vacation. Selectmen approved the appointment of Jackson to the temporary post during their board meeting Monday.

To the 'Wee Manor' born

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

When renovated the 100-year-old Victorian will fit right into the Cohasset dream-house scene.

Not only is the home unique — like so many in this town — but it will soon be equipped down to the last minute detail.

It's every girl's dream: a doll house fit for a princess to play with.

A Cohasset family, who asked not to be named for this article, recently discovered the house — which was in pieces — at an antique shop in Vermont. They brought it home and asked Linda Pattison of Linda's "Wee Manor" on Rte. 3A to work some magic.

And that's just what Pattison — who's been in love with miniatures and doll houses since her childhood — is doing.

Sections of the house were attached by hinges and the exterior and interior walls were covered with lead-based paint, the shop owner said.

Pattison lovingly removed the hinges, stripped the paint, and was able to straighten the 1/2 in. pine exterior walls — which had become warped over time — by covering them with wet newspaper and clamping them flat.

"Each day I'd tighten the clamps," she recalled.

The house is sturdily built and nearly all the glass is intact, including mauve, stained-glass panels for the Captain's Watch.

Pattison's next step will be to install the floor and room petitions.

She'll create four rooms (two up and two down), add cedar shingles to the roof, and then electrify the home.

The owners — who include two little girls — live in a Victorian home in town and will paint the doll house themselves.

Pattison explains that miniature furniture and accessories that are one inch-to-the-foot scale (as opposed to 1/2 in.) will fit perfectly inside.

The family won't have to go far to find furnishings.

Pattison sells just about everything any home could need including tiny Victorian-style plumbing fixtures, fire place screens, pictures for the walls, furniture for every room, and even miniature board games like Monopoly.

"Anything you can get for a real house — you can get for a doll house," explains Pattison.

Her three-year-old shop — which moved from Scituate Harbor in August to its Rte. 3A location across from Tedeschi Plaza — has everything for the seasoned or novice collector.

Architectural plans for building your own doll house from scratch are available as well as kits that can be assembled.

Pattison also offers classes in doll-house decorating and construction.

For the Scituate resident, the tiny world of dream homes has been a hobby since her childhood.

"I used to think it was just me," Pattison recalled. "But after opening my shop, I realized the interest in miniatures is greater than I ever thought."

The attraction is simple — it's fun to create a dream home "that you'd love to shrink into," she says.

For more information, please call Pattison at 383-6635 or stop by the shop which is open from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday-through-Saturday and from noon to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Kathy Donahue has been recognized as the top sales achiever for the first six months of 1993 by Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate.

Bob Mullin, owner/principal of Dwyer and Mullin of Cohasset, honored Kathy with the company's Golden Award Club.

Ms. Donahue has been a sales consultant in real estate for nine years. She has consistently been a top producer and recipient of many awards over these years.

The Advertising Club of Greater Boston announced the promotion of Anne D. Bear to associate director. As the associate director, Ms. Bear will oversee all program and event planning, including the Annual Hatch Awards and the Annual Ad Club Auction, as well as membership services for the club, general office management and responsibilities of the executive director in her absence.

Most recently, Bear was the associate director for programs and events for the club for a year and a half, when she led the club to an annual auction which raised a record $480,000 and worked with Board President Elect Joe Grimaldi of Mullen to produce events with speakers including Lester Thurow of MIT Sloan School of Management, Rosabeth Moss Kanter from Harvard Business School, Frances Lear of LEAR's Magazine and most recently the presentation of Governor Weld's fall agenda for the state of Massachusetts. Upcoming events include a breakfast on new media and the annual marketing day with Professor Theodore Levitt of Harvard Business School.

Earlier, Ms. Bear spent five years at the World Trade Center Boston as marketing manager for the complex where she worked on events including DECWORLD and the World of Dinosaurs and increased wedding business by 80 percent over the five years. Ms. Bear graduated from Cohasset High School and received a B.A. in Communication from the University of New Hampshire .

Flu clinics to be held

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the board of health will conduct the annual flu clinics from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 and Oct. 30 at the town hall. The flu shot is free to all Cohasset residents. For more information call the league office between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Flu is very contagious. Most people who catch it get well without any problem, but flu sometimes leads to pneumonia, which can be fatal. Immunization is very important for people at high risk for pneumonia and other problems caused by flu. Anyone 65 or older, those with chronic medical problems (heart disease, asthma, kidney disease, diabetes, lung disease, anemia) and people whose immune systems have been weakened by disease such as cancer or AIDS are considered high risk. Those who are not high risk but want to avoid the flu may also get the shot. A new flu shot is needed every year. The vaccine cannot give you the flu.

Pneumococcal vaccine will also be available at this time for those 65 and older or others considered high risk. As there is a limited supply of pneumococcal vaccine, it will be administered on a first-come, first-serve basis. There is no charge for either vaccine for Cohasset residents.

Many think of pneumococcal vaccine as a "pneumonia shot," but it also prevents infections of the blood and of the thin membrane that covers the brain and spinal cord (meningitis). People 65 or older and anyone with chronic illness should get this vaccine. Most need only one dose which can safely be given at the same time as the flu vaccine. People at high risk for serious problems caused by infection should get a booster every three to six years.

Aging parents series

A five-part series on "Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" is offered on Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset beginning Oct. 5. The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations. Suggested donation is $10 for the five sessions. Checks should be made payable to the Cohasset Council on Aging. The general public is invited to attend.

Session #1 (Oct. 5) will discuss the physical aspects of aging, including an overview of the normal aging process and age-related diseases. Participants will be provided with information on making healthy choices in the prevention of illness. Presenter will be Meg Doherty, MS, RN, executive director, Norwell Visiting Nurse.

Session #2 (Oct. 12) will discuss the psycho-social aspects of aging, including changes in employment status, lifestyle, health, and social life of elders, and the need for a shift in family roles and relationships. Presenter will be Carolyn Housman, LICSW, social worker, Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations.

Session #3 (Oct. 19) will discuss legal and financial issues, including estate planning, joint ownership, durable power of attorney, conservatorship, guardianship, health care proxy and trusts. Presenter will be attorney George Hayden, law firm of Nashawaty, Hayden & Rand, Braintree.

Session #4 (Oct. 26) will deal with family members as caregivers, and will discuss teaching family members to assist elders with personal care and methods of improving safety in the home through the use of adaptive equipment. Presenter will be Patricia Clark, MS, RN, CS, Executive Director, Hingham Visiting Nurse.

Session #5 (Nov. 2) will deal with community resources available to older people and their families, including respite, daycare centers, home health services, support groups, insurance matters, housing options, and nursing home placement. Presenters will be Kathy Glenzel, regional coordinator, South Shore SHINE Program; Gretchen Condon, executive director, Hingham Housing Authority; Diane Sargent, home care director, South Shore Elder Services, Inc.; Patricia Carlton, LICSW, Social Service League of Cohasset; and staff members of area councils on aging and visiting nurse associations.

For more information, or to register for any or all sessions, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Nylander to speak

Jane Nylander, Director of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, will speak on "Our Own Snug Fireside, Everyday Life in New England 1760 - 1860" at 1 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 14 at the South Shore Art Center.

The lecture is presented by the Cohasset Historical Society's Costume Committee. Refreshments will be served.

Jane Nylander, formerly Senior Curator at Old Sturbridge Village and Director of Strawberry Banks Museum, has written a book, "Our Own Snug Fireside: Images of the New England Home 1760 - 1860," which will be available at the lecture.

Reservations for the lecture and tea are $20 and may be made by sending a check to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset, Mass. 02025. For information call 383-1434.

Dog training offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department now accepts telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes are Wednesdays at Cohasset Town Hall and start Oct. 6. To register, please call 383-6791. Beginner classes are from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. and intermediate/advanced classes are from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee for the eight-week program is $44.

Saturday, Oct. 2, the Wildlife Center sponsors a Wildlife Photography Day. Come and have your picture taken with "Clack" the barred owl, "Bob" the porcupine, "B.J." the red-tailed hawk, or "Monty" the 13' long, 75-pound python.

Pictures make wonderful Christmas and holiday gifts. Have this year's Christmas card show your family with a wildlife member. The event will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine. Admission is $5 per person and this includes one free picture by a professional photographer with the animal of your choice. Other photo package options will be available. Bring your own camera. There will be photographers on site to help you with composition, lighting and design.

If this day is inconvenient, look for upcoming dates and places for similar events with the Wildlife Center staff and animals.

Day trip planned

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset plans an exciting day trip to beautiful historic Nantucket Island, Wednesday, Oct. 6.

Meeting time is 7 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. The bus will take participants to Hyannis to catch the "Eagle," which leaves at 9:15 a.m., arriving at 11:30 a.m.

A full luncheon is planned at the Jared Cofin House. Following lunch, Barrett's Tours will provide a 1 1/2 hour historic tour of the island. Cost is $54 total. Visitors welcome. For information and reservations call Linda, 383-0482, or Leanne, 383-9071. Limited seating.

Cohasset swamped by Clippers

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

By the time Cohasset's Chad Whitman had recovered a Norwell fumble with 1:32 left in the fourth quarter, the game had long since been decided.

The undefeated (2-0) Clippers saw to that very early.

After thoroughly trouncing West Bridgewater a week ago, the Skippers' were stymied by Norwell's offensive and defensive lines as they dropped to 1-1 with a 26-0 thrashing in their home opener.

Norwell head coach Jim Sullivan was aware of Cohasset's edge in size and admitted he was concerned with the Skippers.

"Even though our offensive line was outsized," Sullivan said, "I thought we were able to drive them off the line.

"We were very worried about this team. The only thing we knew was that they beat West Bridgewater. We didn't know what kid of team we were facing."

The Clippers' offensive line got the better of Cohasset's massive defense as quarterback Peter Hajjar completed 6-of-8 passes for 128 yards and fullback Joe Krainin rushed for 101 yards on just 13 carries for three touchdowns. Krainin also scored three times in Norwell's opening game 33-6 win over Dover-Sherborn.

With Cohasset focused on Krainin, Vinnie Alabiso was able to have a big game.

"He was the difference in the first half," Sullivan said. "You always have to made adjustments to each team. They obviously were trying to stop Krainin. That's why Alabiso was able to run so well."

Norwell wasted no time in taking the only lead it would need as Krainin burst through from the 3 at 6:04 of the first quarter. Kevin Banks' extra-point attempt was no good.

Thanks to the stiff defense of Banks (eight tackles), Alabiso (15 solo tackles) and Frank Giglio (eight tackles), Cohasset was forced to punt on its next three possessions. The Skippers' longest play from scrimmage was a three-yard run by fullback Chris Rolandelli.

Starting at the Cohasset 31, the Clippers scored on three quick plays. A two-yard run and then a five-yarder by Krainin set up a 23-yard run down the right sideline by Alabiso at 7:32 of the second. Banks missed his second extra point but it hardly mattered as it became painfully obvious Norwell controlled the flow of the game on either side of the ball.

The Clippers caught a break on Cohasset's next possession as they recovered a fumble at the Skippers' 32. Krainin played the option to perfection on the next snap and broke through for a first down at the 16. Norwell worked its way toward a first down and it was Krainin at 6:36 who rushed up the middle and dove over for a six-yard score. Banks was perfect on the extra point and Norwell was up, 19-0.

Again, Cohasset started out well on its next possession, but ultimately had to punt. A double reverse was good for 17 yards when Thomas Allen rumbled to midfield before being brought down. But an incomplete pass, thanks to a hard hit by Banks, a loss of 2 on the next play and another incomplete passed ruined Allen's big gain.

Norwell drove 86 yards on six plays for its next — and final — score. Alabiso had short gains of four yards sandwiched around a big, 20-yard gain by Krainin on a sweep. Hajjar connected with end Steve Mohan for a 28-yard pass and a first down. Krainin scored touchdown No. 3 on a 13-yard run along the left side with exactly 2:00 remaining in the first half. Banks appeared more relaxed on the extra-point attempt and drilled his second in a row to finish Norwell's scoring — and ruin Cohasset's sunny day at home at the same time. All before the second half.

"We were able to put it together in the first half and cruise through the second," Sullivan said.

In the time of Achilles, a blood-covered sword at the end of a battle was the sign of a warrior.

Well, for those who consider a football game parallel to a military battle, the sign of a football warrior is a helmet covered with scrapes and nicks and a uniform turned brown from the field.

After banging heads and bodies for four quarters, you can tell which players played the hardest by how messy their uniforms and helmets look.

However, those nicks and stains carry a heavy price.

Broken bones, separated shoulders and concussions are common to football.

Already this high school season, Hingham High captain and standout two-way player Chip Brackley is lost for the season after suffering a broken leg in the opening game against Scituate.

Brackley's injury occurred on a harmless looking pass play. On the play, Brackley caught a pass from quarterback Geoff Dillard near the Scituate goal line and was tackled by a Scituate defender as he strained to reach the end zone.

After the tackle he did not get up. He was taken for X-rays on his leg while still wearing his football uniform.

Football is the most hard-hitting and dangerous sport to play.

Sure hockey with its razor sharp skate blades and high sticks is very dangerous. (I'll never forget hearing about a Hanover Youth hockey player whose jugular vein was cut by an errant skate blade at a game a few years ago at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. Luckily, a nurse was in attendance and managed to control the bleeding until emergency medical personnel could arrive.)

And there is probably nothing more dangerous in sport than a pitched baseball hitting a player in the head. (Early in this century, shortstop Ben Chapman was killed by a pitched ball during a Major League game.)

But on the whole, football has to be the most consistently dangerous sport for its players for several reasons.

First of all there are 22 players on the field on every play whose purpose is to hurt someone. (Hockey checks are one-on-one and fighting while standing on skates is quite difficult.) Have you ever watched a running back get gang-tackled by five 290-pound defensive linemen? Ouch.

Second, the helmets football players wear are made of fiberglass and can go right through a wall. In the olden days, helmets were made of leather.

And lastly the physics involved in the game has surpassed the biology. The players are bigger, faster and stronger than ever and as Newton said, force equals mass times velocity. (Do the names Daryl Stingley, Mike Utley or Joe Theisman ring any bells?) The human knees, rib cage and spine were not made to absorb the punishment that a 250-pound, 6'3" linebacker who runs a 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds and wears a fiberglass helmet can deliver.

It is time for reforms in the game. The use of the helmet as a weapon in tackling has to be outlawed. The NFL recently took steps by fining a player $30,000 who speared another while tackling.

More reforms are needed such as the Field hockey team still looking

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They're off to an impressive 2-1-2 start and showing signs of improving even further. The team has a mix of young and veteran players alike who, so far, have all contributed to the squad's early success this fall in the South Shore League.

But there is something missing from the overall well-being of the Cohasset field hockey squad. And head coach Debby Bostwick has her finger on the missing link.

"They need to be excited for each other when the others do good things," said Bostwick, pointing to an underlying concern that could only be picked out by someone who deals with the Skippers on a day-to-day basis.

"They're enthusiastic," Bostwick continued, "but they have to put a little more thrill into themselves and get more fired up."

It's not that the field hockey team resembles a group of indifferent individuals on the playing field, with their minds a million miles away from the task they have from now until the end of October. Namely, try to beat the rest of the SSL into submission.

After squeezing past Marshfield 1-0 in a tight contest, the Skippers unleashed a scoring barrage against Notre Dame Academy. Knocking home goals for Cohasset were Jemilah Afshar, Katie Doris, Katie Ridge, Liz Deveney and Cilla Goff. Afshar and Doris also added an assist in the rout.

Bostwick is pleased the scoring is coming from more than a single player, unlike some other teams Cohasset has played.

"It's a team effort," she said. "In Hull (who defeated Cohasset, 5-0) they just had Michelle Frazier and maybe one other girl. I'd like our whole team to put

The Cohasset boys' soccer team faced off against a strong Division 2 Sandwich team. Rain and lightning forced the regularly scheduled contest to the following day. After a tough practice the boys were physically prepared for the contest and came out strong. The first 10 minutes of the game were controlled by a well-disciplined Cohasset team, which played a strong passing game. However, a quick turn around by Sandwich with a well placed chip-shot over Chris Goodman's outstretched hand placed Cohasset down by one. The contest favored Sandwich until 32 minutes into the first half when Eric Henry fed Jamey Kondrat, who stroked a cross off a Sandwich defender

Junior varsity cheerleaders dress for the occasion

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

As three of Cohasset's JV cheerleaders walked back to the junior/senior high school after the Skippers dropped their home opener against Norwell, they didn't seem the least bit disappointed. Why should they? The squad, new this fall, looked like full-fledged, legitimate cheerleaders.

"Those girls were walking around as proud as peacocks," said head coach Karen van der Werf. "They've worked so hard."

The fall club — they can't be considered a team yet because a JV football squad is still in question this season — is actually an offshoot of the winter team which started out with six girls dressed in uniforms worn by cheerleaders 15 years ago.

The girls decided enough was enough and decided to raise money for spanking brand new uniforms. A lobster raffle, garage sale and a number of sponsors around town helped cover the cost of the 12, $106 uniforms.

"That's why the girls this year are so proud," van der Werf said of the work needed to raise funds.

Because there is no JV team yet, the girls have attended the two varsity games and observed the older and more experienced varsity squad go through its paces. They will, however, perform at both the Homecoming and Thanksgiving Day games. The club isn't practicing two days a week for two hours at a time for nothing.

Cohasset's JV cheerleading squad for the fall season are in high spirits as they show off their new uniforms for the first time in Saturday's game against Norwell. The club includes (Top Row) Amy Parisi, Renese Wright and Alex Creighten. (Middle Row) Tammy Scarpaci, Jane Flaherty, Jenny Figueredo and Sarah Nohe. (Bottom Row) Charlotte van der Werf and Trisha Peterson. Not pictured are Maren Cameron, KyraLea Cogill and Renee Fagót.

van der Worf believes the observations at the games will prove to be invaluable in the long run, not to mention the JV program itself.

"This will help the varsity level because some of the girls will come up with two years experience (on JV)," she explained. "The varsity team is really in favor of it. They learn the basics for one or two years then they're ready for the stunts."

"It gives us the experience," said co-captain Jenny Figueredo, agreeing with van der Werf.

Not only do the younger cheerleaders learn from their home-school squad, but they also have the luxury of sneaking a peek at what other schools around the South Shore League have.

"We have the opportunity to see other cheerleaders and what they're like," added Trisha Peterson.

"We feel like we're more of a team now," said co-captain Tammy Scarpaci.

Figueredo then added assertively: "We don't want to be stereotyped as dumb cheerleaders any more. None of us are dumb. We wouldn't be cheerleaders if we were dumb."

into the goal to even up the score, 1-1.

The second half saw both teams playing conservative soccer. The difference came at 28 minutes into the period, when Chris Kondrat carried deep to the goal line and with the Sandwich keeper at his feet, pushed a pass to freshmen Kevin McKenna, who softly placed the ball in the goal. Sandwich would not be denied and came at Cohasset with everything they could muster. However, Jim Magner, playing at sweeper, and Goodman, demonstrating some incomparable saves, held off Sandwich for the last 12 minutes. Thanks to the defensive efforts of these two players, and exceptional play by Tim Brister, Cohasset walked away with a well-deserved win against a bigger well-disciplined Sandwich team.

Cohasset played away again at Abington, the team who knocked the Skippers out of last year's state tournament. With heads shaved, Abington came at coach Keith Clark's team with everything they could put forth. Many scoring chances by Abington tested Brian Duffy, Dave Nothnagle, Tom Greco and Brett MacQuarrie. But with the help of sophomore keeper Chris McKenna, who turned back numerous scoring attempts, the defense prevailed. On a beautiful corner kick by Ben Redfield, Magner placed a perfect header into the upper-right corner. The half ended with Cohasset up by one.

Abington came out and played a physical second half which took Cohasset out of its game. However, a number of fouls against Abington for over-aggressive play led to a well-placed direct kick by Chris Kondrat which slipped by the Abington keeper. Abington turned the contest into a game when the Green Wave scored with 20 minutes left in the second half. Clark called on Magner to help close the door when he placed him at sweeper late in the game. Cohasset prevailed 2-1.

This game marked the first appearance on the field by Sondre Haviand, Cohasset's foreign exchange student from Norway. Welcome aboard, Sondre!

COHASSET WINS ITS LEAGUE-OPENER OVER NORTON 3-1

The players realized the importance of following the game plan and the consequences if they did not. Controlling the ball and keeping it on the ground were a must. They knew that good defensive kicks by Norton players would travel all the way to the Cohasset goal line with the assistance of the wind.

Although Cohasset did control the ball well, a long kick by a Norton defensive back traveled the length of the field to a Norton forward, breaking down the right sideline. Duffy made a great effort to either steal the ball or at least slow down the play but a chip shot by the Norton forward eluded the outstretched arms of Goodman.
